THERE ARE SOME who hold the view that steam may yet play the deciding role in solving the commercial air problem, but there are no signs at present of developments in this connection. Steam, we know, formed the basis of the power used for road vehicles in the earlier days, and it was used by Sir Hiram Maxim in one of the largest and weightiest aeroplanes ever built. In his case, the power of the engines, built by Messrs. Thornycroft, was surprisingly high, but it was hopelessly out of proportion to the weight of the outfit, and could not be employed in its original form in any modern construction. There is, therefore, ample room for research in this connection, and more particularly in view of what has lately been achieved by the Still engine, which combines to some extent the functions of the petrol and steam engines. How far it may be possible to carry this idea remains to be seen, but one thing is pretty certain, the commercial aeroplane will continue to make larger and still larger demands on power, and for this reason inventors would do well to forget if they can all that has already been done, and devote their genius to planning out an entirely new principle which will yield treble the energy of existing engines for less than half their weight and complication.

DECADENCE OF THE PRIZE RING.

THE SPORTIVE GENTLEMEN who went to Toledo last week and who paid as high as $60 for seats expected to see a prize fight. Instead of that they witnessed a farce. The contest was too one-sided to be interesting, so brutal that even the men who paid to witness the exhibition demanded that it be stopped.

And now comes a rumor that the big affair was a financial failure, that Tex Rickard, who specializes in such productions, lost money on his latest venture. If this is really so, it means the finish for the professional pugilist. The fight game has been falling into disrepute year after year. Willard was never popular as a champion. Even if he won the title from his colored opponent a few years ago on the level, it was little of a triumph—Johnson at the time being more or less of a physical wreck. The showing that he made on Friday demonstrated that he had only one qualification for the task that he essayed, and that was the commercial spirit. For the sake of the $100,000 reward he was willing to surrender the honors of the championship and at the same time display the hollowness of his pretensions as a member of the profession.

SOAKED A PARTY.

THE FOLLOWING from the Orillia Packet is respectfully called to the attention of Messrs. Wearing, Gordon, Hall and oher ringmasters in the local political circus:

"The new Liberal Leader" is the text of many articles and homilies in the press on Mr. Hartley Dewart. One recalls the old story of the small boy whose papa, having returned with a well-seasoned second wife, called, "Come here, Willie, and see your new mama." Willie obeyed, and surveyed the bride, furtively but critically. On the first opportunity he drew his father aside and whispered, "They have soaked you, dad. She's not new!"

THE GREAT PEACE DAY.

MOST OF THE RHAPSODIES over peace were taken out in anticipation. The great peace day was November 11 when the Canadians reached Mons, the Germans threw down their weapons, and the cloud lifted, to reveal untold miseries, it is true, but to give the world another chance of redemption. If each person to whom freedom came on that fated autumn morning has not celebrated peace in his heart, he will never do it now, says the Belleville Ontario.

To celebrate peace in the heart was to consecrate life to greater service and to realize that life's valuation had been newly measured by the pouring in of countless souls. The winning of the war was a great effort of the soul, no matter what the materialism of the victory may seem to this or that nation. Each soul won the victory that was in the fight and ready to give all to conquer the perverts of civilization. For each of these souls there was the victory achieved in a struggle to defend the faith that has been handed down to the world in the inspired words of prophets and of the man of Nazareth. The whole theory of life and the struggle toward a life worth living were wrapped in the issue. It was no lack of might that kept the enemy from his victory. This war was all Germany's, figured out on paper. If the world believes in anything, it should gain from the quiet reflection of what peace means, the rock-bedded conviction that there was a great soul force which won this war. We did not know much before about the power of the soul, but some day a student worthy of the subject may make it a simple proposition to us that the Germans lacked the soul of right in this contest and that they lost because they lacked it. If we are to regard the winning of the war simply as a proposition of "more men and more guns" or the added force of some group of individuals called a nation, there is not much of a spiritual victory about it. And the winning of a mere physical victory is not to be regarded as a more glorious thing than the winning of the heavyweight championship at Toledo.

But if each man can sit down and say to himself that his soul was in the fight, that it was not merely a sporting proposition, a heavyweight battle between nations instead of pugilists, it is about the most wonderful thing that can have happened. It is mysterious and sanctified and worthy of the souls of men—this victory that was the smashing of the great body of Goliath by the unconquerable soul of David. And surely it should be a demonstration of the proposition that if one puts his or her soul into a thing, the right of victory is his or hers, no matter how the physical blows may batter down the body.

A SKETCH OF SIR HARRY LAUDER

(Christian Science Monitor.)

Strange to say, Harry Lauder achieved success as a comedian first in Ireland. As an amateur he had appeared before many audiences in Scotland, but it was not until he crossed the Irish Sea and made his debut in Belfast that he firmly established himself on the stage. His initial venture was a song entitled "Callaghan," a name that lent itself to punning. Who that remembers the Harry Lauder of the early days can forget the grotesque figure he cut when he sang:

> Says I to Callaghan, you'll have > to call again,
> To Callaghan to call again, says
> I;
> Says I to Callaghan, you'll have > to call again,
> For you haven't got your

To say that the famous Scotch comedian gained recognition through his effective baritone voice, his remarkable sense of humour, his queer antics, or his clever dancing is to talk idly. No one of these would have sufficed, had he lacked the diligence and care with which he applied himself to every task confronting him. He is a finished artist and as such never overlooks the smallest detail to produce effect, whether it be in the shake of the hand, the twist of the foot, the peculiar makeup, or the choice of song. He knows his audience in many cases better than it knows itself, and, when necessary, does not hesitate to tell it so. Let it ask for "Stop Yer Tickling, Jock," "Tobermory," "I Love a Lassie," and some other familiar song in the same breath, and he will reply sharply: "You don't know what you want, so I'll just tell you a story," and he proceeds to do so. But if it is only a story he is relating he makes it his business to tell it perfectly. He takes his hearers into his confidence, whispers a secret about "Douhy the Baker," or the boy who, caught in the act of taking apples from a tree, declared that he was "only trying to stick on the apples that fell off," and leaves his listeners with the distinct impression that they have been admitted to the chamber of privacy. By such arts he commands attention.

And what versatility he shows when the occasion demands it! Let him sing "I Love to be a Sailor," and he brings to the stage a breath of the "briny deep"; let him depict "Doughy," and the Gallowgate is brought to view; hear him describe "The Weddin' o' Lachie McGraw," and the fun seems never ending. He catches the spirit of a gathering, seizes ridiculous situations, exaggerates them, and never spares himself to present them in the best possible way. Thus he maintains his position as the greatest Scottish comedian, and the first in his line to make himself a world figure.

Credit is due a man of his stamp. He never knew defeat, from the time he left Portobello to work in the flax mills of Arbroath, or to pick his way through hard coal in the light of a cruise, to earn enough to start him on the road to fame as an entertainer. He has always plodded on, despite many obstacles, carried his banner above his head when the battle seemed against him, and held straight to his course until his aims were accomplished. During the war he laboured, without ceasing, to arouse democracy to "carry on" to victory. From early morn till night he sang the praises of the British Army, paid tribute to the "lads of other lands who were fighting for freedom," and gave first place to no one in his efforts to repair some of the loss to which his country, with others, was subjected. His work for incapacitated soldiers still continues. To afford them the means of earning a livelihood is his first object. For this and other services to his country he has been honoured. For all he has done no honour is too high. Of all the honours he has won perhaps he will cherish none more than that which King George has conferred upon him, which places him on the records as Sir Harry Lauder.

THE FARMER NOT A PROFITEER

Several weeks ago the Government at Ottawa moved for the appointment of a special committee of the House of Commons to inquire into the cost of food, necessaries, and house rent, and to make such recommendations as might be deemed appropriate. It would have been a large order if it had been given in the first days of the session. It was an order impossible of complete and satisfactory fulfilment when given in the fourth month of the session. The subect was so broad and the conditions in different parts of the Dominion so varying that no committee could hope to successfully grapple with the question and bring forward intelligent conclusions in so short a time. Nevertheless, much interesting evidence was taken and in some respects the publicity given will probably check whatever tendency there was to exact excessive prices.

Foodstuffs naturally first claimed attention, these being the things the prices of which the most keenly felt by the mass of the people. In a large measure the information given disposes of a popular notion respecting the cost of farm produce. Prices are much highed than in former times. The public know that well and they easily form the opinion that the farmer is making a very large profit. The evidence taken by the committee dealt with this question very fully, and clearly showed that, high as the prices of farm produce were, the increased cost of everything that the farmer used left him at the end of the season with a very modest profit. This certainly is the case as respects the farmer of the Eastern Provinces, engaged in mixed farming. Indeed the testimony of the Government's experts from the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa went to show that the average small farmer, assisted by his family, did not receive more than a modest wage for the labor engaged in producing what he sold.

This much, at least seems to be clear, that will all the high prices he gets, the average farmer cannot be classed among the "profiteers."

A shopkeeper had in his employ a man so lazy as to be utterly worthless. One day, his patience exhausted, he discharged him.

"Will you give me a character," asked the lazy one.

The employer sat down to write a non-committal letter. His effort resulted as follows:

"The bearer of this letter has worked for me one week and I am satisfied."

Her Confidence Shaken

A clergyman tells an amusing story of a worthy vicar in a rural parish, who had waxed eloquent in the interests of foreign missions on Sunday, and was surprised on entering the village shop during the week to be greeted with marked coldness by the old dame who kept it.

On asking the cause the good woman produced a half crown from a drawer, and, throwing it down before him said:

"I marked that coin, and put it in the plate last Sunday and there it is back again in my shop. I knowed well them niggers never got the money."

He Proved It

The stout woman had scurried along the train two or three times, but nowhere was there an empty seat, save in the smoking carriage.

Desperate she gathered herself together and sank breathlessly into the space between two inveterate smokers.

Several times she coughed and looked at each reprovingly. Then one took the hint and sheepishly put away his pipe. But the other continued puffing away at a cigarette.

At last she could stand it no longer.

"Sir," she began frostily, "I was under the impression that most of the men one meets in railway trains were gentlemen."

The man looked up with a start. "My dear madam," he said effusively, "pardon me!"

And he offered her his cigarette case.

TO-DAY'S STORY

And now comes the oldest town in the world—the city of Nakhichevan, at the foot of Mount Ararat in a remote section of Transcaucasia, with a request that the United States be its mandatory under the principality of Russian Armenia. Ptolemy refers to it as Naxuana, and various historians have referred to it as the oldest town in the world.

The Persians razed the town in the fourth century, but it had recovered its prosperity by the end of the tenth century, when it was said to have had a population of 40,000 and to have been an important trade centre for commerce with Persia and Turkey. In 1064 the town was captured by Alp Arslan, the Sultan of the Seljuk Turks, and in the thirteenth century is fell a victim to the Mongol hordes of Genghis Khan.

The tradition that the town was settled by Noah goes back as far as Armenian and Persian tradition can be traced. There is a great mound of earth in the centre of the town which pilgrims still visit as Noah's grave and the spot where he offered sacrifices to God after coming safely out of the ark. Of the palace of the Prince of Azerbaijan there remains a gateway with a Persian inscription flanked by two brick towers, and at a little distance from the gateway is the Tower of the Khans, richly decorated and dating from the twelfth century. There are also the ruins of a large mosque. The town is on the high road to Tabriz and Teheran and has a considerable transit trade.

WOMEN'S WORK AFTER THE WAR

MISS CLAYTON ADDRESSES THE INSTITUTE AT MT. JULIAN.

(Special to The Review)

Miss Clayton, representative of Women's Institutes, was at Mount Julian, on Saturday, June 28th. The meeting was well attended and after the opening exercises and roll call Miss Clayton, began her subject, which was on "Reconstruction after the War."

As the institute has taken an active part in war work, this subject was chosen as a fitting one—peace terms for the world being settled.

After this the lecturer spoke on the care of children, especially in their food and hours of sleep, also on the vote for women in the coming election, when they can show they are on the side of temperance. As Miss Clayton is an honor graduate of Toronto University and a specialist in English besides being a community worker in her own district, we were fortunate in securing her as lecturer on a subject of such vital interest to every one and for our progress in the future in institute work.

The members were also favored with a short address by Mrs. Graham of Plamede on "Loyalty to Canada." Mrs Graham is a member of the Institute and a willing helper in all its work.

The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the speakers. The National Anthem was then sung.

All were glad to welcome to our meeting some visitors from a distance, Mrs. W. G. Matthews, from Toronto; Miss Gladys Shewen of Lakefield, and Mrs. Hollie McCauley, of Douro.

A dainty picnic lunch was served by the ladies and a pleasant time was spent in social talk.

Miss Clayton expressed her pleasure in the beautiful scenery around, the pleasing musical selections given by some of the younger members and the good attendance at the meeting.

Tide, wind and fog drove the steamer Richmond on Bear Island, in the strait of Canso, about one mile from Point Tupper, where she is full of water and a total loss.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

(In this column which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general. All phases of store management—buying, accounting, advertising and retail salesmanship—will be dealt with not theoretically, but by descriptions of methods actually in use by successful merchants.)

How Customers Find New Sales Points

In any retail store which handles a large variety of lines, especially in the store that is departmentalized, the big job cut out for the advertising man is always to try to get the various departments to "pull evenly" so that one department will not be overcrowded with customers while the salespeople in the other departments are standing idle, itching to get a customer within "talking distance."

Such a condition of affairs cannot of course be done away with, but M. C. Maxwell, advertising manager for the Summerfield and Hecht Furniture Company of Detroit, Mich., has proved that with teamwork between the advertising man and the salespeople on the floor it is not such a hard task, after all to have customers come in and ask to see different lines so that all floors and all departments will be kept busy.

"I keep at my finger tips the amount of merchandise on hand in every department," Mr. Maxwell says, "and I know how fast it is moving. The minute things get slack in a department I immediately investigate by having a talk with the salesmen in that department to see what the trouble is—whether or not we have been giving the department enough attention in our advertising and if not, the 'weak brother' gets the lion's share of the advertising space till business picks up. So many furniture stores advertise in a haphazard manner and as a result are playing bedroom furniture when business for a week or more has been brisk in that department while the sales people in the talking machine balcony are dying of ennui because they have no customers to work on. I have our sales people trained now so that the minute an [illegible] gets slack they run to me to suggest something. We put our heads together with the result that we usually get something started pretty quick."

Getting in on the Ground Floor

Mr. Maxwell is really more than an "ad man." He asked and secured permission to go right out on the various floors with the salespeople whenever he has time and sell goods. In this way, he not only gets the frank viewpoint of the sales people as to why this or that line will not sell, how it could be advertised to better advantage, what could be done in a general way to boost the business of some particular department, but he further gets the customers' ideas as to what they would like to see in the store's advertising.

"Yes, I often ask a customer if she reads our advertisements," Mr. Maxwell says, "and what she likes or dislikes about them. You would be surprised to find the number of good tips I get in this way. Take a recent instance. We had just gotten in a new line of combination ranges, and I went out on the floor to have a try at selling them. I got hold of a customer, and got her interested in one of these ranges to the degree that soon we were 'taking it to pieces' and discovering what it really would do.

"I thought I knew everything there was to know about that range. I had read the catalogue describing it from cover to cover. I had studied it with the factory representative who sold it to us. Yet that woman customer who was ignorant of 'merchandising' but who knew more about stoves and cooking than I would ever hope to learn, told me good points about that range that I never knew existed. I must admit that she virtually sold herself. I told the boys about it, we put down all the woman had said, to use in our sales talk hereafter and I went right upstairs and wrote a human-interest ad based upon what the customer had told me. The result was an immediate jump in the sale of ranges."

Summing up his "system" for keeping all lines as nearly as possible in "even" demand, Mr. Maxwell says: "It's simple enough—just keep track of the stock you carry, what's moving steadily and what isn't, get your salesmen to tip you off to how things are going to make regular visits to all departments yourself, size up the situation, then give the advertising space to the lines that need it most."

Athletics to Keep Trim Army Physique

Sport goods dealers will look with favor upon the national campaign in newspapers that has just been launched by the athletic goods manufacturers of the United States under the general direction of the publicity committee on reconstruction.

Basically, the idea is this:

Every soldiers knows that entering the service did him a world of good. He came out of it stronger and better physically. The good work should go on. Men should not return to the old way. Exercise means health.

The space used in three and four columns and the illustrations showing boxing, baseball, football, etc., with larger views of the man as he was before he entered the service and afterward. The comparison tells a very significant story. But hear the message, in part:

"Multitudes of men who entered the army and navy—round-shouldered and hollow-chested and away below par physically—are coming home as conquering heroes—the fittest body of fighting men the world has ever known. They are 50 per cent more snappy and efficient than before. What worked this miracle? Physical exercise in the open air—athletic sports, baseball, football, boxing, wrestling, running and jumping. The important part played by athletics in wining the war is evidenced by the millions of dollars spent for athletic equipment by the government. Let every man, woman and child take this lesson to heart."

It is a campaign to stimulate interest in athletics and athletic goods. Such advertising has a two-fold mission. It will perform a service for the nation and it will sell goods for the dealer and manufacturer, for it is a long-neglected field.

Filipinos Won't Eat Straight-Tailed Fish

An American canning company which contemplates securing distribution in the Philippines had better watch its step in the preparation of labels, states F. E. Herter, advertising manager of the Pacific Commercial Company. "For the wily Chinese has nothing on the Filipino when it comes to prejudices and queer ideas concerning labels.

"Not long ago an American brand of canned fish came on the market here. It was extremely popular with Americans and Europeans and had built up a large sale in the States. But it didn't move at all among the natives, who are extremely fond of fish. Investigation proved that the reason was quite simple—in fact, so simple that it was quite easy to see why it had been overlooked. Upon the label appeared the picture of a fish with its tail extended straight out.

"Now, the Filipino has an inherent dislike of dead fish. He likes his fresh, even when they are canned, and he has for generations believed that any picture of a fish in which the tail is not pointing upward represents a fish which has died from disease. Hence his refusal to purchase the brand in question."

Mrs. Courtney Tells How She Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—"For years I was simply in misery from a weakness and awful pains—and nothing seemed to do me any good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and got relief right away. I can certainly recommend this valuable medicine to other women who suffer, for it has done such good work for me and I know it will help others if they will give it a fair trial."—Mrs. LIZZIE COURTNEY, 108 8th Ave., West, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Why will women drag along from day to day, year in and year out, suffering such misery as did Mrs. Courtney, when such letters as this are continually being published. Every woman who suffers from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, nervousness, or who is passing through the Change of Life should give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. The pair had progressed as far from the depot as the farm implement shop when Burke's tall companion interrupted his reverie caused by the sight of the old town again, the dark hour that lay upon it and the thought of the mission on which he had returned.

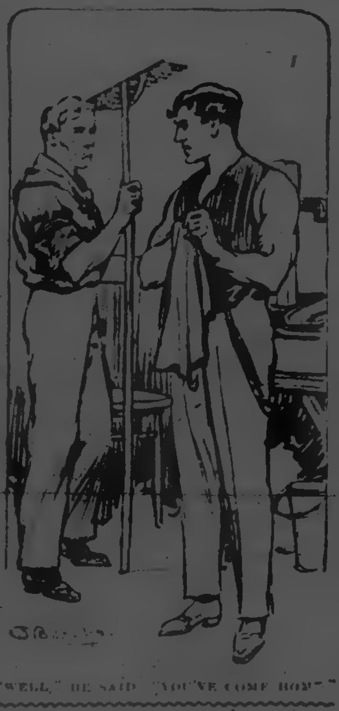
"I thought it was more of a place than this," the fellow slurred, "after hearing you tell about it. Why, the train hardly stopped long enough to let us off."

"They're all alike, these tank towns in the corn belt," Burke snarled, staring resentfully about him—"a green depot, a red elevator, a Main street, a church, a schoolhouse, a cemetery and a few houses. And don't let me forget—a bank!"

"At that I have an idea the place seems a little different to you from the others, Burke," the tall man went on. "Just think—this was your world all the time that you were a kid. Every one of these two story buildings must have loomed like a skyscraper then."

"Cut the comedy, Slim," Burke broke in, halting his hurried pace a bit to express himself more forcibly. "It's all familiar enough. These towns around here haven't had a new brick in them these past ten years. And the folks in them are as changeless as that statue of 'Justice' up there on top of the courthouse—unless it is that some of the kids have grown up. And if they've grown up very much they've pulled out like I did."

They had reached the center of the town—a point where the main street intersected with the street leading from the depot. "That's the joint," he said as he threw his thumb over his shoulder toward the brick building on the corner. The tall man turned to scan the tin sign, whose lettering, "Loans and Deposits," was foreshortened by the slight breeze that swayed it.



"WELL," HE SAID, "YOU'VE COME HOME."

"It looks soft," he answered after a shrewd sizing up of the surroundings, "but it's one thing to crack them these days and another thing to get away. The way we've planned, though, I can't see where there can be a leak."

"Right on this corner is where the show bands used to circle and play," explained Burke, "and from this crossing down there to the park was the distance set off for the 100 yard dashes on the Fourth of July. I won one of them once with my pants rolled up and wearing a pair of white wool socks. They said I was over the age fixed and wouldn't give me the money."

At Burke's initiative the two started on down the street.

"Here's the hotel," he went on in the tone of a guide. "It's where you'll stop. You can look the part of a Chicago drummer all right."

"I suppose there's something in coming back like this that kind of touches a spot down deep," suggested the stranger companion as the two passed the point where the stores left off and the homes began, "even though a fellow's been in the game you have and has come back for what you've come back to do. I know"—

"Spot nothing!" Burke cut in disgustedly. "When we take the 'bumpers' tomorrow morning at this time on that train that just pulled out this town 'll be entirely off the map so far as I am concerned. It's been out of my mind for years as it is. I came back because I knew there was a soft job here, that was all. There's the folks' place, halfway down the block there, where you see the big maple—looks as if it was about ready to tumble over. I'll meet you in the alley there just after dark tonight. You find out what you're supposed to and count on me. So long."

It had been a long time since Burke had tried the door at home in the early morning hours, but he found no lock to prevent his entrance. And he had increased his ability at stealthiness in the years that he had been gone, so that he was easily able to make his room upstairs without being heard.

It was as if he had been gone but a day—the smoky kerosene lamp on the bureau, the varicolored quilt on the sagging bed. Once on being half aroused, he expected to hear the rattle of trucks and the yell of a newsboy, but, instead, there came only the crow of a rooster welcoming the dawn.

He surprised his mother when she was at the task of getting dinner as he stalked half dressed through the kitchen on the way to the sink.

"There, now, can't a fellow come home once in awhile without there being a fuss?" he complained as the woman gave a little startled cry and rushed toward him. "Where's pa?" he inquired, forcing the arms away from about his shoulders. "I'm glad it's nearly dinner time—I'm hungry."

"I wasn't counting on you," his mother answered apologetically, wiping the tears from her eyes and starting for the pantry. Burke noticed that she limped in her walk. She had aged, his mother had.

The door she opened gave a glimpse of the queer shaped and colored dishes such as he had never seen except at home. They were accompanied by an odor that had been peculiar to them too. His mother came back with one of the biggest jars from the row on the shelf—currant jelly.

Burke was wiping his face on the red bordered towel when his father came in. The old man had his rake in his hand and slowly removed his slouch black hat before he spoke.

"Well," he said, "you've come home."

The removal of the hat showed how white his hair had become, and his face was like it in spite of its contact with sun and wind. He came over to wash his gnarled hands in the same basin with his son.

"I've the garden nearly all in again," he continued finally. "I'm going to put in onions again this year. They take lots of work, but if the season turns out just right they bring more than other stuff."

Burke noticed that the table had been [illegible] out until the checkered cloth touched the floor on all sides, but the dishes were the same, the food cooked the same.

"How long you going to stay?" the father inquired at length, pouring his coffee into a saucer.

"Oh, I only 'll be here a day or two," answered Burke. "It's pretty dead here after one is used to Chicago."

"Just a day?" his mother fluttered.

"Still traveling for that Chicago house?" the father interrupted to inquire, eying his son as he cooled the coffee at his lips. "Times ain't been so very good out here."

"I'm still with them," sparred Burke. "It's been a little dull with us, too, lately, but"—he faltered for an instant—"we're expecting quite a big piece of business out this way soon."

"The plaster on the wall back of you's all healed up now. Do you notice it?" the father went on, pointing to Burke to turn around. "You three boys used to lean back so much when you sat together there on the bench that it was always broke off. There wasn't much use fixing it."

The mother entirely ceased with her pretension at eating and nervously fingered the tablecloth.

"Sometimes," she interposed in an effort to appear unaffected by the reference just made—"sometimes your father goes to the hall door and calls to you all upstairs just as if you were all here yet. He calls each of you separate by name. 'It's time for school.'"

Her attempted laugh with the words fell lame, and to keep brave she started in to clear off the dishes.

Burke sought the lounge in the sitting room, the springs of which had been ruined by his acrobatic stunts years before. He could close his eyes and see every unchanged object in the room—the cheap organ, at which his sister had spent many weary hours in practice; the enlarged crayon portrait of his little brother, who had been taken by diphtheria at the time of their quarantine during the awful cold spell, and his father's war relics and encampment badges.

He had planned to get plenty of sleep, but he was surprised to find it dark when he awoke. The lamp in the kitchen was already lighted, and a dog was barking outside. Rubbing his eyes, Burke avoided his mother, busy in the pantry, and found his way into the back yard. He had not counted on the apple tree spreading its branches, but he refrained from cursing when it brushed his face in the path. At the alley he found his partner pacing in impatience.

"It's a fine time to be coming," the waiting man complained sarcastically. "I've been waiting half an hour. What was the matter?"

"I fell asleep," explained Burke, "but I'm awake now—clear awake." He paused a moment before going on. "I'm not in on the deal," he thrust decisively.

His companion's chagrin and surprise could not be concealed even by the darkness. For a moment they stood, two shadowy forms studying each other.

"Now, there's no argument," snapped Burke. "I'm not only not going to pull off this job, but I'm out of the game altogether. I'll shake hands 'goodby' if you want to. I suppose you are disappointed."

Burke caught the tall man's mumbled reply as he started back for the house.

"Disappointed!" he echoed. "I think the agency will be somewhat—after my using up two months' expense money in trying to get evidence on you that would stick."

RINGS OF SATURN.

Mysterious Circles Seem to Be Made of Flimsy Stuff.

Nearly everyone, with the exception of a few unusually earthbound individuals, has felt at some time or other a strong desire to gaze at some of the beauties and wonders of the heavens through a telescope and the one object that all of us wish to see, if, perchance, this desire is to be gratified, is Saturn, whose unusual ring system has so far as we know no counterpart in the sky, writes Isabel M. Lewis in the Electrical Experimenter.

All the planets in the solar system with the exception of the two innermost, Mercury and Venus, are attended by satellites but Saturn alone, has in addition to a large and imposing family nine moons, three distinct rings of great dimensions which form a total mass composed of swarms of minute particles revolving around the planet.

Why Saturn should be the only planet to possess such a system of rings has not yet been explained in an entirely satisfactory manner, depending as it does upon the manner of the origin of the entire solar system which is now agreed could not have followed the course outlined by the Nebular Hypothesis of La Place. The theory of the origin of the solar system and every theory advanced to explain the manner in which the solar system came into existence must satisfactorily explain the cause of this peculiar appendage of Saturn. There is an interesting law known as "Roche's Law," however, named from its investigator, that states that no satellite of a planet can exist intact within 2.44 times the radium of the planet. This limit is spoken of as "Roche's Limit" and applying it to the planet Saturn fall within this limit. It does not necessarily follow from this that the minute particles of which the rings are composed are the shattered remains of one small satellite but rather that they are the material from which a satellite might have been formed were it not so close to the planet. Within "Roche's Limit" the mutual attraction of the various particles for each other that would tend eventually to gather them into one body is overcome by tidal forces that arise from such close proximity to the huge planet. The stress and strain of such forces is so great that no grouping of particles can take place. This explains, possibly, why the rings continue to exist in their present condition. The total mass of the rings is known to be very small, for they do not disturb the motions of any of the nearer and smaller satellites, though tiny Mimas, six hundred miles in diameter, is only thirty-one thousand miles beyond the outer edge of the outer ring.

An interesting observation was made a year or so ago of the passage of the rings of the planet between us and a star. Though the light of the star was diminished to one-fourth of its normal brightness when the rings passed before it, at no time was its light entirely eclipsed by any of the particles. It was computed that if the diameters of any of the individual particles had amounted to as much as three or four miles the star would have been temporarily eclipsed. An upper limit for the size of the moonlets was thus obtained. The average diameter of the particles is probably much less than three miles.

Peculiar "Adornment."

Widows in the Hawaiian islands, up to very recent years, had the names of their dead husbands tattooed on their tongues. Egyptian women today have their lips pricked blue for becomingness. And in Yezo, the northernmost island of the Japanese archipelago, the fashion demands that girls shall greatly enlarge the apparent size of their mouths by a tattooing in red about the lips.

GIVES WOMEN THE RIGHT TO SIT IN PARLIAMENT

Premier Borden Introduces Election Bill in House—Western Members Criticize the Measure.

Ottawa, July 7.—The bill to provide machinery for bye elections was introduced by Sir Robert Borden in the House. Sir Robert said at present the only machinery was the War Times Election Act. There was no adequate machinery available and hence the necessity for this bill. The Government had decided to declare demobilization ended August 1 when the War Times Election Act would automatically cease to be operative. In some provinces no lists were available to hold bye-elections, notably in Ontario, British Columbia and Manitoba.

The bill also provided to give the women full franchise and the right to sit in Parliament. Sir Robert said that under the act in provinces where the lists were not more than a year old, they would be accepted with provisions to add names of women.

In urban communities of one thousand or more there would be personal registration to be followed by courts of revision presided over by revising officers appointed by judiciary.

Strong Opposition.

There was strong criticism of the clause in the Bill providing for Bye-elections today which declares that for the purpose of the franchise, the nationality of a person, as it was at the birth of such person, shall be deemed incapable of being changed, or of having been changed, merely by reason or in consequence or change of allegiance or naturalization of any other person, or otherwise than by naturalization of such first mentioned person. "Exception is made, however, in the case of women born on the North American Continent.

Mr. Ernest Le Pointe protested that the clause was a discrimination against women who had married naturalized British subjects and by their marriage had themselves become British subjects.

Mr. White, of Victoria, Alta., said the clause would disfranchise a thousand women relatives of soldiers among the Scandinavian population of Alberta. He gave instances of the operation of the war-time elections act, declaring that mothers and sisters of soldiers who were of foreign birth had been cut off the electoral lists.

Mr. White said in the west they wanted to go back to the old free Canada. If there were people of alien birth who were not loyal then they should get rid of them, but if they were good citizens, "Let us have one law for all."

Calls It Blunder.

Dr. Clark said that disfranchisement of certain women was a blunder of the worst description. He thought it was paltry. The Government had done big things in the war and should be prepared to do big things in the period of reconstruction. The clause was unjust on the face of it. It was the only way possible to disfranchise the women by what amounted to an act of denaturalization.

Dr. Clark could see nothing to defend the clause.

WHAT FATE FOR HUN WARSHIPS?

ALLIES HOLD VARIETY OF OPINIONS WITH REGARD TO MATTER.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 7.—As the situation stands now, Japan and the United States are understood to favor the breaking up or sinking of the remaining German warships. Great Britain approves the plan to break them up while Italy agrees to their destruction conditionally, but if this plan is not carried out it insists upon having its share of the vessels, in case they are divided among the powers. France opposes the destruction of the vessels and desires their distribution. Some of the smaller powers, notably Poland, approves the plan to destroy the vesels.

PRICES LIKELY TO REMAIN HIGH

COMMITTEE SAYS THEY WILL NOT RETURN TO PREVIOUS LEVEL.

Ottawa, July 7. Though a Board of Commerce has been created to get after profiteering of all sorts, and some other tentative suggestions are made to alleviate the present high cost of living, the final report tabled in the House of Commons Saturday night shows that the Cost of Living Committee members believe, after hearing all the evidence, that all these things are but palliatives, that no real influence can be exerted on the situation, except by getting the warriors and war workers back into productive activity, and by getting the consuming public to live frugally and use thrift.

Never Back to Old Level

They believe that the war only accelerated the steady rise in the price of commodities, and that probably never again will this or any other country get back to the levels before the war. There will be changes but whether up or down, the committee does not know. In addition to the effect of the scarcity of material and the destruction due to war, the higher prices are due to a general money depreciation caused by the expansion in currency and credit. In other words, the doubling of the amount of money and the lessening of the quantity of commodities gave the resultant higher price.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

SAYS OFFICERS ARE ALL RIGHT

ANOTHER PHASE OF DISPUTE BETWEEN CROWN ATTORNEY AND COUNTY

J. W. Mallon, of Toronto, inspector of legal offices for Ontario, came to Peterborough last week at the request of a special committee of the County Council to investigate the dispute between that body and Crown Attorney Hatton with regard to the office quarters offered the latter at the Court House. Mr. Mallon decided that the offices promised were adequate for the purpose.

It now remains to be seen whether Mr. Hatton will remove to the Court House or begin another suit against the County to compel the payment of his present office rooms on George street.

WITH STOLEN CAR AND $75 OF HIS EMPLOYER'S MONEY.

Frank J. Duffy appeared this morning before Police Magistrate Dumble on two charges of theft, to each of which he pleaded guilty and was remanded for a week. He had been employed as a ticket seller by Jos. Shimkus, the wrestler with Polhill's Shows, and Saturday evening he took $75.27 of his employer's money, stole an automobile that was standing on the grounds, and made his way to Banks' garage on Charlotte street. Here he expended $2 on gasoline, and had inquired the way to Toronto, when his further flight was ended by the appearance of City Fireman John G. Drummond. A reward of $15 had been offered by Jos. Shimkus for the return of his money, and this was paid over this morning.

The prisoner, who states that his home is in Greenspoint, S. C., had laid his plans for a quick get-away, and had taken the key out of the only other car on the grounds at the time so that he would not be followed. The car, which belongs to Jos. Fontaine, was returned none the worse for wear to its owner.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.
As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 Years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $1495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada): "There is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

Our reputation for fair dealing and reliable goods, coupled with the De Laval record of service and durability, has made the De Laval Cream Separator the leader in this community.

NO farmer is rich enough to feed high-priced butter to his hogs or his calves in partially skimmed milk.

It's a waste of money and food that your pocketbook, your neighbors, your country, all condemn.

But it's a waste that is going on today wherever an inferior or half-worn-out cream separator is being used, or the wasteful "gravity" method.

Why not put a stop to this needless waste with a De Laval Cream Separator?

You can't afford to do this

There is no other separator that can compare with the De Laval in clean skimming, capacity, ease of operation, freedom from repairs, and durability. It's the world's greatest cream saver.

ORANGE LODGES ATTEND SERVICE AT PARK STREET

About five hundreds members of the various Orange Lodges in Peterborough, and the surrounding districts gathered at Victoria Hall, and, headed by the Salvation Army Band, marched to the Park Street Baptist Church, last night. The Ladies' Orange Lodge, the True Blue Lodge, The Royal Scarlet Chapter, and the Royal Black Knights of Ireland, No. 261, The Juvenile Orange Lodge, No 50, L.O.L. No. 80, and L.O.L. No. 1175, of Peterborough were all out in practically full force. In addition there were the Juvenile Orange Lodge of Nassau, and a good representation from L.O.L. of Downey's Corners and L.O.L. No. 2440 of Byersville, besides several members from Lakefield, Keene and other points, within the County of Peterborough.

Among the more prominent members from outside were Past County Master, John Waldie and Past District Master Arthur Holden from Downey's Corners; Past Masters Neil Porter and George Simpson of Byersville; Past District Master, Bert Lockington of Nassau and Deputy County Master, Ephraim Brown.

The sermon, which was preached by Rev. Dugald Brown, was based on the Constitution of the Orange Order. The clear-cut, outspoken advice given by the pastor was very much appreciated by the members of the various lodges.

On their return to Victoria Hall, a vote of thanks was moved by Past County Master John Waldie, seconded by Past District Manager, George Porter, to the ministers, the officials and the choir of Park Street Baptist Church, the resolution being heartily and unanimously carried.

Halifax citizens have been told to boil the drinking water owing to the number of cases of paratyphoid.

Three Halifax young men, Landry, Simpson and Aylette, have confessed to robbing houses of clothing.

Chartered Accountants, July 19

The annual meeting and convention of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario will be held in the Council room of the Board of Trade on Saturday, July 19. Mr. W. R. Morris, F.C.A., is president of the institute and in courtesy to him the convention a year ago voted to meet in Peterborough.

"Peterborough is complimented," said Mr. Morris. "For the past ten years the convention has been held in Toronto and, I take it, the selection of Peterborough by the institute is a real tribute to the growing prestige of our city."

The annual conventions of the Provincial Institute of Chartered Accountants brings together a representative body of specialists in financial, industrial and commercial accounting and auditing from all parts of Ontario, especially from the large centres of business. No class of men is more closely related to or better informed about the development of trade and manufacturing in the Dominion.

A Reception Committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. John Crane, and composed of Mayor Duncan, A. Lawrence Killaly and John J. Turner met with Mr. Morris in the Board of Trade rooms. George Macdonald was added to the committee. It was planned to entertain the members of the convention after their session from 9 till 12 o'clock. A trip about the city will be arranged so that the visitors may see the industrial and residential sections.

HUNTER STREET TENT WAS FILLED TO LIMIT LAST NIGHT

Revival Services by Evangelist Kennedy Steadily Growing in Interest—Musical Program Still a Feature.

The largest audience that has yet attended the services of the Union Evangelistic Campaign, being conducted in the big tent on Hunter street, was present last night when the tent was crowded to overflowing. From start to finish the meeting was full of interest, and at the close ten went forward and made a confession of Christ. These make about thirty-five conversions that have been recorded to date, and this week it is expected will see a marked increase in the number. The musical features last evening included a duet by Miss Sugen and Miss D. Rathbone which was very effective, and a solo by Mr. Mulligan. Mr. Mulligan's work in leading the singing of the hymns is proving quite a feature of the campaign. This evening the singing will be led by the members of the Mark Street Church choir. Tomorrow evening members of Trinity Church choir will direct the singing.

Evangelist H. D. Kennedy chose as his subject last evening "Chickens Come Home to Roost." He preached a powerful sermon on the text, "Be sure your sin will find you out." By reference to numerous Bible characters he showed how attempts to cover over sin were later exposed and punishment followed. In addition he told numerous incidents from every day life to prove that the same law works today as it has worked through the ages. One telling point he made was that people's actions are recorded in their own memories and that when the day of judgment comes all the Lord will need to do will be to examine the memories of those who stand before Him to obtain a complete record of all the actions of their lives.

This evening the subject will be, "The Easiest Way To Be Saved." Tomorrow night's service will take the form of a Hallelujah supper, to which no one need bring any baskets. At the close of the Saturday evening service Christians present were invited to bear testimony to the fact that they knew they were saved. A great many did so.

Yesterday a special announcement was made in a number of Sunday schools of the city inviting the teachers and the pupils of 'teen age classes to attend this evening's service. The address will be one appropriate for young people, but with a message for older people as well. Splendid meetings are expected during the balance of the week. It is not known at present just how long the campaign will last, as if the interest increases it may be extended past next Sunday night.

SPARKS FROM KENNEDY'S ANVIL.

Your sin is not done with you when you are done with it.

It will sooner or later compel the doer to know the evil done, is evil to the one that did it.

Sin is a detective, it is not a case of a man arresting his sin, but sin arresting the man.

You cannot run from your sin, any more than you can from your shadow.

You may flee from the past, but you cannot alter it.

Your past always stands as you have made it.

You cannot separate any act of your life from your life, any more than you can throw a stone out of the reach of gravitation.

Remorse means to bite backward, to gnaw one's self, a quarreling going on inside of a man.

The fact that a man will often confess his crime, through the law does not catch him, proves this.

Death is a policeman come to bring the soul to judgment.

Earth's mistakes cannot be rectified in eternity.

Every thought, word and act is written down in the indellible ink of eternity.

Your sin will pursue you until you come out of your hiding place and confess it, and accept mercy.

If you won't do that, it will bring you to judgment.

Nowhere in the Bible do we find an excuse for sin.

Find your sin out and confess it, before it finds you out.

If you do, God will blot it out of the Book of His Remembrance.

According to Jesus, no loss that could come to the body, is to be compared to the loss of the soul when we sin against God.

SUNDAY SERVICES AT S. A. TEMPLE

COL. BELL OF ARMY TRAINING COLLEGE HERE OVER WEEK-END.

The visit of Colonel Bell, principal of the Salvation Army Training College in Toronto, to the local corps during the week-end was a success in every way. The colonel was accompanied by his wife who ably seconded all his efforts in the interests of his audiences.

Colonel Bell is a fluent and forceful speaker, and his addresses both in the open-air services in the street and on the park, and also in the inside meetings were listened to with great interest by the large audiences who attended all the services.

During the week-end several candidates who intend entering the Training College, which is under the colonel's control, took part in the services.

A number of members who enlisted for service overseas in 1915 returning during the last week, and these were given a hearty welcome back to the corps. In the morning service the colonel made reference to his son who enlisted in an English regiment and went through the whole war, being wounded three times. He then asked all those who had gone either to England or France to rise, and in the name of the friends at home, welcomed these men back.

Altogether, the day was one of great interest and blessing to those who took part and attended the service.

The chamber of commerce of Sarnia has sent an invitation to the Prince of Wales to visit that city.

The crops in Saskatchewan are not so good, but the reports from Manitoba and Alberta are very promising.

EX-SOLDIER WAS KILLED BY TRAIN

FRANK PEARSON HAD BEEN HOME FROM OVERSEAS TWO MONTHS.

Frank Pearson of Haliburton was fatally injured at Jones' siding, three miles east of Omemee, on the G. T. R. Saturday morning. He was employed as a brakeman on a freight train in charge of Conductor J. McElroy, and was engaged in coupling cars at the siding when he was caught and the train passed over his body, mangling it terribly.

He was one of the first to enlist in the Canadian army with the 45th Regiment of Victoria County and returned only two months ago after nearly five years' service.

Germany Spurned Freedom.

Before the war, says Prof. William Stearns Davis, who contributes two new chapters of his historical study of "The Roots of the War" to the Century,—before the war—

"This people of Germany was admittedly one of the predominant units of the human race. In almost every form of cultural achievement it had either surpassed or crowded the other leaders hard. Music, art, philosophy, theology, the sciences, whether applied or theoretical — it competed or triumphed in all. But in one great form of human endeavor the Germans had not triumphed, they had never played their due part in the human struggle for political liberty. It is possible to find historical reasons for this in the failure of the medieval empire and the friction between the multifarious petty princes. But the fact remained. Britain had written very many chapters in the 'Golden Book of Liberty;' so had the city republics of medieval Italy, the mountain cantons of Switzerland, and the stout burgher-communities of Holland and Flanders. Even in France under the absolute monarchy the memory of the medieval 'States-General' had never been forgotten, and was to revive magically in that year of wonder, 1789. Germany had added no chapters to the story. Her heroes had been either valorous paladins and princes like Frederick Barbarossa, or scholars and master-theologians like Martin Luther. The numerous 'free cities' of her later Middle Ages had been free only as respected the control of some outside elector or duke. Within they had usually been governed by a privileged class of burghers or patricians, with little enough share at most times for the common people."

No Ice Age.

One often hears of "the glacial period" or "the ice age" of the earth, but strictly speaking, this expression is not correct. It is now established beyond all reasonable doubt that this planet has experienced not one, but a great many, glacial periods. Evidence has been found which proves that the latest or Pleistocene glacial epoch had several important subdivisions and that all of the present continents have experienced glacial epochs at different ages. Great ice sheets were formed at different periods back to the Proterozoic age, that is, the age of the oldest known sedimentary rocks, a great many million years ago.

He Knew.

"Did the doctor know what you had?"

"Seemed to have had a pretty accurate idea. He asked for ten dollars and I had eleven dollars."

Matters Not to Be Discussed.

Of this fact we may all rest assured. The quieter we keep about ourselves, our affairs, pleasant or otherwise, the better it will be for us. Time is at a premium these days, and if we hope to surmount our difficulties, no matter how trying they may be, we must wisely learn to keep each and every one of those problems in the background.

Fruit That Produces Oil.

A fruit containing a large percentage of oil has been discovered in the region of Torreon, Mex., and is known by the name of chichopoxtle. Experiments show that 25 per cent of its contents consists of oil of great value in industrial pursuits requiring a lubricant of high quality. It is proposed to introduce the cultivation of this fruit upon a large scale.

Rests With Man to Accomplish.

The door of opportunity is never closed to the man who has the desire to realize his ambitions and the will to do so. And to the one who believes that the world is a fair field, there is no closed door. It but awaits the man who will lift the latch and walk through without questioning what awaits him.

THEATRICAL

HOW FAMOUS STAR GOT LEADING MAN

CONSTANCE TALMADGE IN "GOOD NIGHT PAUL" AT GRAND TONIGHT.

In "Good Night, Paul!" the rollicking farce success pictured by Select, starring Constance Talmadge this charming young star is again supported by Norman Kerry as her leading man. Kerry's first opportunity to play leads with Miss Talmadge came in her earlier Select picture, "Up the Road with Sallie," in which she was also presented by Lewis J. Selznick. Concerning that association there is an interesting story of chance encounter, but let Constance Talmadge tell it in her own words:

"A few months ago," said the pretty young Select star, "while I was working on 'The Honeymoon in the East,' our company had to go to Niagara Falls to take some honeymoon scenes. On the train I saw Earle Foxe, who was my leading man at the time, talking to a handsome young chap. By and by Mr. Foxe introduced him to me, but Mr. Kerry was very serious and preoccupied, for he was on his way to Canada to enlist in the Royal Flying Corps, and he hardly saw me."

But, as it happened, Mr. Kerry did not become an aviator. His father died, and the young man, who thus became the sole support of his mother and sister, returned to motion pictures, in which he had already appeared with signal success. Later he came to California, where he played the leading male role in "Amarilly of Clothesline Alley." Here we shall let Miss Talmadge take up the story again.

"I happened to go over to a neighboring studio," she said, "and there, large as life, and perhaps larger, was the young fellow I had met on the train to Niagara. It took me a moment to recognize him, but when I did I stood by and watched him work for a while. I liked his acting very much, and spoke to my manager about him. 'That' the man I went for the lead in my next picture,' I said."

And that is how Norman Kerry came to play the lead opposite Constance Talmadge in "Up the Road with Sallie." His performance in that picture was of such a high order that he was selected, with Harrison Ford, to be her leading man in her succeeding Select picture, "Good Night, Paul!" which will be shown today, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Grand Theatre.

Plot Of Play At Grand Tonight

"GOOD NIGHT PAUL" IS A RECORD OF FEMININE INTRIGUE.

Constance Talmadge comes to the Grand today, Tuesday and Wednesday as the star of "Good Night Paul!" her latest Select picture, in which she is presented by Lewis J. Selznick. It was adapted for the screen by Julia Crawford Ivers from the musical comedy success of the same name by Roland Oliver and Charles Dickson. This is the laugh provoking vehicle in which Ralph Herz recently appeared in the larger cities; the photoplay has of course been considerably modified for Miss Talmadge's use, but the screen version is even funnier than the stage presentation and may well be called a bonanza of laughter, with a hearty giggle in every foot of film.

Matilda, whose role is interpreted by Constance Talmadge, is the young wife of Richard Landers (Norman Kerry); he and his partner, Paul Boudeaux (Harrison Ford), are in financial straits with their credit exhausted. Paul's uncle, Batiste, announces that he is coming on to visit his nephew; if he finds him married he will settle $50,000 on him for perpetuating the family name.

Paul refuses to take the obvious remedy, for he is a confirmed woman hater, and things look dark indeed, but when the uncle arrives Matilda tells him she is Paul's wife. The old provincial is delighted — too much so, in fact, for after he gives Paul the promised donation he decides to prolong his stay from a few hours to a month. It becomes necessary to continue the deception, of course, and Matilda's ingenuity is taxed to the limit, but she gets through the trying time successfully.

In the closing reel Uncle Batiste finds a helpmate and even Paul is paired off with a charming nurse, while Matilda makes full confession as she returns to the arms of her "lawful wedded husband." And the uncle is so wrapped up in his new found happiness that he forgives all the young folks and joy reigns over all.

A DOZEN YEARS AFTER

A Story of West Point Flirtations

By EUNICE BLAKE

Captain Alexander Ainsworth, after a dozen years' absence from the United States Military academy at West Point, was ordered there as instructor in artillery. He was twenty when he was graduated. Now he was approaching middle life. The day after his arrival, not yet having entered upon his duties, he strolled about, recalling here and there scenes and incidents of his cadet life.

Mounting to old Fort Put, he mused: "What a day that was when I came up here with Jennie! How my heart warmed toward her! I can smell this minute the delicate perfume there was about her. I can feel the silken softness of her sleeve, the sweet touch of her fingers when mine came in contact with them. Those beautiful blue eyes! How confidingly, how lovingly they looked into mine!"

Descending, he crossed the plain and soon found himself on Flirtation walk. Again he mused: "It was right here in this little recess when with Belle I stopped to tell her that I loved her. She knew what was coming and looked out on the river and the hills beyond, waiting for me to speak. I told her that, though we had met but a week before, I had come to love her with an unquenchable flame. I remember that at the time the word unquenchable seemed to me very well chosen. I was then a yearling with nearly three years of study before me. What mattered it? We were in the summer encampment with little to do but make love to the girls who had sprung up all over the Point like daisies in the sweet springtime. In September they vanished, and we were again grinding away at our books."

He returned to the plain and strolled past the monument to the West Point graduates who had fallen in the war and, standing on the declivity directly north of it, looked out upon that view up the Hudson river, as beautiful if not more beautiful than any in America.

"It was right here that I stood with Alice Ward on that moonlight night of the day I graduated. My cadet days were over, and I was an officer in the army. But the boy had not yet all got out of me. I had been sitting on the porch of the hotel with Alice. There were a dozen other couples there, and to escape the clatter of tongues I proposed a walk in the moonlight. We came here and stood looking out on this very view, though then instead of flashing in the sun it was mellowed by moonlight. I should have known better this time. I was of age. I did know better, but I failed to act on that knowledge. I drew her to me and kissed her."

The blood of shame mounted to his cheek when he remembered that he had told her she was the only girl he had ever loved.

"But," he added, "though I did not know it at the time, it was the truth."

He turned away from the scene before him, taking the path that led around by the officers' quarters. On the way he met a lady with a boy five or six years old, the child running about chattering to his mother. The lady was the wife of one stationed at the Point and, recognizing an officer by his uniform, bowed to him. He doffed his hat and said:

"I am."

"You are Captain Ainsworth?"

"I am."

"I have heard of your coming. We keep posted on the changes as they occur. You relieve Lieutenant Waters, I believe?"

"I do."

"West Point can never change, though its buildings may. I have been visiting old haunts."

"Indeed!"

"Yes. I first visited Fort Put. I remembered being up there once with a very lovely girl."

"She was"—

"Her name was Jennie— Upon my word, my memory is getting shaky!"

"Was it Marston?"

"Marston! Certainly! How names do fail us when we try to recall them! Did you know her?"

"She has always been an intimate friend of mine."

"Is she married?" asked Ainsworth, assuming an anxious look.

"Oh, yes; she's married, but it required some time for her to get over that visit to Fort Put!"

"You don't mean it! That was the episode of my life. But I was nothing but a plebe."

"Jennie was very young too. She is happily married now."

"My husband accuses me of loving her more than him."

"You are"—

"I was Jennie Marston. I am now Mrs. Farnum."

There was a twinkle in her eye. A shamefaced look came over Ainsworth, and he smiled feebly.

"Don't worry about it, captain. These cadets are doing the same thing you boys did a dozen years ago, and cadets will keep on doing it as long as the academy lasts. Come and dine with us this evening. I wish you to meet my husband."

* * * * * * *

A dance for the graduating class and their friends was in progress. Captain Ainsworth was among the onlookers. He stood behind the chair of a lady. A young girl of perhaps sixteen came to her to ask some question and called her auntie. Later in the evening Captain Ainsworth was introduced to the aunt.

"No, I am a visitor from New York. I came to chaperon my niece. I know how girls enjoy West Point, for I was here when a girl myself. I remember my experiences here with great pleasure—that is, all except one. I met my first disappointment here. A cadet was attentive to me. I listened to his flattering words. One day he asked me to stroll down Flirtation walk with him. I was persuaded. He stopped at a little nook part way down. He told me"—

"Don't go any further, I beg you," said the captain. "You are the second person I have met since I have returned to the Point whom I asked to be"—

"You are Fred Nolan?"

"No; I am Alec Ainsworth. Aren't you Edith Andrews?"

"No; I'm Belle Harwood."

"Oh!"

"It is only a case of another cadet and another girl. Doubtless there are dozens of proposals on that walk every year. I wonder if any of them ever results in marriage?"

One bright moonlight night Captain Ainsworth and a party of his friends were trying by the uncertain light to read on the monument on the northern end of the plain at West Point the names of officers who were killed in the war between the states. Several others came up, and there was a general introduction.

"I am looking," said a lady to Captain Ainsworth, "for the name of my cousin who was killed at Antietam."

The captain started. He had heard that voice before and had never forgotten it. He told the lady that if she would give him the officer's name he would try to find it for her, but when she told him he exclaimed:

"He was in my class. You can't see the letters at night, for they are in shadow. Tomorrow you will find the name without any trouble."

When the others passed on Captain Ainsworth and this lady lingered.

"I remember," said the captain, showing emotion in his voice, "standing on this very spot twelve years ago, when I was a cadet, with a lovely girl who was a visitor here. The scenery was the same as it is now and was lighted, as now, by the moon. I had just passed from cadet to officer and was to leave West Point the next day.

"I had passed four years in the academy and every summer had taken on a new love. In passing from cadet to lieutenant I had my last affair of the heart, and though I was not aware of it I was taking on a love that I would never be able to throw off. Under the impression that it was a passing affair like the others I failed during the following few months even to write to the girl in question, assuming that she considered it, as I did, a mere West Point flirtation. When I learned that I had met the only girl I would ever love it was too late. I dared not reopen the matter seriously with one I had so shamefully neglected."

Doubtless this was the only truth the captain had ever spoken on the subject in question, though after his graduation he had told no more lies.

"I, too," said the lady beside him, "had a similar experience. My cousin being a cadet, I came with others of our family nearly every summer while he was at the academy. I soon learned what meaning to attach to an avowal of love from a cadet. What it is now I don't know; then it was one of his privileges which were not considered binding.

"The last summer I came here I received a proposal from one of the graduating class. At the time I considered it one of those West Point affairs of flirtation rather than of the heart. I never expected to hear again from the cadet, who went to a post in the far west, and I never did. But I admit that I found, like you, that for once in my West Point experience I had flown too near the candle. My [illegible] has been winged. I have never wed."

There was silence for a time, after which Captain Ainsworth spoke.

"Since it was the man's part, not yours, to make good his words you are in no way to blame. If he is excusable it is that, though he had no right to play with edged tools, he was living in a little world where they were played with. Being guilty myself, as he was, I would gladly atone for his fault. Let me stand in his stead and you will make me a happy man."

She not resisting, he drew her to him and kissed her as he had kissed her long before.

And there, a dozen years after a mock love affair on the part of two triflers, on the very same spot, under the same moon, they plighted their troth.

Later it was announced that Captain Ainsworth had met an old flame who was visiting West Point and the couple were to be married in the autumn.

Ancient Medium of Exchange.

Among some ancient tribes oxen and sheep served as a medium of exchange, ten sheep being reckoned equivalent to one ox. The Latin word for money is pecunia, and it is derived from the pecus (cattle), showing that pecunia (money) meant property in cattle.

Beantown Note.

Eph Trittipo, prominent livery stablist, has got a new pair of glasses, as he expects to attend the "Follies" up to Indianapolis tonight. Eph had quite a time deciding whether to get eye glasses or nose glasses.—"Beantown Bugle" Correspondence in Indianapolis Star.

Why Spinsters.

The reason that unmarried ladies are called spinsters is that formerly women were prohibited from marrying until they had spun a complete set of bed linen. If the same rule prevailed today what a falling off there would be in the marriage rate!

Eh? What?

FORTUNE SMILES ON JACK DEMPSEY

OFFERED $10,000 A WEEK FOR 12 WEEKS IN VAUDEVILLE.

Toledo, July 7.—In the first statement he has made since becoming the heavyweight champion of the world, Jack Dempsey announced that he would draw the color line. He will pay no attention to negro challengers, but will defend his title against any white heavyweight as the occasion demands. Dempsey said he would not fight again for seven or eight months at least.

The challenger and his manager, Jack Kearns, left for Cincinnati, where Dempsey will open a vaudeville engagement. It is stated that he is to receive $7000 for his week's appearance. Kearns received several telegrams making theatrical offers to the new champion.

The largest of these offers came from a vaudeville agent in Los Angeles, who offered the champion $10,000 a week for twelve weeks. Kearns stated that this sounded very attractive and Dempsey may accept the offer. The tour will include all the leading cities on the Pacific coast.

After Dempsey finishes his engagement in Cincinnati he will accept a week's engagement with a circus showing through the middle west. After that he may accept the coast offer.

Promoter Tex Rickard has asked the Army, Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control to make an investigation of the charges made by W. Roach that Rickard and Willard were in league in arranging the bout to "double cross the public."

MRS. JESS WILLARD SAW HER HUSBAND DEFEATED

Sorry to See Him Lose but Glad He is Through With the Prize Ring

Toledo, July 7. There is one woman in Toledo tonight happy because Jess Willard is no longer world's heavyweight champion. She is the wife of the vanquished title holder and mother of his five children. She left them at their home in Lawrence, Kansas, came to Toledo unannounced last night, and, with Willard's attorney, occupied a seat in the $50 section this afternoon while her husband was being battered to defeat. No one in the huge crowd, except the champion himself, knew she was there.

When the bruised and battered giant of the ring was brought to the home he had occupied in Toledo's exclusive residential district, Mrs Willard was there, eager to care for his wounds. She put him on a davenport and sat at his side, applying soothing iced cloths to his closed eye.

Mrs. Willard left the sun-baked arena after the towel was cast into the ring at the start of the fourth round, while the beaten champion was taken to the Casino, his training camp, for a moment, where he was bathed and first aid given his injuries.

" … sorry that Jess was beaten but I am truthfully say I am happy that he's no longer champion," Mrs. Willard said. "It means, now, that we shall be able to live in peace. Jess will become a private citizen again. It was the second boxing contest I had ever witnessed, and I do not want to witness any more. I shall be happy when I can take Jess back home to our children."

Although the fight was over before 4.30 o'clock, Willard did not motor to his home until an hour and a half later. He said he did not recover from the effects of the left hook that Dempsey landed early in the first round, until perhaps an hour after he left the ring.

"That was the blow that started me on defeat," Willard said. "I felt physically able to continue but my head was not clear and my eye was closed and I realized it would have been useless for me to attempt to box while half blind.

"Dempsey is a remarkable hitter. It was the first time that I had ever been knocked off my feet. I have sent many 'birds' home in the same bruised condition that I am in now and I know how they feel. I sincerely wish Dempsey all of the luck possible and hope that garners of the riches that go with the championship. I have had my fling at the title. I was champion for four years. And I want to assure you that they'll never have to give a benefit for me. I have invested the money I have made."

When the beaten champion motored to his home with Ray O. Archer, his business manager, and his sparring partners, the porches adjoining the Willard house were alive with women dabbing their eyes with handkerchiefs.

"It seems as if there has been a death in the neighborhood," one of them said.

"Well, I tried it once too often," was the greeting Willard gave them.

The champion had a turkish towel draped over his head to obscure his bruised face. He does not expect to leave Toledo for three or four days.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH WILBERT HAYES

Deep was the sadness that shadowed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, 219 Park street, yesterday morning at 6 o'clock, when the Angel of Death entered and claimed for his victim their talented son, Doctor Joseph Wilbert Hayes, aged 30 years, after an illness of a year and six months' duration. Truly, it was such as he the poet had in mind when he wrote:

"Ah, yes; beneath the church-yards grassy mound

During his short and eventful career, he distinguished himself by his brilliancy of intellect and stirling qualities of character. Graduating in medicine at Toronto University in 1915, he spent the following year as house surgeon in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto. He was then appointed assistant biologist at the City Hospital, New York City, returning from there to assume the responsibility of assistant surgeon at St. Michael's Hospital at Toronto. Dr. Hayes was classified as the youngest surgeon in Canada, being only twenty-nine at the time, and those who know were not slow to recognize in him the latent qualities of a great career as citizen and physician. Many people will learn of his death with sincere regret, and great sympathy is extended the sorrowing family. Both parents survive, two sisters, Alice and Marion, at home, and four brothers, Carl V. Vernon, J. William M. at home, and Cecil F., still in England.

The funeral will leave the family residence, 219 Park street, on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, and thence proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

FAREWELL ADDRESS TO REV. AND MRS. WHATTAM

Mark Street Congregation Take Leave of Popular Pastor and His Wife.

On the occasion of the annual lawn social held on Friday evening of last week on the grounds of the Mark Street Methodist Church parsonage opportunity was taken to express in tangible form the deep appreciation of the congregations of the Mark Street Circuit, which includes Bethel and Salem, toward the pastor and his wife, Rev. R. A. and Mrs. Whattam, for the efforts put forth among the people of the circuit during the past four years. To Mr. Whattam was presented a beautiful set of books, fifty volumes, "The Harvard Classics," to Mrs. Whattam a handsome music cabinet and tray, and to Miss E. Whattam, the pastor's sister, a gold-mounted parasol. The recipients were taken completely by surprise, and it was with great difficulty that they found words to express even in small measure their feelings toward the congregations for their kind remembrances. An address, expressing appreciation for past labors and regret at parting, and extending best wishes for the future in their new field, was read by Miss Sargent.

The Address.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Whattam:

We feel that these closing words of appreciation should be addressed to both of you, considering how united your service has been on our behalf. We take this opportunity of expressing to you in some slight degree our appreciation of your faithful services and also our sincere regret that the ties which have bound us together so closely during the past four years are so soon to be broken.

Since coming to Mark Street you have endeared yourselves to us in many ways. We have found your interest in our welfare unfailing, and the entire confidence we reposed in you has always been a gratifying satisfaction.

We feel we can never repay you for what you have done for Mark Street Circuit. Your example was always worthy of emulation, and of you it may truthfully be said that you "lured to brighter worlds and led the way."

Not only as our pastor and his help-mate shall we miss you, but as those who at all times have been ready and wise counsellors, as well as faithful and true friends. And, while your removal from our midst will alter your relationship to us as our spiritual leader, we have confidence in believing that what you have been to us in the past as friends you will continue to be in the future. With this assurance let us ask that, though absent from each other, we may still have a place in your thought and prayer.

We would ask you, Mr. Whattam, as a slight token of our regard, to accept this set of books. Dear Mrs. Whattam, will you please accept this music cabinet and tray, and Miss Whattam this parasol. And now, as pastor, we bid you farewell. May God's richest blessing go with you to Colbourne, and may He continue to use you in furthering the interests of His Kingdom, and may we all meet in the Homeland, to go no more out forever.

"Go thou thy way, and we go ours,
Apart, yet not afar,
Only a thin veil hangs between
The pathways where we are;
And God keep watch 'tween thee and us.
This is our prayer.
He looks thy way, He looketh ours
And keeps us near."

Signed on behalf of the circuit,
Bethel, Miss M. Handbidge
Salem, Miss Edith Craft

Rev. R. A. Whattam Bids Farewell

RETIRING PASTOR OF MARK ST. TAKES LEAVE OF PEOPLE.

The retiring pastor Rev. Mr. Whattam preached his farewell sermon last evening to the congregation of Mark Street Church after four years of successful pastorate. His scripture lesson for his evening discourse was that wonderful passage on charity, while his text was found in Philipians 1. 27, "Let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ; that whether I come and see you, or else be absent. I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel."

Mr. Whattam spoke feelingly on the relations, during his pastorate with his congregation, which had succeeded only through prayer and striving together for the faith of the gospel.

ESSENTIALS TO A LIFE OF SUCCESS

REV. A. J. THOMAS PREACHES A PRACTICAL DISCOURSE IN GEORGE ST. CHURCH

"What are the elements which are essential to a well-balanced success?" asked Rev. A. J. Thomas in the course of his sermon at George Street Methodist Church last night. "The first of these qualifications is willingness to work. The world does not owe a living to any man who is unwilling to work." The text chosen dealt with the preparations made by King Solomon to secure the timber for the temple, I Kings 4. 13-14.

Rest was the great essential mentioned by the pastor. "Man needs the Sabbath not only for worship but also for physical restoration.

"A third essential to success is pleasure, for God never meant that we should be aesthetics, living in seclusion. There are multitudes today, however, who are pleasure insane. Thousands of people take the coming of the summer season as a reason for abandoning church-going entirely.

"Mental culture must also be recognized.

"The opportunities to know, and to study are so great, but time is so much taken up with light, foolish, frothy and sentimental literature that the higher planes of knowledge are ignored. I feel that people often are sinfully wasting their opportunities. Let everyone make up his mind to climb as high as his opportunities allow.

"Religion must also have its place in a well-balanced life. It is the atmosphere in which all our aticons should be carried on. It is not a garment to be put on on Sunday and thrown off on Monday."

Beware of Imitations

We cannot impress too strongly upon the Canadian People that there is no Tablet just like Dr. Norvall's, there is no Tablet just as good as Dr. Norvall's. There may be Tablets that look like Norvall's. They may even taste like Norvall's, but do not be deceived—they will not have the same gentle laxative and tonic effect as Norvall's. In a word to relieve Constipation, Dyspepsia, Billiousness and Sick Headache, Dr. Norvall's Tablets have no equal and are in a class by themselves.

MISS M. BRIDGE ACTS AS ORGANIST

ADMIRABLY FILLS PLACE OF MR. R. J. DEVEY AT ST. JOHN'S.

Owing to the absence of Mr. R. J. Devey, the organ at St. John's was taken on Sunday, by Miss Muriel Bridge. This talented young organist was very acceptable at both services.

In the evening in lieu of the anthem usually sung by the choir, during the offertory, a solo, "Consolation," by Mendelsohn was played by the youthful organist, who thoroughly interpreted the sympathetic music. Mendelssohn's compositions are always acceptable. They possess a sweet sympathetic style and Miss Bridge's rendering of the air was deserving of much credit.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR THE WOLLLEN INDUSTRY NOW

There has been a complete change in the situation of the worsted industry in Canada in the last year or two, as a result of the shortage of supplies of woollen cloths from Great Britain and the largely increased cost of production in that country, and of transportation from there to Canada. Experts consider that Canada, thanks to a growing supplying of high-grade native wool, to the improved efficiency of the Canadian mills and to the circumstances already mentioned, is now in a position to supply its own requirements in the matter of woollen and worsted cloths to a very large extent, thus bringing a Canadian raw product to a more advanced stage and at the same time reducing the amount of money which we have to send abroad for foreign goods.

One of the latest steps for the improvement of efficiency in the Canadian woollen and worsted industry is the amalgamation of three of the oldest and best established mills into one organization under the title of Canadian Woollens, Limited, with a greatly strengthened financial position and large additions to plant and selling force. The mills in question are the Auburn, at Peterborough, belonging to a concern which has been engaged in the woollen industry for one hundred and one years, the Standard at Toronto, and the well-known Bonner Worth plant, which has for years been producing at Peterborough the highest grade worsted yarns manufactured in Canada. Mr. Edgar Worth, of the latter concern, will be general manager of the amalgamated company, so that experience and continuity of policy will be assured.

The British mills, which have hitherto provided this country with most of its requirements in high grade suitings, have for some time been unable to cope with the demands of their own country, and this condition is expected to last for years to come. The imports of tweeds into Canada, which in 1917 amount to 2,895,787 yards, were cut down in 1919 (fiscal year ending March 31) to 571,732 yards, and other classes of woollen cloth were also seriously affected.

A very important factor is the rapidly growing supply of raw wool in Canada. The rise in raw wool prices has stimulated the sheep industry, especially in Alberta, where the practice of letting the flocks range at will during a considerable part of the winter tends to the production of an admirable grade of long-fibred wool. Thus the difficulty of obtaining a satisfactory supply of raw wool, which was always one of the chief limitations on the Canadian woollen industry, is removed. At the present high cost of transportation, a great deal is saved by taking this wool and manufacturing it in Ontario, rather than shipping it to Britain as wool and back to Canada as cloth.

RUSSELL-TOWNSEND FINALLY GET CONTRACT FOR BRIDGE

Council Agrees on a Decision of 6 to 5—Alderman Hamilton's Vote the Deciding Factor—By-Law Authorizing Execution of Agreement With Them to be Ready For Special Session Wednesday Night—To Go Through This Time

Last night at 11.45, the City Father let the contract for the new high-level bridge on Hunter street, to Russell-Townsend Co., for a third time, but on this occasion in Council, with a reasonable assurance that their decision will now stand.

Council will meet again on Wednesday evening, when the city solicitor is to have a by-law, authorizing the execution of an agreement with Russell-Townsend Co., for the execution of the work ready for its adoption.

This contract has up to date been let five times now first to the Russell-Townsend, secondly to the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co., thirdly to the Russell-Townsend Co., fourthly to the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co., and lastly to the Russell-Townsend Co. But only once had the Board of Works (the "whole council really) recommendation been accepted by Council in regular session, and that was when the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co's tender was accepted, but subsequently discarded in by-law, being because Council's adoption of union wages would raise their price by $10,000.

Last night however, the Russell-Townsend Co.'s original cost-plus fixed fee and rental of plant sum of $29,500 on an estimate of $228,600 was accepted by a majority vote of 6 to 5, with every probability that the ratepayers will be afflicted with no more "changing mind" policy, at least so far as the Hunter street bridge is concerned. In fact a certain number of the Council last evening came heeled with a determination to let the contract, even had they to subserve their individual opinion to secure a majority collective vote.

How the Vote Standns

Resolutions that the Russell-Townsend Co., and the Canadian Enginerring and Contracting Co., get the the contract, both went to division twice; resulting in favor of the former firm on the second vote, as follows:

Ald. Turner moved, seconded by Ald. Turner, that the tender of the Russell-Townsend Co., of Toronto, on a cost plus fixed sum basis of $29,500 for fees and rent of plant included in an estimated total cost of $228,600, be accepted.

The city to reserve the right to substitute the proposed concrete centre span with one of steel if so desired, and the contractors to allow the city whatever saving is effected by substitution and the contractors to guarantee the big centre arch over the river.

Second Division

Yaes Aldermen Phelan, Edgar Hamilton, Turner, Garside, Gainey — 6

Nays Aldermen Taylor, McIntyre Crowe, Morrison, and the Mayor — 5

This gives the contract to Russell Townsend in their only and original estimate to which they have consistently adhered.

The first division on this motion was as follows:

Yaes—Aldermen Phelan, Edgar Turner, Garside, Gainey—5.

~~Nays~~—Aldermen Taylor, McIntyre Crowe, Morrison, the Mavor, and Ald. ~~Hamilton in the order in which~~ they voted—6.

The motion was lost on this first division.

It will be noticed that Ald. Hamilton commendably changed his vote in the second division rather than have this vexed problem blocked any further. He did not vote till last on the first division and thus at that time was the deciding factor and it was owing to his open declaration that were the motion put a second time he would switch in its favor, to reach a decisive conclusion at last, that a second and conclusive division was counted.

Ald. McIntyre did not wish to vote either way; but the rules of order would not permit of that, when the yaes and nays were called.

Expected Result

The Board of Works' recommendation, embodied in clause 15 of the Board of Works' report: "That the contract for the construction of the Hunter Street Bridge be awarded to Canadian Engineering and Contracting Company, on their tender of cost, plus a fixed sum of $28,000 and their guarantee that the work will not cost more than $286,860.00, the city to have the option to substitute a steel span for the centre concrete span if the Council so desires and the Company's fee in that case to be reduced proportionately to the amount of the work of which they would be relieved, and that a former recommendation of this Board adopted by the Council be amended to correspond with this recommendation," started the ball rolling and Ald. Phelan and Garside moved the elimination of this clause and its substitution by the Russell Townsend proposition, and that the city collector prepare a bylaw to this end.

The vote on this was a tie, Ald. McIntyre not declaring himself in a show of hands.

Ald. Phelan had nothing to say against the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co. "They are," he said, "capable men, but I believe, not as experienced as the Russell-Townsend people in concrete bridge building. For this reason although I have always supported a fixed sum contract I will vote for the Russell Townsend Co., whom I find from all enquiries, to be a first class firm, enjoying an enviable reputation."

Ald. Crowe took exception to clause 15 of the report, awarding the contract for paving to R. Sheehy, on the ground that by the time the city pays for inspection the engineer's estimate will be found to have been the lowest. But Ald. Crowe's colleagues did not think the difference of $75 involved, warranted any further delay by amending the report.

The Mayor: "With Mr. Sheehy we have a guarantee that the work shall not exceed his contract price; with the engineer we have no guarantee. The engineer will have his hands full anyway.

Morrison Sticks

Ald. Morrison stuck with the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co's tender for the bridge on the ground that it is a fixed guaranteed document. "The Russell-Townsend people will not guarantee any price: they want the city to assume the whole responsibility, and I feel that the Board of Works recommendation is the best for the city, in every way. Let us no longer act like school children, but adopt the report as it reads and award the bridge contract."

Ald. Morrison went on to say: "The Russell Townsend Co., ask $29,500 in fees and their competitors but $28,000. Why should we throw away $1500 of the people's money by accepting the former tender and supplying besides the small tools, which the latter agree to furnish, in their fee of $28,000. Both firms are practically figuring on the same basis and I believe the Canadian Engineering Co., will effect a big saving on their guaranteed cost price of $286,860.

Ald. Morrison and Taylor's motion that the report be adopted as read was lost on a tie vote.

Not Enough Money

His Worship contended the rejection of the Canadian Engineering tender would be a huge mistake, as with it the council would know where it is getting off at, "and that is exactly what we have been fighting for all along," he concluded.

RUSSELL-TOWNSEND FINALLY GET CONTRACT FOR BRIDGE

Council Agrees on a Decision of 6 to 5—Alderman Hamilton's Vote the Deciding Factor—By-Law Authorizing Execution of Agreement With Them to be Ready For Special-Session Wednesday Night—To Go Through This Time

Last night at 11.45, the City Fathers let the contract for the new high-level bridge on Hunter street, to Russell-Townsend Co., for a third time, but on this occasion in Council, with a reasonable assurance that their decision will now stand.

Council will meet again on Wednesday evening, when the city solicitor is to have a by-law, authorizing the execution of an agreement with Russell-Townsend Co., for the execution of the work ready for its adoption.

This contract has up to date been let five times now first to the Russell-Townsend, secondly to the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co., thirdly to the Russell-Townsend Co., fourthly to the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co., and lastly to the Russell-Townsend Co. But only once had the Board of Works (the whole council really) recommendation been accepted by Council in regular session, and that was when the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co's tender was accepted, but subsequently discarded in by-law, being because Council's adoption of union wages would raise their price by $10,000.

Last night however, the Russell-Townsend Co.'s original cost-plus fixed fee and rental of plant sum of $29,500 on an estimate of $228,600 was accepted by a majority vote of 6 to 5, with every probability that the ratepayers will be afflicted with no more "changing mind" policy, at least so far as the Hunter street bridge is concerned. In fact a certain number of the Council last evening came heeled with a determination to let the contract, even had they to subserve their individual opinion to secure a majority collective vote.

How the Vote Standns

Resolutions that the Russell-Townsend Co., and the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co., get the the contract, both went to division twice; resulting in favor of the former firm on the second vote, as follows:

Ald. Turner moved, seconded by Ald. Turner, that the tender of the Russell-Townsend Co., of Toronto, on a cost plus fixed sum basis of $29,500 for fees and rent of plant included in an estimated total cost of $228,600, be accepted.

The city to reserve the right to substitute the proposed concrete centre span with one of steel if so desired, and the contractors to allow the city whatever saving is effected by substitution and the contractors to guarantee the big centre arch over the river.

Second Division

Yaes—Aldermen Phelan, Edgar Hamilton, Turner, Garside, Gainey—6.

Nays—Aldermen Taylor, McIntyre Crowe, Morrison, and the Mayor—5.

This gives the contract to Russell Townsend in their only and original estimate to which they have consistently adhered.

The first division on this motion was as follows:

Yaes—Aldermen Phelan, Edgar Turner, Garside, Gainey—5.

Nays—Aldermen Taylor, McIntyre Crowe, Morrison, the Mayor, and Ald. ~~Hamilton in the~~ order in which they voted—6.

The motion was lost on this first division.

It will be noticed that Ald. Hamilton commendably changed his vote in the second division rather than have this vexed problem blocked any further. He did not vote till last on the first division and thus at that time was the deciding factor and it was owing to his open declaration that were the motion put a second time he would switch in its favor, to reach a decisive conclusion at last, that a second and conclusive division was counted.

Ald. McIntyre did not wish to vote either way; but the rules of order would not permit of that, when the yaes and nays were called.

Expected Result

The Board of Works' recommendation, embodied in clause 15 or the Board of Works' report: "That the contract for the construction of the Hunter Street Bridge be awarded to Canadian Engineering and Contracting Company, on their tender of cost, plus a fixed sum of $28,000 and their guarantee that the work will not cost more than $286,860.00, the city to have the option to substitute a steel span for the centre concrete span if the Council so desires and the Company's fee in that case to be reduced proportionately to the amount of the work of which they would be relieved, and that a former recommendation of this Board adopted by the Council be amended to correspond with this recommendation," started the ball rolling and Ald. Phelan and Garside moved the elimination of this clause and its substitution by the Russell Townsend proposition, and that the city collcitor prepare a bylaw to this end.

The vote on this was a tie, Ald. McIntyre not declaring himself in a show of hands.

Ald. Phelan had nothing to say against the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co.—"They are," he said, "capable men, but I believe, not as experienced as the Russell-Townsend people in concrete bridge building. For this reason although I have always supported a fixed sum contract I will vote for the Russell Townsend Co., whom I know, from all enquiries, to be a first class firm, enjoying an enviable reputation."

Ald. Crowe took exception to clause 15 of the report, awarding the contract for paving to R. Sheehy, on the ground that by the time the city pays for inspection the engineer's estimate will be found to have been the lowest. But Ald. Crowe's colleagues did not think the difference of $75 involved, warranted any further delay by amending the report.

The Mayor: "With Mr. Sheehy we have a guarantee that the work shall not exceed his contract price; with the engineer we have no guarantee. The engineer will have his hands full anyway."

Morrison Sticks

Ald. Morrison stuck with the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co.'s tender for the bridge on the ground that it is a fixed guaranteed document. "The Russell-Townsend people will not guarantee any price: they want the city to assume the whole responsibility, and I feel that the Board of Works recommendation is the best for the city, in every way. Let us no longer act like school children, but adopt the report as it reads and award the bridge contract."

Ald. Morrison went on to say: "The Russell-Townsend Co. ask $29,500 in fees and their competitors but $28,000. Why should we throw away $1500 of the people's money by accepting the former tender and supplying besides the small tools, which the latter agree to furnish, in their fee of $28,000. Both firms are practically figuring on the same basis and I believe the Canadian Engineering Co., will effect a big saving on their guaranteed cost price of $286,860."

Ald. Morrison and Taylor's motion that the report be adopted as read was lost on a tie vote.

Not Enough Money

His Worship contended the rejection of the Canadian Engineering tender would be a huge mistake, as with it the council would know where it is getting off at, "and that is exactly what we have been fighting for all along," he concluded.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR THE WOLLLEN INDUSTRY NOW

There has been a complete change in the situation of the worsted industry in Canada in the last year or two, as a result of the shortage of supplies of woollen cloths from Great Britain and the largely increased cost of production in that country, and of transportation from there to Canada. Experts consider that Canada, thanks to a growing supplying of high-grade native wool, to the improved efficiency of the Canadian mills and to the circumstances already mentioned, is now in a position to supply its own requirements in the matter of woollen and worsted cloths to a very large extent, thus bringing a Canadian raw product to a more advanced stage and at the same time reducing the amount of money which we have to send abroad for foreign goods.

One of the latest steps for the improvement ~~of efficiency in the Cana~~dian woollen and worsted industry is the amalgamation of three of the oldest and best established mills into one organization, under the title of Canadian Woollens, Limited, with a greatly strengthened financial position and large additions to plant and selling force. The mills in question are the Auburn, at Peterborough, belonging to a concern which has been engaged in the woollen industry for one hundred and one years, the Standard at Toronto, and the well-known Bonner Worth plant, which has for years been producing at Peterborough the highest grade worsted yarns manufactured in Canada. Mr. Edgar Worth, of the latter concern, will be general manager of the amalgamated company, so that experience and continuity of policy will be assured.

The British mills, which have hitherto provided this country with most of its requirements in high grade suitings, have for some time been unable to cope with the demands of their own country, and this condition is expected to last for years to come. The imports of tweeds into Canada, which in 1917 amount to 2,895,787 yards, were cut down in 1919 (fiscal year ending March 31) to 571,732 yards, and other classes of woollen cloth were also seriously affected.

A very important factor is the rapidly growing supply of raw wool in Canada. The rise in raw wool prices has stimulated the sheep industry, especially in Alberta, where the practice of letting the flocks range at will during a considerable part of the winter tends to the production of an admirable grade of long-fibred wool. Thus the difficulty of obtaining a satisfactory supply of raw wool, which was always one of the chief limitations on the Canadian woollen industry, is removed. At the present high cost of transportation, a great deal is saved by taking this wool and manufacturing it in Ontario, rather than shipping it to Britain as wool and back to Canada as cloth.

TUESDAY, JULY 8, 1919

AT LAST!

THE CONTRACT for the Hunter street bridge was let again last night, this time to all appearances finally, although there is no certainty on this point until the agreement is signed, sealed and delivered. Last night the aldermen in open session reversed the latest decision arrived at while meeting as a committee of the whole, and for the third time awarded the contract to the Russell-Townsend people of Toronto. This, if memory serves us, makes the fifth time that the contract has been awarded, the Hamilton tenderers drawing the winning ticket that won them nothing on two former occasions. Three times, however, looks like the lucky number for the Russell-Townsend firm.

The bridge is to cost the city $228,600. Out of this the fee of the company is to be $29,500. That is, provided the city decides to erect an all-concrete bridge. If it is deemed best later in the proceedings to substitute a steel span, the contractors will reduce their price by the amount of the saving thus effected.

What other decision could the Council arrive at? The bid of the other company whose terms appealed to the aldermen and who were twice favored by committee report was $286,000, this carrying a guarantee that the cost would not exceed that amount. If it proved less, the firm was to receive increased fee. The Council, however, had no more right to assume that the Hamilton firm would come under their estimate than that the Russell-Townsend Company would exceed theirs.

With businesslike stability the Russell-Townsend Company adhered to their original bid and refused to dicker with the city. At one stage of the discussion Mayor Duncan declared that the Toronto concern could not possibly build for $228,600 a bridge that would cost at least $300,000. If the Mayor believed that, how did it come that he supported the case of the Hamilton firm whose figure was $286,000? Did he for a moment think that the latter proposed to make the city of Peterborough a present of $14,000?

The Russell-Townsend people are a firm with experience in this particular line, experience such as none of their competitors possesses. They have an enviable business record. Their work is in evidence all over Canada. They have the equipment for the work. There is no reason on earth why they should not make good on their contract, even if it be the biggest they have ever undertaken. The span they will contruct here will be the longest in existence. The successful completion of the work will add to their reputation. They have their business opportunity and will rise to it. Peterborough will have a bridge that will be the greatest of its kind in Canada.

The successful firm, too, have the requisite engineering ability. Mr. Townsend will take care of that end of the enterprise. If the contract had been awarded to any one of their competitors, the services of Mr. Townsend would have been in demand even if not available. The outcome of all this discussion looks like the logical issue. The only regret in connection with the matter is that three months have been lost in the work of construction at a time when employment was so urgently needed.

FINDING WORK FOR VETERANS.

NEIL TAYLOR, managing director of H. R. Marsden Limited, Leeds, England, who is deputy director of the North of England branch of the British Ministry of Labor, is making a tour of Canada for the purpose of investigating the work of the Canadian Government as to placing ex-members of the Canadian forces in touch with opportunities for employment.

When asked for an expression of opinion as to the work being done in Canada by the Information and Service Branch, Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment, he said: "I think the results obtained are nothing short of marvelous. I really cannot think of an adjective that properly expresses my admiration of the work that has been accomplished by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment in the short time it has been in operation.

"The whole organization of the department is on a thoroughly businesslike basis. The system and methods adopted for placing ex-members of the forces in touch with opportunities for employment are simple, and the wonderful success obtained in placing in employment such a large percentage of applicants as the department has been able to place is evidence of its efficiency.

"I am particularly struck with the high type of intelligence of the staff actually dealing with this work; evidently they have been carefully selected, and by some means or another they have been fired with an enthusiasm for the work in hand which cannot but insure a continuance of the splendid results already obtained.

"The quality of the staff and the general organization and administration of the department is such that the work in Canada is being carried on with a much smaller staff in proportion than is usually the case with respect to government work.

"The close co-operation that exists between the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment and the Department of Labor whereby one comprehensive chain of employment offices covers the whole of Canada is a remarkable achievement. It has eliminated an overlapping of the work of these two important branches of the government service.

"The Canadian Government undoubtedly took a step in the right direction, which should serve as a lead to other Allied countries, when it established a civilian department to administer benefits in behalf of ex-members of the forces. The atmosphere of sympathetic man-to-man consideration that exists in the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment could not be obtained in anything but a civilian organization, and I am sure that this has been a great factor in the success of the Canadian Government in re-establishing as self-supporting citizens those who have served so gallantly overseas."

IF FARMERS GO ON STRIKE.

"ROB ROY," a well-known writer on agricultural and other public questions, has an article in a recent issue of the Toronto Sunday World, in which he deals with the above topic. Being a practical farmer himself as well as a prominent politician, "Rob Roy" speaks from knowledge that has been obtained from first hand. He knows the conditions in Western Ontario thoroughly in the section which has always been called the garden of the Province.

Western Ontario this year will beyond all question produce one of the lightest, if not the very lightest, grain crops in its history. Both natural and economical conditions are responsible for this situation. Owing to the wet spring it was impossible to get the crop sown in time. The season is over a month late, and the result is everywhere apparent. Nature will not wait on tardy seasons. Oats and barley are in head, while the stalks in many cases are not over six inches in height. Many fields will not be worth harvesting.

The fall wheat crop is unusually heavy, but all the wheat produced in Ontario will not affect the market. Hay is a record yield if it can be saved, but here the labor problem arises. Men without experience ask $6 a day and board for working on the farm. No green hand is worth any such money, even if such assistance were available. It will be impossible to cut and store the crop. The agricultural outlook for the Province is not anything but dismal, and from some of the western provinces comes the news that sections there are facing their third crop failure.

There is no immediate prospect of a drop in the cost of living. The tendency is all in the other direction. Foodstuffs are likely to be higher than ever next winter, and unsettled industrial conditions in the cities will not improve the outlook. The farmers may not be on strike, but they are handicapped by circumstances over which they have no control. They are in exactly the same position as the manufacturer who is obliged to restrict his operations for lack of help.

Bankruptcy Act Help To Business

(Hon. Hugh Guthrie, K.C.)

The drawing up of a new Dominion Bankruptcy Act was due to the fact that for the past forty years there has been no proper Bankruptcy Act covering the whole Dominion. Russia and China, along with Canada, have no general Bankruptcy Acts, but all other civilized countries have. There has been no Dominion law since 1878, and in the interval the various provinces have passed insolvency laws, but the trouble was that these were not uniform. Men who did a national business experienced difficulty through the variety of insolvency laws, while exporters in Great Britain said they could not secure uniformity in their claims with the preferences and priorities that were allowed in the various provinces. The demand for a Dominion Act came from the Boards of Trade, the wholesale and retail houses, the Bankers' Association, and many other bodies all over the country.

Under the old Dominion Act, which lasted only for five years, the machinery for winding up an insolvent estate was very cumbersome and slow, the expense was too high, and the great difficulty was that the assignees were not a class of men that would make good trustees, and very often no dividend was declared on the estate. The matter of expense as well as lack of uniformity was one of the difficulties with the Provincial acts, and one instance was given us in the case of a British Columbia company, where an estate of $730,000 brought only $3,000 for distribution to the creditors.

The Act, as it is being passed by the Commons and Senate, provides for two kinds of bankruptcy:

1. A voluntary one, where any man may make an assignment to a trustee under the Act.

2. An involuntary one, where the man is placed in bankruptcy against his own will. This applies to all except wage earners with less than $1,500 a year, and to farmers, who cannot be put in bankruptcy against their will.

There was an effort made to limit the application to "traders," such as is the case in France, and was the case under the old Canadian Act, but experience has shown that this limitation should be dropped, and the Act in Great Britain applies even to farmers. The retail merchants declared that such a limitation would be unfair to them, and that there should be a very general application. They told us that doctors, lawyers and professional men generally, preachers and university men, were the biggest debtors so far as they were concerned. Thus the Act was broadened. So far as the farmer was concerned it was argued that he might be the victim of hard luck one year; he might be hailed out, and if he were compelled to give up his farm and stock he would have no chance to right himself.

The Bill, as it went through the Commons, applied where indebtedness was $200 or over, but the Senate increased this to $500, and the Commons in passing this. Thus, where a man owes $500 and refuses to pay, he is liable under the Act.

Jurisdiction is vested in the Superior Court of each province, and only a few cases of appeal are allowed.

Trustees—anyone may apply to the Secretary of State for Canada, and the appointments are made by the Governor-General in Council. Many chartered accountants have already made applications, and these will be assigned to districts, but all property, no matter where it is located, will be vested in the trustee. Each one must give a permanent security for $10,000. In the case of an individual estate the creditors may compel him to give an added security for the value of the estate.

The Act provides whereby an honest debtor may receive a discharge where he has not been guilty of impropriety, where he has kept a proper set of books, where he has given up all his assets, and in fact has acted honestly, he is entitled to a discharge by a court which would be good against the world.

The Procedure.

The petition is presented to a Court which will have it served on the debtor, and in eight days the judge appointed a trustee who takes charge under the supervision of the creditors and inspectors. The trustee must report to the court, and his security is not given up until the whole case is discharged.

Payment to the Trustee.

This trustee is given what the creditors choose, or is limited to an amount under the Act which will not exceed 5 per cent. of the assets that are in his hands.

Lawyers' fees are likewise limited by the Bill so that the estate will not be gobbled up. The inspectors are allowed only their disbursements. In the case of lawyers where an estate is over $5,000 they are allowed 5 per cent., where it is under $5,000 not more than 10 per cent., and only if the inspectors agree.

Frequent provisions are made against preferential settlements or cases where fraud exists. The clauses are based largely on the English Act, and vary greatly with Ontario and Quebec laws. Speaking generally, all cases of fraud or attempts to delay or any preference that is given one creditor over another are set aside, and if money has been paid it may be reclaimed. Everything has been done in order to assure that the full benefit of the assets may be divided share and share alike, without preference or priority.

In regard to joint stock companies, banks, railways, trust companies and insurance companies, for which there is special legislation, are excepted. One of the difficulties under the present Act dealing with stock companies is that it is difficult to settle the list of contributories. The new Act provides a very simple means: the trustee takes the books and settles the list of contributories. In the case, for instance, of John Brown, who has paid $60 each on his shares, he is called on to pay the remaining $40, and if he does not he can be sued in court within thirty days, and no new defence is allowed that was not submitted at first. This method is much more expeditious and less expensive than under the present procedure.

The priorities allowed are as follows:

1. Expenses of trustee as a first charge.

2. Costs in obtaining judgment are allowed to the first man who has secured execution against the company.

3. Three months' preference only to wage earners.

4. Taxes due to Provincial or Dominion Governments which are declared as a lien on the property and must be paid.

In Regards to Landlords.

A change has been made in the law as it is in the Province of Quebec regarding landlords. As a result a criticism has been made that we are too hard on the landlords, while on the other hand the claim is made that they should rank as ordinary creditors. We have decided to allow the landlords three months' preference only on their claims. Again, the criticism is raised that as soon as the law takes effect you will see all rents payable in advance. But that is not a hardship, and, as a matter of fact, in New York this is the custom in force. If more than three months' rent are due the landlord he will be treated as an ordinary debtor and obtain his dividend with the rest.

The main objects that will be obtained by this Act thus, are:

1. It will grant uniformity in bankruptcy acts for all the Provinces.

2. The proceedings will be as speedy, as cheap, and as reliable as possible.

3. It will abolish preferential or priority creditor abuses.

4. It will provide for the honorable discharge of an honest bankrupt.

The whole Act will work out to the financial and commercial interests of Canada.

It may be six months or more before the Act is put into actual operation. The consensus of opinion is that a reasonable time should be allowed to pass before it comes into effect. Practice forms must be drawn up, rules of practice approved of, trustees chosen, etc., but in six or eight months the Bill will be proclaimed as law and come into force.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE BOY SCOUTS

Editor Review: I recently had a conversation with Mr. Tyrer, the captain of the Boy Scouts, and am surprised to find from that gentleman that the Boy Scouts receive no financial aid from any source.

These little fellows did a good work at the fair grounds during the past week, acting as police, and serving in many ways, in a most creditable manner. And they are prepared to do all such—useful public work at all times without remuneration. The work of these boys besides being of the greatest value to the community intrinsically, is a great educational work, and calculated to be of the greatest service in the sense of training the minds of the boys in habits of honesty and manliness, which necessarily will make them good citizens.

I understand they pay out of their own pockets all their own expenses, even when they go to other centres to work with other bodies of scouts. Many of the boys are of poor parentage, and can ill afford to pay. Their uniforms cost about $10.00 apiece, and camping outfits, etc., more. It is the boys of the workers that especially are benefited by the movement, and these are deterred from joining because of the expense entailed.

I cannot help thinking the community owes something to the Boy Scouts, but in these days, unless they are aggressive enough to have a "drive" or some such device to get money, nobody thinks of offering help, and Mr. Tyrer is too modest to ask for it. They need a fund if any movement for the social good ever needed it. They as much deserve it as the Y.M.C.A. for their work is even more valuable and their resources less. The scoutmaster catches the boy at a younger age than does the Y.M.C.A., and does him that much more good.

I want to propose that the citizens of this city open a voluntary subscription list to make a fund for the Boy Scouts, that will lift a real burden from the shoulders of these little fellows, and let in a number more that would join but for the expense. It need not be a ten thousand dollar drive, a few hundreds would work wonders, and if anybody gives a dollar to this, it will be the best invested dollar he ever laid out.

If I were a wealthy man, I would open the list with $100.00, but I cannot afford it, still I will do my part if there is a response to this letter. Perhaps any of the public that take kindly to my suggestion will either communicate with Mr. Tyrer direct, or if they wish, I will place myself at their disposal to talk over the matter of forming a committee, appoint a treasurer (perhaps one of the bank managers would act) and form a fund for the boys.

I think it would be a good plan for those who, like myself, feel an interest in the scouts to make their subscriptions yearly, so that there would be a revenue coming in without any "drives" with or without an initial donation. The fund can be administered without a cent of expense by a public spirited committee.

Yours truly,
J. G. GUISE-BAGLEY.

WOMEN PUT FEET ON "RAIL"

The woman reporter walked a pink path of glory as she swung along Madison Street, in Chicago, when that city went dry on July 1st. Other individuals on the street trudged along, conscious of the humid heat. They kept their eyes upon the sidewalks, they steered their courses dully toward their goal. Only the woman reporter made gay arcs in the air with her umbrella; she only was blissful in the face of the weather, abandoned before the desolate fact that this, for her, was a day of work.

She had just worshipped at the fane of poetry, of fellowship, of scintillating mirth, of easily obtained gayety. She had quaffed inspiration where men have sworn to be no more inspired—at the bar.

Are the days of intoxication over? Not by a long shot. Not, at least, to women. To the unsophisticated who have never tasted the real thing there is joy in the wickedness of the drinks still to be obtained in that heretofore unknown region—the saloon.

What's Wickedest Drink?"

At the bar of the Hotel Sherman the woman reporter had leaned negligently upon the counter.

"What's the wickedest drink a lady can buy?" she asked Frank W. Bering, the hotel manager, the while surveying with astonished eyes the paintings decorating the walls.

Mr. Bering smiled quizzically.

"Near Beer," he said.

"Name your near-poison, lady," invited the white coated one.

"Beer for two," the reporter sang gayly, as the barkeeps hastened to serve up.

"Honest, you don't know what it seems like to have a glad person in the place," one of the waiters confided. "The men have such a disgusted look when they come in."

The beer, in glasses, which Mr. Bering declared were "the real thing, anyway," was intoxicating enough in appearance to fire the most lethargic feminine imagination. The young woman reporter was swayed with a heady sensation as she looked. At the behest of the manager, ginger ale, sarsaparilla and a drink "the color of absinth" appeared on the bar. As the woman reporter highland-flung her way out, the boards sang beneath her joyous step.

New Brand of Cocktails.

At the Morrison hotel bar she was further "intoxicated" when the bar keep began to sing out names. Here, she learned, were Manhattan cocktails, Bronx cocktails, martinis and creme de menthes (imitation) to be had for the asking.

By the time she left the Hotel La Salle bar she was humming to herself:

"Old King Cole was a merry old soul, and a merry old soul was he."

She entered the office like a conqueror. Her step was proud, her head among the clouds. She had proved that women at last can put their feet on the rail.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acid in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

DOG CATCHER AND PARK CONTROLLER

JIMMY GATES GETS THIS DUAL APPOINTMENT AT $15 THE MONTH.

The City Council received last night a communication from the Nicholls Park trustees, stating that unless the nuisance to residents adjacent to the said Nicholls Park, from a youthful public inclined more or less to rowdyism, is abated by proper supervision, the trustees would prohibit the maintenance of a public bathing spot at this point.

In this connection His Worship explained that on June 26th he had appointed Jimmy Gates caretaker of this park and dog catcher, the offices combined at a salary of $15 the month. On motion of Ald. Turner and McIntyre this dual appointment was ratified by Council, the appointment to date from noon of June 26th, and continue till August 31st, and no longer.

violence beyond control. However, since the stream's course had been straightened by the city, flooding in subsequent springs had been mitigated considerably, and were Council to widen the creek and bank it with cement walls between London and Dublin streets they would find no objection thereto coming from him. He would be pleased to assist in any consistent way. This went to the Board of Works, and an examination of the creek's course will be made.

Help Tax Collector.

The report of the finance committee was adopted as read. Tax Collector Green was allowed temporary assistance not to exceed $100 in cost. Ald. Taylor and Turner did not think this enough, and first moved that his salary consist of one-half of one per cent. on his collections, he to pay his own help and postage, and finally proposed that his salary be $2000 a year, including assistance and postage. It was decided, however, to leave an increase in Mr. Green's salary for future adjustment.

Bylaws.

A bylaw authorizing the execution of a contract with Richard Sheehy for concrete paving on King street from George to Water streets and Water to Charlotte street, passed its several readings.

More Street Paving.

Ald. Hamilton inquired if it would not be good policy to have submitted by the engineer an estimate of what it would cost to pave George street south of the C. P. R.

Ald. Phelan endorsed this proposition. He understood the street railway company contemplated raising their tracks, and were this roadway paved it should be done before any alterations were made in the railway grade, as pavement calls for heavier rails. No money is being applied to this road, which, he advised, should be paved as far as Romaine street.

Ald. Crowe thought concrete pavement would answer for this section of George street.

The city engineer will furnish estimates for this proposed work.

There were present Mayor Duncan and Aldermen Gainey, Morrison, Garside, Turner, Edgar, McIntyre, Phelan, Crowe, Taylor and Hamilton.

OVER FORTY CONVERTED AT THE BIG TENT REVIVAL

Evangelist Kennedy in Sermon Last Night Explains the Easiest Way to be Saved

Several more conversions took place at last night's union evangelistic meeting in the big tent on Hunter street. The number of conversions is now approaching forty. Early in the meetings Mr. Kennedy made the statement that he had grown accustomed, in connection with his campaigns, to seeing people coming into the meetings in the early part of the campaign with anxious or unhappy faces, and then of seeing the character of the faces of these people change after they became converted, when they radiated their new happiness and joy. This is proving true in the present campaign in this city. Quite a number of those who are attending almost every meeting are those who were converted a week or ten days ago and who are now helping to bring others to the meetings. These include some young people who have been very active in this work and whose faces show their new joy and peace very clearly.

Last evening Mr. Kennedy spoke on the subject, "The Easiest Way to be Saved." He emphasized the point that it is by looking unto Christ. When the children of Israel sinned and God punished them by sending scorpions among them He also provided a means for their healing in the brazen serpent. All those who desired to be healed needed to do was to look unto the serpent and they would be cured. Thousands did so and were healed. God could not have provided a simpler method of healing and restoration to His divine favor. Yet, if the children of Israel were like the people of today, undoubtedly many of them must have scoffed at such a simple method of healing and insisted on trying to cure their sickness themselves.

Mr. Kennedy drew a vivid word picture of Israelitish mothers trying to cure their children by poultices and other home-made remedies. All of which, of course, were of no avail as God had provided only the one remedy. He showed also how many of the people of Israel probably refused to believe how sick they were because others around them were much more sick. Thus they probably postponed looking until too late.

God has provided a similar remedy for the curse of sin today. It is by looking unto Christ. Christ Himself said, "As Moses lifted up his serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have eternal life." Instead, however, of taking this God-provided remedy, many people today are trusting in other sources for salvation. Some think that because they are members of churches they will be all right. Others trust in the good work their lodges are doing. Others compare themselves with those around them and think that because they are no more sinful than others that they will probably be all right. Yet there is not salvation in any of these methods. The only source of salvation is faith in Christ's atoning blood. All that God asks of the sinner is to look from himself unto Christ and be saved.

Members of Mark Street Church choir led the singing last evening. A feature of the singing which was much enjoyed was a duet by Miss Etta Kemp and Mrs. Rome. A number of Sunday school teachers were present last evening with pupils from their classes. It was evident that some of the teachers had been doing good work in an effort to get their pupils to attend.

This evening's service will take the form of a Hallelujah Supper. Just what is meant by this has not been explained beyond the fact that no one will need to bring any baskets. Tomorrow night Mr. Kennedy will speak on "Taking the Conceit Out of a Man." The singing this evening will be led by mebers of the Trinity Church choir.

SPARKS FROM KENNEDY'S ANVIL.

All other religions seek after God, but God is always seeking the lost.

The tongue was God's blessing to man, but man has made it a curse.

God broke mans' ambition at Babel by touching the tongue, also when re-making man at Pentecost.

At Pentecost every man heard in his own tongue, hence through Abraham's seed all the nations of the earth were blessed.

God gave man a tongue that he might express the adoration of his inmost soul in worship, and the needs of his heart in prayer.

The last thing a man gives to the Lord is his pocketbook. The last thing a woman gives is her tongue, and some men.

Six inches of a woman's tongue can kill the reputation of a man six feet high. Slander is worse than stealing.

When angry with another, write a letter to him, put it away over night, read it, and you won't send it.

Women as a rule are beter than men, and there are more of them, but when a woman does once give her tongue to gossiping, then beware.

A man is pretty low down when he will swear. If your wife swore you would be whining for a divorce.

No angel or devil swears; only men do that.

Lying is bearing false witness, whether it's acting a lie or exaggerating the truth.

There are no tales in heaven, hence no liars there.

If the tombstones were reliable the devil would be out of a job.

Some funeral sermons are enough to make the devil laugh and the dead to sit up.

Misrepresenting is lying, and keeping still when you ough to speak is lying.

A scandalmonger is like an envelope, it has to be licked to be shut up.

HONORARIUM FOR M.H.O. DR. AMYS

COUNCIL APPRECIATES HIS SERVICES TO THE TUNE OF $100.

Last night Dr. (Capt.) McPherson was re-instated by Council in the position of M.H.O., he resigned temporarily to go to the war. A bylaw to this effect unanimously carried. The captain doctor has served over four years with Canada's forces overseas at various fronts.

Appreciates Dr. Amys.

Alderman Edgar, in this connection, thought it up to Council to express its appreciation of Dr. Amys' splendid services as M.H.O. in Dr. McPherson's absence more especially during the "flu" epidemic and smallpox scare, during which periods he had been commendably energentic and successfully so, in safeguarding the public health of this community. The alderman suggested a grant of $100, not in award for services, but as an honorarium of appreciation.

Ald. Edgar and Garside moved an expression of appreciation of Dr. Amy's services, coupled with a grant of $100.

This carried unanimously.

BUY A $10 UNIT IN TEXAS OIL

MAY MAKE YOU $100 IN A SHORT TIME

Here's a chance to make big money on a $10 investment or to lose but $10. You can't lose much if you do lose. You may make hundreds, or even thousands. Note the men back of this enterprise, THEN DECIDE YOURSELF

GREAT FORTUNES ARE MADE WHEN OIL IS STRUCK

All the oil enterprises that are today pouring forth such vast riches were at the start speculative. This is speculative, if oil were actually spouting from wells on this property today, you wouldn't have this opportunity, your money wouldn't be needed or accepted.

Folks of very limited means often very poor people with only a record for honesty—and many capitalists HAVE BEEN REAPING A FINANCIAL HARVEST through Texas oil resources.

It is reasonable to expect that what has happened elsewhere—in other Texas oil territories—must happen here. Those who bought ahead of the drill in other sections are rolling in wealth today. Take the famous Burkbennett and Ranger districts here at one time not many months ago leases could be easily bought around $10.00 an acre. Deals have been reported recently as high as $195,000 an acre. Frequent deals in that field are around $25,000 an acre. An oil strike did the work. This may happen any day at Roby.

Church Gets $200,000 a year from Oil Wells in its Yard Spurns $1,000,000 for Cemetery

Fort Worth, Texas—The Merriman Baptist Church, in the town of Ranger, which already has acquired an income of $200,000 a year, through oil wells sunk in its church yard, has refused $1,000,000 for the right to develop wells in the graveyard which adjoins the church.

FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM Edition Wed., May 21, 1919: Roby, Texas, May. Five Oil Well Drilling Contracts have been signed on blocks of leases in the County and seven more are being negotiated at this time.

Our Holdings in This Rich Field Offer Choice Locations for Many Wells

We own leases aggregating 292 acres, situated Northeast of Roby, Fisher County, Texas, a short distance west of Ranger, where many gushers of from 1,000 and 12,000 barrels of oil per day have been brought in.

Our Leases offer choice locations for upwards of 80 wells. There are four pay oil sands, in this section, and the chances of striking a gusher are equal to any and beter to most.

On the North and East we have Burkbernett, Iowa Park, Electra, and Henrietta Fields, and on a direct line, a short distance east, the famous Ranger Oil fields, all big producers. The Company's land shows all the surface indications of oil that these other fields ever had. Producing wells are being brought in nearer to our property every day—wells are now drilling to the northeast and south of us.

Many new locations are being made near our leases—drilling rigs are being rapidly moved in and constructed to begin operations at once. The activity in this section is increasing daily and development is being rushed on a large scale. Any day word may reach us of the bringing in of these wells—a gusher—would mean thousands or perhaps millions of dollars in increased values of our leases and the stock of this Company.

These are some of the reasons without going into geological or technical details why the officers and directors of the Company have such faith in this property.

10 Cents a Share Now and Money Back in 10 Days, if you want it!

To enable the Company to start drilling as soon as possible, and meet necessary overhead costs, this popular subscription plan has been adopted, and this most unusual offer is made to those who will act at once. If you will remit promptly, you will pay but ten cents per share.

At $10 per unit of 100 shares. Send your money any convenient way: money order, check, bank draft or currency by registered letter—then look up the Company or directors of property, and if not perfectly satisfied, ask return of your money within 10 days, and it will be forwarded to you at once.

Facts concerning this proposition have been told you in brief, without elaboration. What do you think about the prospects of making your $10 in this venture grow many fold? As good as it looks, you have not been told anywhere near all the favorable things about this immense project.

If you want a $10 unit at the ground floor price fill out the subscription coupon (or send letter) without delay and send it with your $10—before the price goes up.

CHAUTAUQUA WEEK OPENS

Away back in 1874 a little group of American Sunday School Workers met in the village of Chautauqua, on the border of a lake, in a county of the same name, in the state of New York, and organized a society, for the carrying on of their work with a greater degree of efficiency It was only natural that the new organization should be given the name of its birthplace. That is the history in brief of the origin of an educative force that has spread all over the United States and Canada. One result is seen in the "Chautauqua Week" that opened yesterday in this city and which will be patronized by the best residents of Peterborough.

The Chautauqua Institution began as a Sunday School Normal Institute and for nearly a qarter of a century the administration was in the hands of Mr. Miller, who was responsible for the business management, and Bishop Vincent, who has head of the instruction department. Though founded by Methodists, in its earliest years it became non-sectarian and has furnished a meeting ground for members of all sects and denominations. At the very outset the activities of the assembly were twofold The conducting of a summer school for Sunday School teachers and the presentation o fa series of combined lectures and entertainments. Although the movement was, and is still, primarily religious, it has always been assumed that the best religious education must necessarily take, advantage of the best that the educational world can afford in the literatures, arts, and sciences. The scope of the plan rapidly broadened and in 1879, a regular group of schools with graded courses of study was established. At about the same time also the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle providing continuous home reading systems was founded. The season lasts during June, July, and August In 1907 some 325 lectures, concerts, readings and entertainments were presented by a group of over 190 lecturers, readers and musicians, while at the same time 200 courses in the summer schools were offered by a faculty of instructors drawn from the leading colleges and normal schools of the country. The Chautauqua movement has had an immense influense on education in the United States, an influence which is especially marked in three directions. 1—In the establishment of about 300 local assemblies, or "Chautauquas" in the United States, patterned after the mother Chautauqua ous. 2—In the promotion of the idea of summer education, which has been followed by the founding of summer schools, or sessions' at a large number of American Universities and of various special summer schools such as the Catholic Summer School of America, with its headquarters at Cliff Haven, Clinton County, New York and the Jewish Chautauqua Society with headquarters at Buffalo, N. Y.; and, 3 In the establishment of numerous correspondence schools patterned in a general way, after the system provided by the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle.

Last Night's Entertainment.

The local Chautauqua season opened yesterday afternoon in the big tent on Central Park and for the first performance the Old Home Singers were the entertainers. This is a remarkably well-balanced mixed quartette and their offerings were greatly appreciated by the audience.

In the evening the tent was again fairly well filled to listen to the Old Home Singers and also to a lecture by Dr. Arthur Walwyn Evans, of Wales.

The musical part of the program opened with a selection from the Bohemian Girl entitled "Come With the Gipsy Bride," which drew forth great applause from the audience. A baritone solo by Mr. Cliff R. Cline "The Armorer's Song" from Robin Hood, was well rendered and an encore was demanded.

The next number was a very pretty setting of two old hymns which were sung by the quartette without accompaniment. Miss Fern Sherman, the accompanist, played the Concert Etude in A Major and her execution was perfect.

Miss Ethel Wright Fuson, in a costumed recital of original Indian songs, presented a distinct novelty. Miss Fuson has made a study of the old songs of the aborigines and her offering was a treat.

Mr. Thomas Fuson sang "Questo O'Quella," from Rigeletta, in Italian, and as an encore a pretty little French love song.

Possibly the best number on the program of these singers was their old camp meeting songs of the American negroes. Such old songs as "Hear Dem Bells," "Gwine to Walk All Over God's Heaven" and "De Ole Ark's a Moverin" are always sure to please, but rendered in the way they were last night, they were simply irresistible.

A quartette arrangement of selections from grand opera and also of some old hymns brought the musical program to a close, and it is safe to say that everyone in the huge tent was well satisfied that even then he had had his money's worth.

The Old Home Singers, after their performance of last night, are sure of a warm welcome if they ever return to Peterborough at a future date.

Lecture on Democracy.

The lecturer of the evening was Dr. Arthur Walwyn Evans, of Wales, and his subject, "What Western Democracy Has Done fror Me." Dr. Evans is a slight boyish looking man but as a lecturer few will equal him He is a rapid-fire talker and thoroughly understands what he is talking about. Most lecturers handling the subject of social reformation are inclined to become dry and prosey but not so Dr. Evans. He kept his hearers' attention without any apparent effort for an hour and a quarter and some of his stories and anecdotes were most amusing.

He began with a tirade on nationalism, but admitted that no nation could get along without a certain degree of this feeling. He declared that the nationalism of Europe was mostly created by a crowd of jingos who were all operating for self aggrandisement. America was compared to Europe and the lecturer expressed the opinion that the people of the United States and Canada should profit by the experiences of European countries during the past thousand years.

Dr. Evans defined the democracy of Canada and the United States as a great fraternity or brotherhood where all men were equal and declared that this democracy was equalled no place in the world with the possible exception of New Zealand.

In his description of an Englishman at a ball game the lecturer gave one of the finest exhibitions of real up-to-the-minute baseball slang ever heard in Peterborough. He made little of the bragging, flag-waving class of Americans and declared that they were greatly in the minority. The people of Canada have never realized just what good neighbors the people of the United States and ourselves really are. Since the war this is being more generally understood than before, and Dr. Adams could see a lasting friendship which would develop into a veritable brotherhood between the two nations.

Tonight the musical part of the program will be contributed by the Chas. Edward Clarke Co. and the lecturer will be Dr. George Adams, of Montreal, whose subject will be "David Lloyd George."

Have your supper this evening at the Sacred Heart Social. Admission, including supper, 25 cents. Begins at 5 p.m

LOCAL BOARD OF TRADE IS ALREADY PUBLIC FACTOR

Represented Today at Special Sitting of Railway Commissioners at Ottawa—Thomas Adams, Town Planner, to be Invited Here

The Peterborough Board of Trade is to be prominent today at the special sittings of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada when evidence in connection with Clause 9 of the Canadian Car Service Rules is to be heard.

Evidence is also to be taken on an application from the railways for a supplement to Rule C and the privilege of charging car rental on cars delayed on through bills of lading (export trade).

Mr. W. S. Campbell, chairman of the Transportation Committee and Mr. Ryerson Ritchie are in attendance as representatives of the Peterborough Board.

The Toronto Board of Trade, the Dominion Millers' Association and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association also have deputations in Ottawa to attend the sittings.

The Peterborough Board of Trade seems to have already established itself as a factor in the public interest and in this effort it is the authoratative representative of business Peterborough.

The special hearing was granted on the petition of the Board of Trade Committee on Transportation, composed of W. S. Campbell, Chairman, E. Bruce Fowler, Homer Meyers, H. E. Hodgens and George Macdonald.

In future all applications from the railways for alterations in the present system of tolls and charges will be automatically issued to the Peterborough Board of Trade and from all appearances will be dealt with promptly and effectively.

The projected National Research Institute is to be looked into by Messrs Campbell and Ritchie because of its supposed influence upon local problems of industry throughout the Province and Dominion.

Mr. Ritchie will also call upon Mr. Thomas Adams, the Government Town Planning Advisor, attached to the Commission of Conservation, to extend the Board's invitation to visit Peterborough.

The general plan for the improvement of Peterborough's parks, playgrounds, parkways, beaches and streets is to be submitted to Mr. Adams for study and he is likely to fix a date for his first official consultation in Peterborough, when he will probably indicate specifically what is practical and attainable to the Board of Trade Committee on City Plan.

GIFTS TO RETURNED MEN

On Friday evening, July 4, a very large gathering took place at Lang, to fittingly express the appreciation of the residents of the service of the soldiers of that district and cordially welcome them back again. Col. Johnston acted as chairman, in his customary capable manner. Short, interesting addresses were given by Revs. Honey and McEachern of Keene, also Rev. Knight, of Cannington, former popular pastor of Keene. Pleasing musical numbers were interspersed, duets by Miss Bryce and Mrs. McEachern, also by Messrs Weir and Moore, and in instrumental numbers by the Graham and Miller orchestra.

Col. Johnston then asked the following boys to the platform:—Pte Amos Edwards, Pte. Wesley Edwards, Pte. Eric Kimble, Corp Adam Stark, Corp Stuart Davidson, Pte. Jas. Edwards, Pte Nelson, Spiers, Pte. David Knox, Pte Oscar Weiss, Sergt. Fred Moore, Gunner, Stanley Johnston

Mrs Cameron then read the following address and each was presented with a fob with locket suitably engraved, by Miss M Miller

Mr Chairman, returned soldiers, ladies and gentlemen

Eight months ago, all but a week the last hostile shot was fired on the western front, and a week ago the terms of peace were dictated at Versailles, but not until 7,000,000 men were buried in Europe and 20,000,000 more marked with wounds and disease

Out of such a struggle you have had the good fortune to return home alive, and as a community we welcome you with heartfelt thanks to God for your home coming, and to you for the part you played in the most terrible conflict ever waged on behalf of the world's liberty

Generation after generation of school-children, not only those of Ontario and the rest of Canada, but in every part of the earth, will be taught to admire the discipline, valor and innate worth of the victors of Ypres, Vimy Ridge, Passechendaele and Cambrai.

Perhaps, we at home, do not fully realize all that is meant by war the monotonous training, the heart-breaking delays, the first experience of the trenches, the rain, the mud, the cold, the strain of long bombardment, and patrolling in No Man's Land, reliefs on dark rainy nights, harassed by machine gun fire, high explosive and gas shells, the dreary, desolate billets in barns, ruined houses and cellars, the feeling that existence will never be any different until one gets a "blighty" or goes "west." This was a part of your life This was in part what war meant. Through those experiences you so bore yourselves, that you share in the untarnished fame of the Canadian Corps, that never lost a trench, never lost a gun and never failed in the assault.

From war you have come to peace. The same qualities that made you foremost among the fighting men of all the world will enable you to succeed in civil life, as you have already succeeded under conditions infinitely more trying.

The gathering this evening is the third of its kind held at Lang, but the feelings of those present are distinctly different from what they were on those former ocasions. Then, as now, we rejoiced; then, as now, we marveled that our hero of the evening had returned to us alive from 'over there'; and then, as now, we tried to show our gratitude for playing the part among those who were fighting for us in France and Belgium; but then, we met with hearts torn between joy and fear—joy at the return of the one, fear for the fate of the many still in the ranks It is not always easy to "rejoice with them that do rejoice," when the fear for the loved ones lies like lead on the heart. But since that time peace and victory have crowned our arms.

Do not think we forget your fellow comrades When our meeting was one of memorial for one who was not to come home, we were sad and we sympathized with those bereaved but so long as our country still had great efforts to make, we felt we must think only of the glory of the passing of those who died for their country that she might live. It was their work to help Canada find her soul.

Now, perhaps, the feeling changes a little and when some of the boys come home we at last understand that others are not coming, and lonesomeness creeps upon us. But their example is ever clearly before us as a beacon, and the best in us reaches out in reverence for, and gratitude to them.

So now, we have great pleasure in presenting you with these little gifts hoping they will convey to you our thanks for the past and best wishes for the future

Signed on behalf of the community.

EDITH ARMSTRONG,
ALEX KEITEL,
T S EASON

Each soldier expressed his gratitude for the gift received. In the absence of Pte David Knox and Sergt Fred Moore their mothers were asked to accept the gifts on their behalf.

Russell-Townsend Finally Get Contract

Ald. Crowe—I want it distinctly understood that I'm in favor of Barber's plan throughout, without consideration of the steel acrh suggestions."

Ald Crowe—"Yes, optional; but dear knows who'll be alive when the bridge is built."

Ald. Turner remarked that rather than see the bridge question tied up he would vote either way. He had every confidence in the Russell-Townsend, but the difference between them and the Canadian Engineering Co is large. Still he did not believe the former Co. would exceed their estimate to any appreciable extent

The Mayor—"What guarantee have we that they will not go over their estimate?"

Ald. Turner—Because they have never exceeded their estimates but once, and they are experienced bridge builders.

Ald. McIntyre explained that he did not vote either way because he had always held out for a fixed sum, and the Canadian Engineering Co's guaranteed price would leave council on the short side.

Ald Gainey said he had voted all along for a lump sum contract; but others previous in his support in that policy are not voting for a cost plus tender with no guaranteed cost." We had a lump sum tender (from Conroy) and a low one a that" He was in favor of proceeding with the approaches by day labor and leaving the centre arch for later decision. "If we run short of money before the bridge is completed the ratepayers can be asked for enough to finish it. He added that he had heard all tenderers had asked Russell-Townsend to supervise their work should they get the contract. At this juncture on motion of Ald Taylor and Turner clause 15, of the Report—the bridge clause—was eliminated, the report then adopted and the bridge qestion referred to general business.

The Mayor in Doubt

Ald. Edgar and Turner in general business moved their resolution in favor of Russell-Townsend, which eventually carried as previously reported.

In moving this resolution Ald Edgar pointed out that acceptance of the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co's estimate would leave Council short of enough cash to finish the work by at least $12,000.

Since hearing the Leonard Construction Co.'s declaration that the bridge could not be built from Mr Barber's plans for less than about $325,000, the Mayor could not entertain faith in the Russell-Townsend Co., keeping any where near their estimate "I'll stay with the Canadian Engineering Co and their guarantee unless the Russell-Townsend give some cost guarantee," added his worship.

On Holiday Bent

Mr Charles Townsend replied that Mr. Naven and he had not come with any other proposition. "We are on a holiday, and dropped in to see how you gentlemen transact the city's business." (Laughter.)

Mr. Townsend went on to say that his company tendered on a cost plus basis as asked to do; and other propositions had been entertained after their figures had been revealed. They absolutely refused to give figures paralleling in any shape those of their competitors after having given their word, as business men of honor, that they believed they [illegible] build the bridge for $286,860 and asking a fee of $29,500.

"This fee," Mr. Townsend said, included loan of plant, engineering, superintendence, etc. and to Ald. Garside—"We'll load up a car with picks, shovels, wheelbarrows and such like small tools for use on the bridge since you have not those tools on hand, as we expected the city would have We have not changed from our original stand and figures, and for that we are to be congratulated rather than criticised. Other cities are letting work on the cost plus basis. Then what is Peterborough to be afraid of? If we have to go deeper for the foundations of those piers than the specifications call for, the city will have to pay, as it would the other fellow." As to responsibility, Mr Townsend argued that the city should assume responsibility for the cost of its work, arising from unforeseen conditions; it is the city's work, not that of the contractors. As a parting shot Mr Townsend declared that while other competing firms had approached him with a view to securing his superintendence of the bridge construction should they get the contract, there was never any question of Russell-Townsend hooking up with any competitor.

In further discussion Mr Townsend agreed to furnish all the small tools, such as picks, shovels, wheelbarrows for the firm's fee of $29,500 And he pointed out that while the Canadian Engineering Co. ask but $28,000 in fees and for use of plant, they stipulate that the city shall pay for the steam pile driver and shovel.

Defeated Resolutions

By Ald. Morrison That the Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co. be awarded the contract on the terms specified in the Board of Works report. Lost on a tie division.

For—Ald. Hamilton, Morrison, Taylor, Crowe and the Mayor. Ald McIntyre did not vote.

By Ald Gainey and Crowe—That the work be done by day labor, a superintendent advertised for, and the centre span left in abeyance. Lost

For—Aldw. Gainey, Crowe and McIntyre

To Lose No Time

The bridge is now practically let to the Russell-Townsend people, and Wednesday night Council will pass on a bylaw to authorize an agreement with the contractors for the execution of the work. This was the motion of Ald Phelan and Turner.

It was agreed that the City Engineer, Engineer Barber and Council, together with a third party if necessary, shall decide on the actual saving effected should a steel centre arch be constructed in lieu of one of reinforced concrete.

Throws Bouquet

Ald Crowe declared Ald Hamilton to be congratulated on switching his vote to settle this vexed question, a course he would have pursued himself had it been necessary.

FRIEND FAILED TO RECOGNIZE HIM

FARMER LOOKS LIKE DIFFERENT MAN SINCE TANLAC BUILT HIM UP

"There's been such a remarkable change in me that my friend who haven't seen me since I began taking Tanlac, don't know me on first sight," was the statement made by William Porter, a well known farmer of Hanna City, Illinois, R.F.D., No. 2, while in the Sutliff & Case Drug Store at Peoria, recently.

"So many of my neighbors were telling me how well I'm looking these days," he continued, "that I got on the scales to see how much I had gained in weight and was surprised myself to find that I actually pull down forty three pounds more than I did the day I started on Tanlac going up from one hundred and seventeen pounds to one hundred and sixty Why, even my wife has been astonished and says she can't understand how a medicine could do what Tanlac has done for me.

"My stomach had been all out of whack for sixteen years and, as nothing ever helped me, I had about come to the place where I was ready to quit trying Many a time after eating I have had such awful cramps in my stomach that I thought I would die I would swell up with gas, I would be so dizzy for hours that my head seemed to be spinning around like a top and I couldn't walk. I finally got so I was afraid to eat anything except something very light, as anything the least bit heavy would bring on one of these terrible spells of cramps. I couldn't sleep but little at night, always felt worn out in the mornings, and what little work I did on the farm was a drag on me I would be so weak and played out by the middle of the day that my knees would knock together as I walked I was constipated all the time, had sick headaches, and was so nervous, weak and miserable that I just felt like giving up the fight.

"During those sixteen years I spent close to three thousand dollars for treatment and medicines, but nothing ever helped me until I got Tanlac. I was so discouraged that I couldn't see any hope of ever getting better. One day I said to my wife: 'Do you reckon this Tanlac, I read so much about, would help me?' So we talked it over and I got a bottle. "Well, what that bottle and nine others together have done for me has astonished everybody that knew my condition. Why, I don't feel like the same man and look so different that I have to stop my friends who haven't seen me in some time and tell 'em who I am. Things that used to nearly kill me when I ate them don't hurt me now a particle. I sleep like a log every night—wake up when the birds begin singing around the house—and I feel like a boy again, full of life and energy. I hop out of bed in the mornings, hungry as a bear, eat more breakfast than I used to eat all day, and go to work feeling fine, and can do as big a day's work as I ever could in my life I am now as well as anybody and I believe Tanlac will do the same for anyone else in the same fix as I was."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in field by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lake-Fowler's Corners by W A Hunter, in Geiert by A J Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

TRIPLETS IN THE TWO PETERBOROS

CITIES OF SAME NAME EACH RECORD TRIPLETS IN MONTH OF JUNE.

By a strange coincidence the two Peterborough cities in the known world—the one in England and the other here in Canada—celebrated June, the month of weddings, by recording the birth of triplets within their gates

In this connection the London, England, Daily Mail, announced that Mrs Courten, of Peterborough, had given birth to two girls and a boy in the month of June, within a few minutes of each other, and this city's press announced that in the same month Mrs Albert Doris had contributed at one time three lusty babes to Peterborough's (Canada) population

Ald Gainey, ever loyal to his own city and its needs, took occasion of this latter event last night to suggest in Council that the city make some tangible recognition of Mrs. Doris' method of increasing the city's population To the press he remarked that "Here we are, leaving no stone unturned to bring residents into Peterborough, and this citizen contributes three at a time." And Ald Gainey was quite serious, too, in his movement for Council's practical acknowledgment of the event Council took no action, however

FOUR YEARS WERE LOST OUT OF THIS MAN'S LIFE

When Pte. Quickwitt Put Off His Uniform He Found That Methods in Industrial World Had Changed Since He Enlisted.

Over four years out of Quickwitt's young life had been spent overseas, in trench and muddy field, in billet and hospital. Here he had been known as Pte. Quickwitt.

The new suit of civies which changed him from a fighting man to a humble civilian left him with a feeling of strangeness and incompetence.

They had promised him his old job down at the steel works. It was the first job he had ever held. Now he was to return. He went on his way to the factory. Everything looked strange to him. There was a new foreman, and a new man at the gate. Strange machinery roared and whirred overhead.

The first week was interminably long. Work seemed monotonous, and Quickwitt's fingers refused to be nimble. He thought of the speed with which he had handled cartridges at the front. Several times the foreman warned him during the first ten days that he was slow in picking up hiswork. By the end of two weeks the complaint was registered that Quickwitt seemed to pay no attention to his job. He was accused of loitering unnecessarily, and several altercations took place between him and the foreman.

"Chaps changed a lot it seems to me," said one of the old hands, discussing Quickwitt's behaviour. "It isn't s though he had been sassed or had anything that would affect his head, yet he just acts deliberately and down-right foolish over some things."

Quickwitt meanwhile wandered around. He had tried a job and failed. At present he didn't feel up to a second attempt. The world looked to be out of gear to him. Why couldn't people understand a fellow and give him a chance?

In such a mood he crossed the path of a Unit Service Officer of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment.

"How did you like your job in the factory before the war;" asked the D.S.C.R. man.

"Oh, fine."

"Well, don't you think if you had stayed you would like it again?"

"Might, but it isn't the same. Evrything is changed."

"Of course it has. What did you expect? Do you think Canada stood still while you were fighting over there? The country wouldn't be worthy of you boys if she had, that's progress."

And he related a few of the incidents of the past three weeks.

The Service Office was a man who moved quickly. Within an hour he was down in the factory building chatting with the manager and head foreman about soldiers in general.

"Employ any returned men here? How do you find them?" were his opening questions. Then he let the factory owner talk and finally brought orward the case of Quickwitt.

"You mean to be good to the returned men. You have several working for you and you cite the instance of two who are doing well to refute he case of Quickwitt," sized up the D.S.C.R. man in closing, "but let me just point out one fact in this connection. Neither of the men you mention had been overseas longer than eight months. They did their bit—however, just as faithfully and well as Quickwitt, but do you see the difference as we see it. Close upon five years out of Quickwitt's life are lost to him as far as business goes. Remember that while he was overseas your world did not stand still. You have gone ahead, in methods, in men, and in machinery, with the result that he has four years of progress with which to compete and four years of knowledge to gain.

"Thats true," said the foreman, who was somewhat pleased to think that their progress had been so noted. "I never thought of that before."

"Do you know where that chap is? Well, send him back again and we will have another trial together. I guess the fact is that every returned man must be treated differently."

"Good for you," commented the D.S.C.R. Officer, as he turned to locate Quickwitt.

"It should not take long to convince you employers that the man who helped hold back the Hun overseas is capable of holding down his own line in the homeland. All we ask for him is: 'Don't put up too much barbed wire'."

MILLION BOTTLES OF RHINE WINE

Coblenz, July 8. — The American officers' club here closed its doors after six months of conviviality. When the Americans took over the club from the Germans there was a stock of about a million bottles of wine, when the Americans gave up the club this million had been exhausted and fresh supplies had been brought in.

This consumption by officers of the American army of occupation and their guests in their club is, of course, far from the total number of bottles emptied by them. A relatively small number of the officers of the whole army gathered in the Coblenz club. I heard an expert estimate that the million bottles were perhaps one-sixth of what the officers of the army had drunk.

When I asked this officer for an estimate of the number of bottles of "Rhine sunshine" the whole army had consumed, including every one of the doughboys and sergeants' clubs and cafes, he threw up his hands in despair.

FARMER'S WIFE HURT

Thrown Off Rake and Dragged Some Distance.

Owen Sound, July 8.—Mrs. Richard McLean of Keppel township is laid up at present as a result of serious injuries sustained on Friday last. She was in the hay fields driving a horse rake, when the horses became frightened and started to run. She was thrown to the ground in front of the prongs of the horse rake, and was dragged for some distance before the teeth caught in her clothing and passed over her. Mrs. McLean probably owes her life to this, and as it was, she was badly shaken up and bruised, receiving also a number of painful cuts. She was unconscious for several hours, and is still unable to move. The horses stopped at the stable, with practically no damage to the rake.

THEATRICAL

"Almost Married" Is Latest Allison Play

BRILLIANT METRO COMEDY-DRAMA TO BE SHOWN AT THE GRAND THEATRE.

"Almost Married," from the pen of E. V. Durling, is the latest comedy-drama in which the clever Metro star, May Allison, will be seen. This play, which will be shown at the Grand theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is filled with breezy and unexpected situations.

The young star enacts the role of a girl of the Swiss Alps who meets the son of a millionaire. A romance ensues which, however, is rudely shattered. The rare beauty of her voice and face attracts the attention of a musical director and he transplants her from her mountain home to the heart of New York where she shines in the front ranks of a popular review.

Here she meets the boy's father and the situations which result are amazing and amusing and cause untold complications. It is a play which will win popular favor.

Miss Allison is surrounded by a cast of distinguished players among whom are Walter I. Percival, Frank Currier, Harry Ratenbury, James Warton, James and Hugh Fay. The adaptation was made by Luther Reed and the production was directed by Charles Swickard and made under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, director general.

Emmy Whelen Seen In Smart Comedy Drama

DELIGHTFUL METRO PLAY TO BE SEEN AT THE GRAND THEATRE.

Emmy Wehlen, in "His Bonded Wife," a smart, up-to-date comedy drama of society life, will be the attraction at the Grand theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday. In this picture Miss Wehlen is supported by a cast of well known and distinguished players, headed by Creighton Hale in the leading role.

The story is that of a beautiful young society debutante who wishes to be sure that the man she marries is in love with her for her own beautifulself and not for her wealth. With this idea in view she leaves her luxurious home and lives the quiet simple life of a girl in ordinary circumstances. Here she meets and falls in love with a young architect who is also in love with her. She still poses as a poor girl however, and the unusual complications which arise impart many humorous situations, as well as many semi-tragic ones—to the clever play.

The role of the young architect, Phil Hazzard, is played by Creighton Hale, one of the best known leading men of the stage and screen and Frank Currier, dean of Metro players, is seen as Digby Morse, the Father of Doris. Warda Howard plays Doris's sister and William Fredricks, the sheriff. The part of the cook is taken by William H. St. James.

AT THE GRAND

"Good Night Paul!" attracted quite a number to the Grand last night. The story of the picture portrays the uncrushable spirit of a woman who would not yield to the maze of difficulties which net around her, but "plays the game" and after all comes out victorious. The parts are all cleverly depicted, but Constance Talmadge is of beauty and personality, who is an actress who knows the art well. It is a series of happenings arising from an idea at once unique and simple producing a picture with sufficient shade of individuality to make it interesting. "Good Night Paul!" does not make its appeal to the intellect exactly nor is it strongly emotional. Its a clever mixture of brains and sentiment with enough humor thrown in to relieve the tension and of course the usual amount of necessary jazz effect. The one thing that would hurt the popularity of the play — the probability that not one out of every hundred ever experienced the feelings under stress of a like predicament, is counteracted by an equally safe wager that not one out of every hundred can guess rightly how its going to turn out when it begins. Running through the story is a silver thread of romance, which helps largely in making "Good Night, Paul!" the pleasing performance it is.

CHEESEMAKER IS DROWNED IN BAY

JOHN YORK MEETS HIS DEATH WHILE VISITING FRIENDS AT BELLEVILLE.

Belleville, July 8. John York, cheesemaker at Acme Cheese Factory, on the 3rd concession of Sidney, was drowned while swimming in the Bay of Quinte off John's Creek, about three miles west of the city. The body was recovered after four hours, in water 16 feet deep.

Mr York, who was twenty-eight years of age, was visiting friends at a camp at John's Creek. He went out in a canoe several hundred yards to a boat in which were several girl friends. He tied his canoe to the boat, dived into the water, and swam around some time. Suddenly he said: "Girls do not go very far I am getting tired." They threw a rope, but he sank without further warning. Help was secured from shore, but no trace of York was found until his body was recovered by grappling irons. He was a native of England and his relatives are unknown.

LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY

BUT THE BRITISH AUTHORITIES SEEM TO HAVE BRIDGED THE DISTANCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, July 8.—A copy of memorandum setting forth conditions in Tipperary county, Ireland, issued yesterday at Dublin by the Chief Secretary for Ireland, in outlawing all Sinn Fein organizations and Irish volunteers from Tipperary county, has been received here from British sources in London. The issuance of the memorandum was announced in last night's cable despatches. The memorandum recites a series of lawless acts and quotes from two documents seized by the British authorities in Ireland. The quotations given from these two documents deal with the boycott of the police and measures to be taken against them. Copies of a Sinn Fein proclamation seized by the police in Tipperary were said to have declared the south riding of Tipperary to be a Sinn Fein military area, and proclaimed six regulations placing the county under Sinn Fein control.

WILLARD FADES OUT AMID JEERS OF FORMER FRIENDS

Wept as He Left Ring and Made His Way Through Hostile Crowd Who Called Him Quitter and Coward.

Toledo, July 5. A pitiless crowd jeered at the man who has been champion as he stumbled out of the ring. He was all alone. Not even a second remained to give him a touch of the elbow on his road toward oblivion.

"Yap!" they screamed at him "Coward!" "Quitter!"

Tears ran down his crushed and swollen face and mingled with his blood. One eye was closed entirely. The other was so swollen that he could barely see. He felt his way through the hostile crowd like some great animal seeking a friendly thicket. His mouth was open. His lips were cut and broken. An animal odor of perspiration rose from his wet body.

"Why don't you die in the ring," men yelled at him and shook scornful hands in his face. He reeled on, soundless, panting, unaided. It was a most dramatic finish to a fight that abounded in cruel drama.

At last he paused with an effect of despair, and then Walter Monaghan came to him. Monaghan wound a towel around his gashed face to hide the wounds from the laughing, sneering mob. So he passed from public view.

Twenty minutes before, he had been leaning against the ropes, enormous, brawny, superbly confident, smiling at the crowd. They cheered him then, and called him champion. It was with an air of certainty and condescension that he had crossed the ring to shake hands with his antagonist. In that little time he had been beaten so soundly that one wonders why he had ever been called champion. A fortune had passed from his hands. More so, suspicious and unkindly. He had made few friends. Today the world laughs at him.

His boasted left was slow and uncertain and his right was weak. It wasn't a haymaker, that right. It was hardly a cabbage digger. He showed no fighting spirit in his fighting. But he could take punishment. It is only fair to the man who once was champion to say that.

No one had a chance to find out whether he was in condition or not. The fight was over too soon. He certainly was in condition to fight the three rounds the fight lasted. Nor had any one a chance to find out whether his age militated against him. Even a man of thirty-eight could fight as long as he did, having been trained as he was.

What whipped Willard was that he was a big man against a fighting man. Dempsey fought with a fury that more than made up forty pounds difference in weight and the five inches in height.

"Willard didn't look so big when he went down," a Dempsey friend said.

Imagine, if you can, what a brutal hammering this great bulk of a man took in that deadly first round. Dempsey is credited with a wallop that matches that of Fitzsimmons at his best.

DEMPSEY WEARS STOLEN DIAMOND

BUT COSTLY RING WAS PURCHASED IN GOOD FAITH

Detroit, Mich., July 8.—According to the Detroit Detective Bureau, Jack Dempsey, the new world's champion is now wearing a diamond ring that was the property of a wealthy local automobile man less than two weeks ago. The sparkler was purchased by Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, for $1,200, and by him presented to the champion as a birthday present. The man who brought the diamond from Detroit to Toledo is declared to be one of a gang of four men arrested here last Saturday and Sunday in connection with two holdups which the police say netted nearly $10,000 in diamonds.

Jacob Bernstein, 23, and Harry Mattjsof, 20, two of the men arrested, have confessed to the police that they held up and robbed William H. Martin of the Martin Motor Sales Company, of a diamond stick pin valued $3,500 and $300 in money. Two days after the robbery the diamond ring was purchased by Kearns who paid $1,200 for it. Just what the present status of the case is does not appear, but Dempsey still has the ring.

Sudden Cold Kills Fishes.

It has been proved that sudden cold sometimes causes the death of thousands of fish in the shallow waters of the tropics and subtropics. Many species are so chilled as to become helpless, and either killed directly by drowning or are washed ashore in a comatose state. The phenomenon is known locally as "freezing," although the temperature of the water may be several degrees above the freezing point.

About Islands.

As a rule islands belong to the mainland near which they are located. Guadalope belongs to Mexico, that is the one off the coast of Mexico. Andros, to the United States; Margarita, did belong to Germany, and the peace conference will settle its administration. Fiji belongs to England. The Marshall and Caroline islands also belonged to Germany. Marcus island belongs to Japan. Fanning island belongs to England.

Knocking on Wood.

The superstition of rapping on wood after a boast of a piece of luck is of European origin. The raps were supposed to drive away evil spirits vexed by others' good fortune. The raps later signified the Trinity, and the necessity for rapping on wood was because that was the material of the cross. The expression dates from a custom in vogue five thousand years ago.

Says Whales Once Walked.

Whales used to walk. That is the statement of Prof. d'Arcy Thompson, authority on fishes of the sea, in a lecture on that subject at the Royal Institution, London. He said the whale originally had four feet or fins, but that the two hind ones had simply dwindled away. In bygone ages ancestors of the present family of whales walked about much as seals do.

Wonderful Is Write.

"Oh, Mr. Turnem-Downe," exclaimed Stayupp N. Schibble, "I will admit that my technique may permit of slight improvement, but you must concede that I have a wonderful imagination." "You certainly have, young man," returned the crusty fiction editor, "if you imagine you can sell your bunk to me."

Got Aristocratic Convicts.

Virginia was the only American colony which ever received British convicts, and very few were ever sent there. Most of those sent were political prisoners, and the aristocratic element predominated. In 1676 parliament forbade the transportation of convicts to English colonies in America.

Heligoland May be Used By the Ornithologists As a Sanctuary for Birds

EVER since the signing of the armistice, and, indeed, a much earlier date, a discussion has been going on intermittently as to what is to be done with Heligoland, the little island in the North Sea which served such a sinister purpose during the war as one of Germany's naval bases. Some of the proposals have had much to be said for them, many of them nothing, but among those advanced lately none, surely, can make a more general appeal than that put forward at the annual meeting of the Royal Society for the Protection of Wild Birds, in England, for making Heligoland an ornithological observation station and bird sanctuary under international control.

Heligoland has always been famous for its birds, not only, like so many high-cliffed, rock-girt islands, for its sea birds, but for the multitudes of land birds which sweep over the tiny island in their migratory flights east, west, north, and south.

And it is such a small place; no more than a dot in a wilderness of waters, a little triangular piece of land, just a mile long and barely a third of a mile across, only one-fifth of a square mile in all. Centuries ago, to be sure, it was nearly five times its present size, but until the Germans gained possession of it, in 1892, and built walls around it, the sea forever played sad havoc with the red cliffs of Heligoland, whilst the birds, every year, in their far flight west from the Siberian forests, or south from the Arctic tundra, found the little island in the middle of the North Sea ever grown smaller. It is still large enough, however, and more than large enough to serve its purpose, and it is, of course, no new purpose. As far as a sanctuary goes, the seabirds, at any rate, have just made it this for centuries, without any regard at all for the humans who have come and gone. They were there, shrieking around its crags, when the goddess Hetha, the special object of veneration among the Angles of the mainland, had a temple on Heligoland; when the pagan King Radbod ruled there, and when St. Willibrod came to the island, in the seventh century, preaching Christianity. And so it has continued ever since.

It was not, however, until the nineteenth century that the great naturalist, Heinrich Gatke, made Heligoland famous as an ornithological observation station. As Mr. Harvie Brown, who writes a preface to Gatke's work, "Heligoland and Ornithological Observatory," tells of him, he studied the subject of the migration of birds and bird life at all seasons at his observatory on the island with little cessation or interruption, day after day, and night for fifty years and more, and from these studies, as he himself says, he was led to recognize that the little island presented an undreamed-of-wealth of material, valuable to this so mysterious study, and indeed was in this respect "superior to the proudest empire of the earth."

But Heligoland is first and last a station, a place of observation on the great highway. None of the birds, as Gatke puts it, "finds the goal of his journey on this bare and rugged isle; all pass it in untiring haste. Spring here is not ushered in by the jubilant return of the feathered songsters to the longed-for nesting homes, nor does autumn strew her golden leaves on the path of their departure, silently the flocks pass the inhospitable rock, where no wood or thicket or waving corn fields offer a homely nook for rearing the young brood. Only those grotesque members of the bird world, the auks and the guillemots, find an inapproachable dwelling in its steep and surf-beaten cliffs." All the others, the larks, the starlings, the fieldfares, the dunlins, the golden plovers, the pied wagtails, the missel thrushes, and so on, nearly 400 different kinds of birds, not in hundreds and thousands, but in millions, fly on with never a pause. But if the coming of the birds is not accompanied in Heligoland by all those delights of an awakening countryside, there is a grandeur in their silent passage over the sea from horizon to horizon, as seen from the island, which can hardly be seen so grandly elsewhere. The passage of the world from war to peace may be signalized in many ways, but none could, surely, be more striking than the transforming of the grim naval base of Heligoland into a bird sanctuary.

The Pearl Shell Industry.

The pearl shell industry is largely carried on in Australia, especially in Queensland and other parts of the country. The pearl oyster is found along the northern and western coasts of Australia for a distance of over two thousand miles. On the north coast the pearls taken out are of small size, but the shells themselves are an important commercial product. The Shark Bay pearl industry is carried on both for pearls and shells, usually with the aid of diving apparatus. In tropical Queensland pearl shell-diving is actively pursued, and is by far the most important of the fishing industries. Tortoise shell is also obtained on these coasts. Two different species of mother of pearl are exported from Western Australia, the principal trade being done with the large shell—Meleagrina margaritifera—whose distribution is limited to tropical waters. It is used for the larger manufactured articles, such as knife and fork handles, large buttons, and inlaid work. The largest and finest pearls are obtained from this shell. The second species is the one known locally as the Shark Bay variety—Meleagrina imbricata—which is smaller and used chiefly for the manufacture of small buttons.—Family Herald.

Enough Food in the Ocean To Feed the Entire World If Men Were Fond of Fish

NOW that the seas are open to the pursuits of peace, and the world is sorely in need of food, many problems of ocean geography are likely to be solved in the course of the quest for deep sea rations. The ocean literally teems with food. The man who declared that humanity is a race of herring-catchers might have overstated the case, but that the sea abounds in food-fishes and fishes fit for food is well known. As soon as we begin to study the subject of ocean fisheries, however, we come up short against the fact that what we really know about the inhabitants of the sea is startlingly limited.

It was not so long ago that the fishermen of the North Sea believed that whales brought the herring in toward shallow water—a conclusion they reached from the observation that schools of herring are frequently found in the vicinity of spouting whales. In 1906 there was a failure of the herring fisheries, and the fishermen blamed the situation on the Norwegian whaling vessels operating in that region.

Likewise, it is still a moot question whether or not modern fishing methods tend to deplete the supply, and whether artificial propagation of sea fishes is a sufficient counter-measure. A few years ago a British commission measured the intensity of fishing operations in the North Sea. Trailing bottles were set adrift, and it was found that more than half of them were recaptured. In certain localities they were captured at a rate that indicated 90 per cent. retaken each season. Marked fish yielded largely similar results, and the conclusion was that a food-fish of adult size had at least three to one odds against its getting through the year uncaught.

And yet there is so little precaution in the ocean that even such intensive fishing probably has no effect upon the available adult supply. For instance, the female turbot lays 8,500,000 eggs a year, and the cod has 4,500,000 to her credit. The female flounder lays 1,400,000, the sole 570,000, the haddock 450,000, and the plaice 300,000. The poor herring must be content with a meagre 31,000.

Much remains to be learned about the migration habits of the world's food-fishes. Where do the salmon go after they leave the rivers? Why does the eel, as discovered sometime since by the Danes, go far out to sea, far to the south and west of the Irish coast, to spawn, and how do the countless hordes of delicate elvers find their way around the British Isles and into the continental rivers? Innumerable are the questions like these that the future will reveal to the oceanographers of a new day.

The problem of life in the ocean is one full of interest and pregnant with valuable lessons for mankind. Even at the bottom of the deepest trench in the abysmal region of the sea's bottom, where no ray of the sun ever penetrated, where Stygian night is perpetual, where freezing temperatures never cease and where inconceivable pressures prevail, the miracle of life still goes on.

Eerie creatures exist in these uttermost depths. Here is a fish swimming by with light-giving organs ranged in rows from nose to tail, on port and starboard sides, a fantastic miniature of an ocean liner alight from stem to stern, gliding noiselessly through the perpetual night. There is another, with a well-defined searchlight with which to explore the blackness around. Here is a breathing caricature of a mermaid with binoculars, and there a creature whose eyes are upon the end of long stalks reaching out from the head like sunflowers from the ground.

An Obvious Retort.

Once only, it is said, did Sir F. E. Smith lay himself open to a retort from a witness he was cross-examining. It was in the Divorce Court, and the man in the witness-box was a nervous little elderly clerk.

"Have you ever been married?" began Sir Frederick.

"Yes," stammered the clerk, "once."

"Whom did you marry?"

"A-a-woman, sir."

"Of course, of course," snapped the future Lord Chancellor. "Did you ever hear of anyone marrying a man?"

"Yes, sir—my sister did!"

Queen Victoria's Maiden Name.

Members of the royal families have no surname; that is, no family name such as ordinary people are known by. There is a good deal of discussion on the subject and Mr. Cokayne, an authority, says the prevailing idea that the family name of the House of Hanover, to which Queen Victoria belonged, was Guelph, may be dismissed as absurd, that having been the Christian name of a medieval duke of Bavaria, whose sister in 1040 married the Marquis of Este, and it is from that couple that the House of Hanover descended. Hence d'Este comes nearest to being the maiden name of Queen Victoria.

Hun Cigarettes.

For some time past the cigarette in Germany has been growing thinner and thinner until at present the weight of tobacco is little greater than of paper. The pre-war cigarette in Germany, when sold by the ounce, ran about 16 to the ounce. Since the early part of this year the cigarette has "faded" until it takes more than 32 to make an ounce.

FIGHT PICTURES MAY BE BARRED

OFFICIALS SAY THEY ARE NOT FIT FOR EXHIBITION IN PUBLIC.

Columbus, O., July 8.—The Willard-Dempsey pictures may never be seen in public. In Ohio, at least, they will not be placed on exhibition. The Ohio Censor Board today officially rejected the pictures as being unfit to be exhibited in public.

The probability of the pictures being shown in other States is believed to depend upon what construction is to be placed upon the Rodenberg Act, which prohibits prize-fight pictures being handled in interstate commerce.

If the Rodenberg Act does not bar pictures of boxing bouts, and the Willard-Dempsey affair is construed under the act as a boxing bout, then it is believed here that the pictures may be shown in other States if approved by the State Censor Boards. Under the Ohio State law the bout was considered to be a boxing match.

VETERANS' BUILDING FUND REPORT SHOWS A DEFICIT

Amount Required to Completely Finish New Hall on Murray Street is Over Five Thousand Dollars

The following report of the building fund of the Great War Veterans' Association was adopted last night at the regular meeting of the association:

By curtailing all expenditures and cutting out a lot of the work originally planned the report shows a deficit of $2,062.30. This is taking for granted that all promises yet uncollected from the recent drive, amounting to $719.85, will be paid. It is regretted that the present experience of the collectors, that a lot of these promises are not worth the paper they are written on. The amount requested by the Drive Committee was $15,000, this was based on estimates complied by the association. The result after the work is all completed, shows that such an amount was necessary for the purchasing, building and equipping of these rooms. The utmost care and economy has been practiced and thanks are due the contractors and merchants generally, for the extremely low quotations and charges on all the supplies furnished. It is regretted that there is a debt on the building, still the committee wish to thank the citizens who contributed in any manner to the success of the building and the fund.

NON-RESIDENT PUPILS MAY BE EXCLUDED FROM P. C. I.

Institute Already Crowded—Large Number of Promotions From Public Schools Expected This Year—Lower Forms Will Be Congested—Miss Jory Appointed School Nurse For Another Year.

That the Collegiate Institute is already over-crowded to the extent that, beginning with the next school year in September was revealed at a regular monthly session of the School Board last evening. Principal H. R. H. Kenner in this connection reported that the senior forms are now carrying really more students than they should, and a phenomenally large number of pupils tried the entrance examinations, at which the papers were so easy that the institute is bound to be flooded with promotions from the public schools the next term. The only way to make room for the coming new entrants in September would be to exclude non-resident pupils from forms IA, IB, IC and commercial I. Mr. Kenner suggested.

On motion of Messrs. Gordon, Principal Kenner was authorized to exclude non-resident pupils the coming school year, should such a course be found necessary to relieve the attendance conjestion.

A First-Class Teacher.

S. J. Graham, teacher of junior classics in the P. C. I. wrote that he did not think it just that after nearly four years' service he is as yet only receiving the schedule minimum salary. Next term his salary will be $1500, which sum would have to be paid a new teacher of experience taking his position, and he respectfully offered that he is entitled to further consideration in the way of salary than the minimum scale.

Mr. G. N. Gordon pointed out that when Mr. Graham joined the teaching staff the Board's salary schedule was much lower than now, the high cost of living having subsequently warranted its increase to the present standard.

Principal R. H. Kenner recommends Mr. Graham a teacher of commendable capability, and his complaint was referred to the committee on appointments, of which Mr. G. O. Cameron is chairman.

Appointed Permanently.

Dr. Neal wanted to know the Board's intentions regarding Miss May Jary, who has been filling Miss Kennedy's position as school nurse since the latter volunteered her services as nurse in the war.

The Board has had no word from Miss Kennedy as to her returning, said Dr. Neal, and in all fairness to Miss Jary the latter's standing with the Board should be made clear. If Miss Kennedy is to be re-instated such reinslation should be made now, as the Board will not meet again till September. Quite naturally, Miss Jary is anxious to know her standing so that she could seek another position between now and school opening next fall should Miss Kennedy be returnig to her old position.

In the absence of communication from Miss Kennedy in this connection, at a time when the school staff is engaged, the following resolution carried unanimously.

"That Miss Jary be appointed school nurse from now until the summer of 1920."

Mr. Gordon said the appointment was a too important one to leave in abeyance.

MILKMEN MUST DISPLAY NAMES ON DELIVERY RIGS PLAINLY

Delinquents After July 27th Will Be Prosecuted—Citizens Should Not Dump Water in Garbage Receptacles—Water Will Not Burn.

The local Board of Health last evening pressed Mr. and Mrs. E. Lovell to accept the position of caretaker and cook respectively, at the Isolation Hospital, (Queen Mary's). Those positions will be accepted if room can be found to store a quantity of new furniture for which Mr. and Mrs. Lovell would have no service at the hospital.

The Holidays

Acting matron Miss Price's intimation that Miss Kinkard and herself would take their holidays during August, each two weeks, was approved.

Patients at Hospital

Miss Price reported the number of patients admitted into Queen Mary Hospital during June as follows: Scarlet fever 1, diphtheria 1, small pox 2, and the number in the hospital on June first 3, making a total of 7.

Outstanding Accounts

A statement of outstanding accounts showed bills owing for attendance, from 1917 to present year, inclusive to amount to $689.90. These patients of course, were not indigents, and the accounts went to the city solicitor for collection.

Relief officer Miller is to be consulted as the accounts of what children from the St. Vincent orphanage treated in St. Mary's Hospital, are chargeable to the municipalities from which the said children came.

Milkmen Must Obey

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton reported that some milkmen are apparently indifferent to displaying on the side of their delivery rigs their names conspicuously, as provided by by-law.

The Board decided that after July 27th all delinquents in this respect will be prosecuted.

Wet Garbage

The Sanitary Inspector also complained that some of the garbage, especially that from south city, positively is so wet that it will not burn. Citizens apparently do not drain their garbage and dump water into their garbage receptacles. Conditions are worse this year in that respect than ever before.

The Board asks that citizens make a note of this.

There were present chairman Ex-Mayor Buller, H. Morgan, the Mayor, Dr. Amys and Sanitary Inspector Stapleton.

RURAL MAIL MEN FOR STRAIGHT PAY

$60 PER MILE OF ROUTE AND NO CONTRACT LETTING.

Ottawa, July 9.—After a meeting and listening to addresses by Tom Moore, President of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, and local labor men, the Association of Rural Mail Carriers decided to leave it to its executive to ask the Government to abolish the system of letting rural mail delivery routes by contract, and ask for a straight payment of $60 a year per mile on the route. They will also ask that they be paid $50 a mile a year for 1917 and 1918, the amount paid to them by contract being subtrated.

An interview will be secured with the Postmaster-General today, in the course of which the case of the drivers will be stated. The resolution to act for the increased rate was moved by Mr. Bradley of Leeds and Grenville district and seconded by D. Mcab of White Lake.

EAST WIND HOLDS UP BIG DIRIGIBLE

START ON THE RETURN TRIP IS POSTPONED UNTIL TOMORROW.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Mineola, N. Y., July 9. Again today unfavorable winds from the east prevented the giant dirigible from starting her return trip to England. British officers in charge of R-34 announced that there was no prospect that the big airship would get away before dawn tomorrow. It was made clear, however, that a start would be made at daybreak tomorrow or on Friday. The airship is ready to sail into the air to the east at any time that her commander, Major G. H. Scott, decides that weather reports presage a successful return voyage.

Start For England Before Daybreak

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Mineola, N. Y., July 9.—The British dirigible R-34 will start on its [illegible] flight before daybreak tomorrow, it was announced positively this afternoon by Major Scott, her commander. He expects to get away, he said, between three and four o'clock.

SIR THOMAS WHITE

Minister of Finance, who has resigned office.

FINANCE MINISTER WHITE DECIDES TO QUIT CABINET

Germans Ratify Treaty of Peace

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 9. — The German National Assembly in Weimar has passed a resolution ratifying the peace treaty, according to advices received here today. The resolution reads: "The peace treaty signed on June 28th, 1919, as well as the protocol annexed and the special agreements on the military occupation of Rhineland are herby ratified. The law becomes effectivef rom the date of its proclamation."

Want All Nations In New League

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, July 9. A demand that all nations of the world be made eligible to the League of Nations are expressed in a resolution unanimously adopted here today at the first annual congress of the Pan-American Confederation of Labor by delegates from ten countries.

Will Return to Private Life as Soon as Successor is Appointed

Ottawa, July 9. The Prime Minister's problem of Cabinet reorganization has been made much more difficult of solution by the decision of the Finance Minister, Sir Thomas White, to retire from political life. The Finance Minister finds that his private affairs make it necessary to give up a brilliant political career, one of splendid service during the past eight years and a promise of even a more brilliant career in the future. There is no difference of opinion on policy or administration between him and his colleagues, and it is only the strongest private reasons that has forced him to arrive at this decision.

During the past few days many of his colleagues in the Cabinet and members of the Senate and Commons have urged on him the necessity of reconsideration of his decision. He has grown in a wonderful degree in popularity and confidence of the Government supporters in Parliament. They feel that this retirement from the country's service at the present time is a national loss. While the task of Finance Minister has been most difficult in the past, it is believed it will be an even greater burden during the next five years. The domestic loan to be floated this year, loans to be placed in the United States, and the revision of the tariff will call for the best talent of the most experienced financier.

Sir Thomas White's successor will have the most difficult financial problems to solve in the history of this country. Members of the Unionist party are urging on Sir Thomas White to remain if only for [illegible] this year. It is believed that, much as he regrets the necessity of withdrawal he believes that it is impossible for him to remain, and that his tenure of office will only be until Sir Robert Borden can select his successor.

NEW GERMAN REPUBLIC WILL NOT REPUDIATE WAR LOANS

Minister of Finance so Declares in Speech to Assembly—Explains How Money Must Be Raised—Large Imposts to be Made on Wealth

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, July 9.—Addressing the German National Assembly at Weimar today Mathias Erzberger, Vice-Chancellor and Minister of Finance, said: "One of the first requirements relative to the restoration of the life of labor is the establishment of orderly finances. I will have nothing to do with suggestions for the annulment of war loans or a declaration of general bankruptcy. My highest aim is to establish justice in the entire taxation system. The income from capital must be taxed much more heavily than the income from work. An inheritance tax and heavy tax levy on property will be the initial steps that will be taken. The empires income must be increased nine hundred per cent. and that of individual states and communes perhaps one hundred per cent. Such enormous charges require fresh measures."

"The burden of taxation will reach an absolutely terrible height," said Erzberger. "A floating debt of 72,000,000,000 marks is a constant danger and the removal of this debt is one of our most urgent tasks. There are two ways in which to do it, either its conversion into a funded loan or its extinction by big levies and a heavy property tax. It is the duty of propertied people not only to bow to the state of compulsion, but to achieve an inward conviction as to the necessity of giving up all riches and all that is superfluous."

CANADIAN GRAIN CANNOT BE EXPORTED BY WAY OF U. S.

American Railway Administration Has Served Notice to This Effect, Order to Hold Good One Year—All Tonnage Across Border Required to Move Crop There—The Situation Is Serious.

W. S. Campbell, chairman of the transportation committee of the Board of Trade, who returned from Ottawa this morning, where he appeared before the Railway Commissioners of Canada on behalf of the Peterborough Board of Trade, speaking on the subjects before the commissioners and the rulings thereon, had this to say:

"The Canadian railways had applied to the Board of Railway Commissioners for permission to charge a car rental of $2.00 per car per day for detention of export traffic at tide water ports after the lapse of twenty days. It was shown that the consignor or consignee had no control over export traffic after the through bill of lading was issued, and since such was the case, the chief commissioner stated that he did not feel disposed to issue an order that would penalize the shipping public for something for which they were not responsible.

"The railways were directed to consult exporters and endeavor to arrive at some scheme acceptable to both, and in the meantime judgment was reserved.

AMERICAN PORTS CLOSED TO CANADA.

"The application for a reduction in the present car rental charges on domestic traffic, which was filed by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Dominion Millers, the Toronto and Peterborough Boards of Trade, did not meet with favor from the commissioners for the reason that sixty-two per cent. of the Canadian grain and grain product was annually exported through American ports. The United States railway administration had given notice that no Canadian grain would be allowed to move through American ports this year, because all the available American ocean tonnage would be required.

"This action taken suddenly, and knowing that we are allowed only thirty per cent. of our own ocean pace for commercial export, points us to the supreme need of our Government taking rigorous means to quickly increase the Canadian merchant marine in order that the products of Canada may not be isolated from the markets of the world. It also teaches us that in the past we have been altogether too dependent upon our neighbors. We all hope the day is not far distant when the Canadian ensign will float over all the high seas carrying Canadian products to the most distant markets of the world.

"The railways are making a determined effort to move box car equipment to the Canadian West to take care of the grain movement, but up to the present they are several thousand cars short of what has been normally required in the past. No Canadian owned cars are allowed to leave the country.

"We are also shown by this the great need for the development of our inland waterways so that this grain may be hauled by water from Fort William and Port Arthur to our tide water ports of Montreal, Quebec, Halifax and St. John.

"In view of the above situation the chief commissioner did not deem it wise to alter the car rental rates this year. It is considered that our present sliding scale is preferable to the new rates just put into effect by the United States, and for the present we will have ot be satisfied with them."

COUNCIL'S HONORARIUM FOR M.H.O. AMYS NOT LARGE ENOUGH

Says the Local Board of Health—Passes Resolution Asking That City's Token of Appreciation Be Supplemented by Another $100—$200 in All.

Mr. Harry Morgan, member of the local Board of Health, expressed his pleasure last evening, at reading in the press that even were the City Council unable to build the Hunter street bridge, they could do something, in the shape of recognizing retiring M. H. O. Amy's valued service to this city in a grant of $100 as evidence of their appreciation. "But," said Mr. Morgan, "they did not go far enough; they might have at least doubled the amount."

Chairman Wm. Buller regretted Dr. Amy's resignation to take effect July 15th, but admired his honorable disposition in at once giving way to his predecessor, Dr. McPherson, who had announced his readiness to reassume the office of Medical Health Officer, vacated by him nearly five years ago to go to the fighting front.

Dr. Amys, Mr. Buller continued, had given the city valued service and much extra time, to his own personal loss, in combating the "flu" epidemic and small pox scare, during which periods he saved this city many a hundred dollars by his indefatigable attentions and precautions in safeguarding the public. He never took any chances, but immediately resorted to isolation of cases, even those in doubt. Incidentally, Mr. Buller thought the doctor had been perfectly justified in refusing attendance on dead-beat patients, for which he was not engaged by the city.

Recommends Another $100.

Mr. Morgan: "We all appreciate that in times of need Dr. Amys worked night and day to the calls of his office."

On motion of Mr. Morgan, seconded by Mr. Buller, the Board recommended that Council make their honorarium $200 instead of $100; not in payment of services rendered, however, but as a token of the city's appreciation of the doctor's successful and untiring efforts at all times in conservation of public health.

This recommendation was carried unanimously.

Dr. Amys made a very fitting reply, in the course of which he fully appreciated the many kind expressions of appreciation showered upon him by the Board, which expressions he valued for more than the $100. At first he had found the position of officer of health a thankless and unappreciated one, generally, but when the public found he treated rich and poor, high and low, alike, they fell in line and complied with his suggestions and directions. He had worked night and day, when duty called, especially during the "flu" epidemic, but had done so cheerfully in the city's health interests.

THE COMING OF THE PRINCE.

THE PRINCE OF WALES will visit Canada in the near future, and already different cities where he is expected to make short calls are preparing civic receptions in his honor. The Prince was never before in this country, but he will not be an entire stranger among the Canadian people. Hundreds of our soldiers met him during his service in the war, and many of the Canadian officers formed his personal acquaintance, the renewal of which will constitute one of the chief pleasures of the tour of His Royal Highness.

The heir-apparent to the British throne is acclaimed on all sides as a true democrat. That being the case, would it not be well during his visit here to treat him like a human being instead of as a scion of royalty exalted above the rank and file of humanity by the accident of birth? That is the reception which the Prince would personally prefer if the choice were left to himself, that is, provided he is as close to the people as reports say. He has shown himself a youth of parts and promise by his service at the front. If he was hedged about by special safeguards, that was another result of his position which he would beyond a doubt have had otherwise.

The Prince would, we take it, prefer to go among the people like the democrat which he is, enjoying himself as any young man would prefer to do. On occasion there must be certain ceremonial honors extended to him, but it is easily possible to exceed even the demands of hospitality to a member of the royal family. Cut out as far as possible the set addresses that are certain to bore even a Prince, who, after all, is considerable of a human being with aspirations and tastes not so different from those of the people who in the ordinary process of time will hail him as their Sovereign Lord.

WHERE POLICE MAY BLUNDER.

SEARCHING THE RESIDENCES of men suspected of having socialistic literature in their possession is a favorite occupation with the police in various parts of Canada these days of industrial turbulency. The representatives of the law should be posted carefully for this duty lest they blunder. It is just possible that in their search some of them may come across a detached copy of the Sermon on the Mount. Unable to identify that famous declaration of principles when encountered apart from the rest of the writings held sacred, the police may reach wrong conclusions and regard as evidence against the suspects something entirely different in its scope. Even a policeman cannot be expected to know all history, either sacred or profane.

THE BRIGHTENING OUTLOOK.

MUCH OF THE LATE NEWS from industrial and political centres of Europe and the United States is pervaded by a spirit of genuine optimism. Germany, for example, instead of plunging into bolshevism and committing moral suicide, realizes the necessity of ratifying the peace treaty immediately and restarting its industrial machinery. The leaders of the majority socialists deprecate the propaganda of insurrection and violence, while the junkers, who talked of defying both the government and the Entente powers in the eastern provinces and making war on Poland, appear to have been squelched. In Great Britain prompt ratification of the treaty is expected as a matter of course, the recent enthusiastic reception to Mr Lloyd George in the House of Commons having dispelled all doubt as to the approval of his work in Paris, says the Chicago News.

Ratification of the treaty, despite its defects, will bring to Europe new hope and faith. Blockades will be lifted, arrangements for the financing of reconstruction will be accelerated and foreign trade will be resumed. The United States, as the Federal Reserve Board says, in common with other competent observers, faces "a successful and prosperous year, with very large output of goods and almost unprecedented financial returns to manufacturers, agriculturists and laborers."

These forecasts are amply supported by current reports from various quarters. Our favorable balance of foreign trade continues to mount. Orders for steel in June were fully fifty per cent. above those for May, and, what is very significant, Europe is beginning to place such orders in this country on a substantial scale. High as are our prices, they are in many instances lower than the European prices. The grain crops are doing well, and the progress of the harvesting of the exceptional winter wheat crop is expected to be reflected soon in improved railroad earnings.

Returned and returning soldiers are being rapidly absorbed by industry and business and the demands for farm help are largely aiding the solution of the unemployment problem that a few weeks ago threatened to be serious. Negro soldiers and unemployed laborers of the same race, however, are not finding jobs as readily as are their white brothers. This fact should challenge the attention of all employers who have positions to be filled.

What the Peace Conference at Paris failed to achieve, industry and trade should have less difficulty in securing to the sorely tried nations of Europe. Employment, good wages, active foreign trade, return to normal conditions of life, will supplement the healing effects of the peace treaty. Generous aid extended by Americans to Europe in the form of credits and increasing shipments of food raw materials, machinery and railroad supplies will contribute certainly and powerfully to pacification and reconstruction.

IMPERIAL TRADE.

ADVOCATING DEVELOPMENT of the home market, imperial preference and trade within the Empire, Mr. Hughes, the Australian prime minister, speaking on home markets and imperial ties, at a luncheon of the British Empire Producers' Organization in London, said:

"How can the Empire make for the men who saved it a place worthy of them if it has not control of its own trade and industry? The workers demand, and rightly, their place in the sun, better wages, better conditions of labor. But how are these things to be assured unless the Empire has a policy which will ensure the development of its great resources in raw materials, ensure trade for its mercantile marine, and such control of its home markets as to ensure employment for its own people? There are the home markets and the foreign markets; both are good, but the foreign market without the home market is like a house built upon quicksand—it cannot endure. That nation which has a policy which ensures its home markets for its own producers is best equipped for the intense competition that will most certainly exist in the foreign markets. Organization is essential to success in modern industry and commerce. Effective organization is impossible without some control of the home markets. And Germany is still the best organized country in the world.

"Nothing is more certain than that unless a definite policy is adopted that will give British manufacturers a preference in the home markets and to the overseas dominions a larger market within the Empire for their raw materials—not only will imperial trade suffer, but the Empire itself will tend to disintegrate, for the surest tie is that of mutual self-interest. The dominions must develop their great heritage, and to do this they must find regular and profitable markets for an ever-increasing supply of raw materials."

A SQUARE DEAL FOR ALL.

CONDEMNING BOLSHEVISM, at the third annual conference of the National Democratic and Labor Party (British Workers' League), Mr J. A. Seddon, M.P., president, said that the primary function of the party was national reconstruction. Two things were essential to the realization of the progress they sought—the declaration of a principle and its incarnation in action. The principle underlying their program recognized the people—not a section, however powerful—but all classes forming the nation. The sovereignty of selfishness spelt despotism or anarchy. The sovereignty of democratic rule must transform social wrongs and conform to the undying elements in human nature—love of country, liberty, association, the family, and personal rights—otherwise it had neither value nor meaning. Revolution in a democratic state was the apex of insanity, the reflex of weakness, and the instrument of intellectual and self-seeking bullies. They stood resolute and immovable against the bolshevist madness of Russia or their would-be imitators here. Equally they sought to resist and destroy the social cancer of undeserved poverty, the blight of undeveloped childhood, whether of mind or body, the gaunt spectre of old age in want through ill-requited toil.

The president of the Irish "republic" is now in the United States. Self-determination might well begin at home.

The Abdication Of Kaiser Bill

Louis Syberkrop of Creston, Iowa, has acquired much fame in recent weeks as author of a satire on Kaiser Wilhelm. Requests have come to him from Tumulty, Secretary Daniels and Roosevelt, and people in every state of the Union and in Canada have asked for copies of Mr. Syberkrop's article. It is:

"Ottumwa, Iowa.
"The Infernal Region.

"To Wilhelm von Hohenzollern, King of Prussia, Emperor of All Germany and Envoy Extraordinary of Almighty God:

"My Dear Wilhelm:

"I can call you by that familiar name, for I have always been very close to you, much closer than you could ever know. From the time that you were yet an undeveloped being in your mother's womb I have shaped your destiny for my own purpose.

"In the days of Rome I created a roughneck known in history as Nero; he was a vulgar character and suited my purpose at that particular time. In these modern days a classic demon and efficient super-criminal was needed, and as I know the Hohenzollern blood I picked you as my special instrument to place on earth an annex of hell. I gave you abnormal ambition, likewise an over-supply of egotism, that you might not discover your own failings, I twisted your mind to that of a mad man with certain normal tendencies to carry you by, a most dangerous character placed in power; I gave you the power of a hypnotist and a certain magnetic force that you might sway your people. I am responsible for the deformed arm that hangs helpless on your left, for your crippled condition embitters your life and destroys all noble impulses that might otherwise cause me anxiety, but your strong sword arm is driven by your ambition that squelches all sentiment and pity; I placed in your soul a deep hatred for all things English, for of all nations on earth I hate England most; wherever England plants her flag she brings order out of chaos and the hated Cross follows the Union Jack; under her rule wild tribes become tillers of the soil and in due time practical citizens; she is the great civilizer of the globe and I HATE HER. I planted in your soul a cruel hatred for your mother because she was English and left my good friend Bismarck to fan the flame I had kindled. Recent history proves how your royal mother's heart bled, but I gained my purpose.

"The inherited disease of the Hohenzollerns killed your father, just as it will kill you, and you became the ruler of Germany and a tool of mine sooner than I expected.

"To assist you and further hasten my work, I sent you three evil spirits, Neitzsche, Treitscke and later Bernhardi, whose teaching inflamed the youths of Germany, who in good time would be willing and loyal subjects and eager to spill their blood and pull your chestnuts, yours and mine; the spell has been perfect—you cast your ambitious eyes toward the Mediterranean, Egypt, India and the Dardanelles and you began your great trailway to Bagdad, but the ambitious archduke and his more ambitious wife stood in your way. It was then that I sowed the seed in your heart that blossomed into the assassination of the Duke and his wife, and all hell smiled when it saw how cleverly you saddled the crime on to Servia. I saw you set sail for the fjords of Norway and I knew you would prove an alibi. How cleverly done, so much like your noble grandfather who also secured an assassin to remove old King Frederick, of Denmark, and later robbed that country of two provinces that gave Germany an opportunity to become a naval power. Murder is dirty work, but it takes a Hohenzollern to make a way and get by.

"Your opportunity was at hand; you set the world on fire and bells of hell were ringing; your rape on Belgium caused much joy, it was the beginning, the foundation of a perfect hell on earth, the destruction of noble cathedrals and other infinite works of art was hailed with joy in the infernal regions. You made war on friends and foe alike, and the murder of civilians showed my teachings had borne fruit. Your treachery toward neutral nations hastened a universal upheaval, the thing I most desired. Your under-sea warfare is a master stroke, from the smallest mackerel pot to the great Lusitania you show no favorites; as a War Lord you stand supreme, for you have no mercy; you have no consideration for the baby clinging to its mothers breast as they both go down into the deep together, only to be torn apart and leisurely devoured by sharks down among the corals.

"I have strolled over the battlefields of Belgium and France. I have seen your hand of destruction everywhere; it's all your work, superfiend that I made you. I have seen the fields of Poland; now a wilderness fit for prowling beasts only; no merry children in Poland now; they all succumbed to frost and starvation. I drifted down into Galicia where formerly Jews and Gentiles lived happily together; I found but ruins and ashes; I felt a curious pride in my pupil, for it was all above my expectations. I was in Belgium when you drove the peaceful population before you like cattle into slavery; you separated man and wife and forced them to hard labor in trenches. I have seen the most fiendish rape committed on young women, and those who were forced into maternity were cursing the father of their offspring, and I began to doubt if my own inferno was really up to date.

"You have taken millions of dollars from innocent victims and called it indemnity; you have lived fat on the land you usurped and sent the real owners away to starvation. You have strayed away from all legalized war methods and introduced a code of your own. You have killed and robbed the people of friendly nations and destroyed their property. You are a liar, a hypocrite and a bluffer of the highest magnitude. You are a part of mine and yet you pose as a personal friend of God. Ah, Wilhelm you are a wonder. You wantonly destroy all things in your path and leave nothing for coming generations.

"I was amazed when I saw you form a partnership with the impossible Turk, the chronic killer of Christians, and you a devout worshipper in the Lutheran Church. I confess, Wilhelm, you are a puzzle at times. A Mohammedan army, commanded by German officers, assisting one another in massacreing Christians, is a new line of warfare. When a Prussian officer can witness a nude woman being disemboweled by a swarthy Turk, committing a double murder with one cut of his saber, and calmly stand by and see a house full of innocent Armenians locked up, the house saturated with oil and fired, then my teachings did not stop with you, but have been extended to the whole German nation.

"I confess my Satanic soul grew sick, and there and then I knew the pupil had become the master. I am a back number, and, my dear Wilhelm, I abdicate in your favor. The great key of hell will be turned over to you. The gravel that has struck the doom of damned souls since time began is yours. I am satisfied with what I have done; that my abdication in your favor is for the very best interests of hell—in the future I am at your majesty's service.

Recent Coal Figures Show A Big Reduction

DAILY AVERAGE 1,525,000 TONS AS AGAINST 2,082,000 TONS IN 1918—TOTAL FOR 1919 TO DATE IS 72,000,000 TONS LESS THAN SAME PERIOD LAST YEAR.

Washington, July 9.—Necessity for the "Buy Now" campaign of the National Coal Association is emphasized by the weekly report of the geological survey on coal production.

The figures for the week ended June 28 give an estimated production of 9,147,000 net tons of bituminous coal. While this is the highest mark reached since the last week in January, yet the gain over the preceding weeks is light and is attributed to buying to tide customers over the holiday week. It is far below the normal.

The total production in the calendar year to date is estimated at 212,581,000 tons, compared with 284,585 tons in the corresponding period of last year, or 72,000,000 tons less.

The daily average production during the week ended June 28 was 1,525,000 tons, as against 2,082,000 tons for the corresponding week in 1918.

The production during the week ended June 14, 1919, was 8,485,000, while during the following week it was 8,691,000 tons.

The production of anthracite during the week ended June 28 was 1,841,000 net tons, the highest recorded since the last week in January. The production in the week ended June 21 was 1,748,000 tons. The total production in the calendar year to date is 38,796,000 tons compared with 49,077,000 tons in the same period in 1918.

The production of beehive coke in the same week is estimated at 286,858 net tons, a slight gain over the previous week, but only about 45 per cent. of the output in the corresponding week of 1918. The slackness of the demand for beehive coke, which is the factor limiting production, is largely due to the increase in the past year in the capacity of by-product ovens, which are operated in preference to buying beehive coke or operating beehive ovens.

Bituminous coal dumped at Lake Erie ports for transhipment up the lakes in the week ended June 21 was 1,058,273 net tons, an increase over the previous week in which dumpings were 959,265 tons. The total movement of lake coal this year to date has been 8,134,601 tons compared with 6,799,417 tons in the corresponding period of last year.

TO-DAY'S STORY

Now that the Hun with smug hypocrisy is pretending that he is really a gentle soul, much maligned, and longing for friendship as a brother with his conquerors, it is as well to remember how he behaved when he thought victory and not defeat was his.

This is the plain narrative of a soldier who was captured in the early days of the war at the first battle of Ypres in November, 1914. He returned to England this year after over four years' imprisonment in Germany. His name is Pte. William Jackson (6481), late of the 1st Coldstream Guards, and he is at present employed at the Savoy Hotel in London. He supplements the details given by Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons last Thursday.

"When we were captured," he says, "we were taken to Lille and there robbed of our greatcoats, which were stripped off us in the sight of the German staff officers. A German officer came among us and clawed our faces with a dum-dum bullet. He spat at us, and as we were marched through the streets he ran ahead every now and again to get in front and spit at and revile us anew.

"We were taken to Gustrow Camp, in Mecklenburg, and there treated frightfully. Our beds were in straw in a marquee, and we were given one blanket apiece, so thin that when new you could see through it. I used mine as a neck-wrap.

"Many men sold their tunics for food to save them from starvation. The weather was bitterly cold. We were given a loaf of black bread every five days and a breakfast cup of skilly three times a day. That was all our food.

Nameless Graves.

"We had no bath till we had been in camp three months, when all of us were covered with scabs from head to foot through dirt and lice.

"Men were constantly taken to what was called a hospital suffering from starvation and exposure. There they received no attention, and some died. Before February was over 200 had died, and were generally buried in nameless graves, because from the time they went to hospital no German bothered about who they were, and their comrades never saw them again.

"For trivial offences, and often for none at all, men were tied for hours to a stake in a barbed-wire cell. The stake had a ring at the top. A brick was placed under a man's feet. His hands were then tied tightly behind his back and the rope passed from his wrists to the ring and drawn tight. Then the brick was knocked away, and the man thus suspended, with only his toes touching the ground, for hours in bitter weather—snow and frost.

How Pte. McGraa Died.

"My chum, Pte. McGraa, of the 1st Batt. Coldstream Guards, who was captured with me, was accused by a sentry on January 15, 1915, of smoking inside the tent. With my own eyes I saw that he was twelve yards at least away from it. But he was tied up for four hours to the stake in the snow.

"When he was released he was black and blue from exposure, and crawled to his bed in the straw unable to eat and almost to move. Next day he decided to complain to the camp commandant of unjust punishment. Without hearing any evidence the commandant beckoned to five of the camp sentries and told them to beat him. They clubbed him to the ground with the butt-ends of their rifles, and there beat and kicked him again.

"He crawled to his tent and died next day. I spoke to him before the end, but he had given up hope and was too ill to move. He received no attention.

"Till the end of June there was an average of one death a week from exposure, ill-treatment, and starvation among the 200 men who came with me to that camp.

"It was only in the later years of the war, when the Germans began to think they might not win, that there was any improvement in our treatment."

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

(In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general. All phases of store management—buying, accounting, advertising and retail salesmanship—will be dealt with, not theoretically, but by descriptions of methods actually in use by successful merchants.)

"Tit-for-Tat" Can Be Dangerous Game.

One day a salesman for a certain hardware specialty was turned down by his logical customer in a town not far from Santa Fe, N.M.

"I'll just show that smart Alec!" he said as he crossed the street and mentally shook his first under the hardware mans n'ose. "I'll just show him that I can sell in this town even if he is the only hardware man in town."

And he did.

A doctor had taken over the only drug store and was a ready listener to the salesman's talk of extra profits. He put in the specialty. He also added two or three other lines that were right out of the hardware man's stock. Being side lines and, therefore, bringing pure velvet, the doctor-druggist priced them pretty close. It was not long before the hardware man heard of it. When he did his collar singed his hair.

TIT FOR TAT.

"I always did think I ought to carry some stock foods and remedies," snorted the hardware man. "Now's my chance. While I'm at it I'll put in some common, every day lines such as witch hazel and mentholatum. Might just as well sell these to the folks that come in. Doc'll be handling corn planters next." Before long his drug line was supplemented by a little case of cheap candy and chewing gum.

Naturally, this pleased the druggist not at all. His brother-in-law was in the grocery and dry goods business. So it was not long before the grocery and dry goods store blossomed out with some of the heavier hardware articles such as were too large to be handled in the drug store. Then a war started that made Von Tirpitz's submarine attempt look like a prayer meeting. Prices were cut, newspapers did a thriving business on "special offerings" that brought in revenue such as the publishers had never dreamed of experiencing this side of paradise and business was good, no doubt about it.

But it was not long before the woman who wanted a certain drug item began to find that the hardware man had overlooked it and the drug store man had not worried over it, feeling that if he delayed long enough to make an order of size no harm would be done because the hardware man would have it, anyway. People began to roast the merchants of the town because they never had what a person wanted when he wanted it. Many lines were let go to seed because there was no money in it on the basis of competition then in effect.

THE "UNSCRAMBLER" ARRIVES.

After eight months a new salesman came for the hardware house to succeed the disgruntled one who had sown the seed of discord. The new man saw the conditions and after a perspiring forenoon in pursuit of the elusive buck which went across the street, up the street, down the street and around the corner, he got the cause. With patience he unwound the matter with the skill of a professional scrambler. Merchants on all fronts were tired enough to listen to peace talk—they all wanted their wives and children to begin speaking again. The salesman arranged for each store to buy from the others the merchandise carried unfairly and to pay for it at invoice prices—and got a good fill-in order at that.

Now the merchants are so full of brotherly love that they once a month meet with their ledgers in hand to sift out the credit goats from the sheep. The consumers know that if they wish drugs they will find them at the drug store. It would not pay to try to sell a side line full of pure velvet to any of those men now.

Low Profits Show in Grocery Stores.

Total expenses of the average grocery store are 16.5 per cent. of the sales. Net profit is commonly 5.5 per cent. of net sales, and stock turn is about seven times a year on the average. These figures are the result of extensive investigation by the Harvard University bureau of business research.

The investigation, however, brought to light cases of expenses as low as 9.4 per cent., net profit as high as 11 per cent. of net sales and a stock turn as high as 23.8 times a year. These figures are for stores which handle groceries exclusively, and do not include chain stores.

Sales per salesperson range from $5,000 a year to $20,000, but the average clerk sells $10,000 worth of merchandise in that period.

These figures are compiled from the investigation of 253 stores in both large and small cities, mainly in the East and Middle West.

Little uniformity in bookkeeping records was found among these stores, and before the results could be compared the figures all had to be transferred and retotaled in accordance with the system evolved by the bureau as the most efficient for general use.

The stores examined included only those which handled groceries and meats. The principal difference in the average experience of the two classes was that the stock-turn figures for stores handling meats was a little higher on the average, running about nine times instead of seven.

ACCOUNTING LOWERS EXPENSE.

It was noted in the investigation that those stores which showed total expenses of 13 per cent. or lower were generally able to give considerably more exact and detailed information concerning their business than those with higher expenses. This indicates that the advantage of low expenses—and, consequently, high profits—is the result of accurate bookkeeping methods.

The other stores don't stand so well, because they don't know so well where they stand.

Another significant fact brought out by the investigation is that while the average stock-turn is seven, a sufficiently large number of stores are today turning their stocks twelve times to warrant this figure being held up as a reasonably easy goal.

NEGLECT GROSS PROFITS.

One of the surprising points developed by the investigation was that a great many groceries which had quite accurate accounts of expenses were able to show no records of their purchases and could show no figures on gross profits.

The most typical for gross profit, however, is 21 per cent., out of which all expenses must be paid. The most typical figure for the resultant net profit is 2.5 per cent. These percentages are not, however, held up as ideal. The experience of a great number of the stores investigated proves that much more satisfactory profits are of comparatively easy attainment.

Salaries and wages of sales force constitute the largest single expense item of the average grocery store. About 6.5 per cent. of net sales is the usual figure. Five per cent, however, is indicated as an easily attainable figure. Stock more conveniently arranged for rapid distribution to customers and a system of paying a cashier by check help to lower the selling expense.

As a rule, the store which spends much over 3 per cent. of its net sales in delivery expense is not profitable. The common figure is 3 per cent., and 2 per cent. appears easily attainable.

Owing to the fact that the majority of groceries are neighborhood propositions, located in residential rather than business sections, the rent figures run quite low in comparison, for instance, with the shoe store. The tendency is for it to be less than 1.3 per cent. (It averages 5 per cent. in shoe stores.)

Entomologist's First Duty.

When a new pest to any crop is brought to the attention of the economic entomologist and a remedy is asked, he must first know just what this insect is. He must know the group to which it belongs, the habits of this group, the exact classification of this individual species. It may be that it will prove to be a perfectly new species, in which case it must be accurately described and properly placed, so that other workers will know about it and about its relationships and its possibilities for harm.

MAY PERSONALLY INSPECT HOMES

IN WHICH WARDS OF CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY ARE PLACED.

At a meeting of the Children's Aid Society yesterday, Dr. D. C. King and Adjutant Buntin strongly urged personal inspection of all homes into which wards of the Society were placed. Mr. H. B. Cowan advocated adjustment of this matter in keeping with the system in vogue in other countries. At present, a ward enters a home on recommendation of some clergyman and two reputable citizens. Mr. S. T. Medd said it would be good policy to investigate a home before placing a child in its keeping and thus avoid the expense of removal should conditions subsequently be found undesirable.

Ald. Edgar proposed that Agent Powell should not only inspect each home in which a ward is, or is to be maintained, but also to elicit information from neighbors as to the character of such home.

No definite action was taken in this matter, but the agent was instructed to, at next meeting, report in the number of children placed in homes during the year, the number returned owing to unsatisfactory conditions, and the expense which would have resulted from an examination of the homes before placing the little ones there.

Brewing Company Haled Into Court

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Pittsburg, July 9.—The Government drive against the sale of beer containing two and three quarters per cent alcohol was launched here today when United States Attorney R. L. Crawford, filed a suit against the Pittsburg Brewing Co., charging violation of the war time prohibition law. Twelve officials of the company were named in the information.

BRITISH ARMY WON THE WAR

FIELD MARSHAL HAIG SO DECLARES IN A PUBLIC ADDRESS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 9.—Field Marshall Haig, receiving the freedom of Newcastle, depreciated the tendency to minimize the British army' achievements in the war. "It is right to speak of our Allies," he declared, "but it was the British army that won the war. It was Britain that bore the brunt of the fighting in the last two years. I hope every one will realize that fact and stick by the fellows who fought and suffered and their dependents."

HERB LENNOX'S ANNUAL PICNIC

WILL THIS YEAR BE CELEBRATION OF SIGNING OF TREATY.

The annual picnic given by Herb Lennox, M.P.P. for [illegible] York, at Jackson Point, is one of the events of the year, in which all parts of the province are represented, and marks a day in which politics are entirely laid aside. This year the picnic will be held on the peace holiday, July 19th, and will take the form of a giant celebration of the signing of the treaty by the Germans. Members of Parliament and Legislature of all shades of political opinion will be present and deliver addresses.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn has received a copy of the poster announcing the event. The bill is a work of art, four feet by three, a forerunner of the most stupendous entertainment yet staged by Mr. Lennox.

RATIFICATION OF PEACE TREATY PREPARES WAY FOR THIS RELIEF.

Paris, July 9.—The ratification of the peace treaty by the German National Assembly removes all doubt of the acceptance of the terms by Germany. The National Assembly by ratifying the treaty makes it possible for the Allied and Associated Powers to raise the blockade. Official notification was sent to Germany on June 29 that the blockade would be raised when the treaty was ratified. The Council of Five decided on Monday to lift the commercial censorship on communications with Germany simultaneously with the removal of the blockade.

One Good Friend.

We are the weakest of spendthrifts if we let one friend drop off through inattention, or let one push away another, or if we hold aloof from one for petty jealousy, or heedless roughness. LIGHTEN YOUR WASHDAY LABOR

Comfort and convenience count on washday, perhaps more than on any other day of the week. Anything that will lighten the work is doubly welcome then.

EDDY'S INDURATED FIBREWARE

are labor lighteners. They save time and strength. Incidentally they cost no more.

Eddy's Fibre wash-tubs are easy to lift and easy to carry. They keep the water hot a long time because they do not radiate heat as galvanized iron or tin will do. They cannot leak, because they are made in one piece, without joint or seam. And the cost is actually less because they will outlast several of the old-fashioned kinds of wash tubs.

Eddy's Twin Beaver Washboards save time by the special crimp which loosens the dirt easily. A washing surface on each side gives them double the efficiency of the ordinary washboard.

A kind for every purpose.

Brother of Ex-Mayor Buller Makes Good

HEAD OF BIG TENT ATTRACTION TOURING BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Robert W. Buller, proprietor of the big and prosperous dog and pony shows, billed under the name "Buller," is a brother of Ex Mayor Wm. Buller of this city. Buller's trained animals have recently earned an enviable reputation in the west, and like a circus, the shows carry a troupe of jesters, headed by Harry La Vane, veteran clown producer, together with aerial and acrobatic performers. Buller's shows are tourning British Columbia just now.

Mr. R. W. Buller has extensive business interests in Victoria and all over Victoria Island. He is also owner of a stock farm on San Juan Island, and it is on this farm that for three years preparations were made for launching his tent attractions.

CHURCH MEMBERS AMONG THE CONVERTED AT TENT SERVICES

Evangelist Kennedy's Subject For Tonight Is "How to Take the Conceit Out of a Man" —Songsters to be at Tomorrow's Meeting

Last night's meeting in the union evangelistic campaign, being held in the big tent on Hunter street, afforded further evidence of the great change in the expression on the faces of the people who become converted at the meetings, mention of which was made in yesterday's issue.

Frequently, throughout the meetings Evangelist Kennedy has laid emphasis on the point that there are many members on the church rolls of every church who are not real Christians in the sense of having been born again. Those people have never come into personal contact with Christ and felt His transforming power in their lives, nor have they got the assurance of salvation, the absolute certainity that when they die they will go to heaven because their sins have been forgiven in this life through faith in Christ, that every Christian should have. Such Christians when asked if they are Christians reply that they hope they are, they try to be, or that they are doing the best they can. Mr. Kennedy pointed out that such replies are completely unsatisfactory. He states that a man is a Christian he should know that he is by the change that has taken place in his spiritual condition and by his joy and happiness in Christ, and should reply outright that he is a Christian and with the same assurance that he would answer questions as to his nationality, or any other similiar question. As a result of Mr. Kennedy's position teaching on this line a number of prominent church members have obtained an assurance of salvation that hitherto they have lacked. Last evening a church member of many years' standing, who has been attending the meetings quite regularly saw the light for the first time and made a profession of Christ before the whole meeting in a manner, which showed that a wonderful change had taken place in his life. His face fairly radiated his new-found happiness. It is this change in the expression on the faces of the people who are finding Christ at these meetings, the burden of anxiety which it can be seen has been rolled off their minds and their new but bubbling happiness, which is impressing all who see them.

Another convert last evening was that of a married woman who has been attending the meetings night after night. She has not been a Christian but has been anxious over the spiritual welfare of certain members of her family. In a personal talk with one of the workers recently she said that she did not want to have anything to do with Christ, but she did want to see the members of her family reached by Christian influences. A worker pointed out to her that God's method of blessing is through individuals, that there was a possibility that God would not bless the members of her family until she completely resigned her life to Him when he would use her as a channel of blessing for the members of her family. Last night she saw the light, accepted Christ and showed the same change in countenance and new sense of happiness, which has been such a marked feature of the conversions of so many others.

There were a considerable number of conversions last night, bringing the total number of conversions now to over 40. At the close of the service Mr. Kennedy invited all those who have found Christ in the meetings to stand in front of the platform, including last night's converts. He then invited all who had remained and who cared to do so to come forward and shake hands with these converts. A great many did so. The number of newly created Christians that were standing there bore testimony to the excellent results that have been attending the meetings.

The subject of Mr. Kennedy's address last night was "The Man Jesus," the words being taken from John 9: 11. The message was a clear cut one, drawn from the case of the blind man who through faith in Christ found his sight and who began to testify immediately as to what Christ had done for him with the results that the Scribes and Pharisees drove him out of their presence and his own parents, although they knew who had healed him, were afraid to bear testimony to Christ's work. Mr. Kennedy showed that many Christians are afraid to bear testimony to the power of Christ in their lives for fear people will say things about them or that they may be ostracized by their friends. The real Christians, he said, will ever be willing to bear testimony to the power of Christ in his life. True happiness in Christian experience cannot be found until the Christian is willing to make public confession of Christ. "With the heart many believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Christ said that if we do not confess Him before men neither will He confess us before His Father in heaven. One of the reasons why professing Christians do not talk about Christ is because they do not know Him.

Among the ministers who were present last evening were Rev. Messrs. Mallot, Galt, Cruickshanks, Webb, Thomas and Pogue. The subject of tonight's address will be "Taking the Conceit Out of a Man." At tomorrow night's service the Salvation Army songsters will be out in full uniform and direct the musical features.

One of the surprising features of the services is the large percentage unconverted people who attend who are converted. It is evident from the composition of the audiences that on most nights most of those present are Christians. The responses among the small percentage who are not is so large, as to show the effectiveness of the messages that are being given.

SPARKS FROM KENNEDY'S ANVIL

When a man is healed of an incurable disease, he should be good enough to say a kind word for his doctor, and when Christ saves a man's soul he should tell it.

When a man gets married, he makes it known, if he does not we might begin to wonder.

People should be out and out in everything they do. Peter denied his Lord to save his life, some do so today for much less.

You insulted Jesus in public, you should confess him in public.

Some folks are church members in good standing—a long time standing but they don't want to be hitched up.

We need people today not that profess Christ, but to confess Him.

Some would not stay away from Church for anything, yet you never hear from them a confession or a word of praise.

Belief with the heart, we owe to God, confession with the mouth, we owe to man.

Would you take stock in a man who said he had been a Christian four months and no one ever found it out?

It's not more men God wants, but more man in each of us.

An anxious church makes anxious sinners.

Some Christians expect sinners to be brave enough to come forward and they are not brave enough to speak to them.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Sparkling and vivacious — merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifing change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run donws," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleaning, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, billiousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

FRESH FISH, FISH WORMS AND LEECHES FROM OUR WATER TAPS

Dr. Amys Points Out Need For Installation of a Filtration Plant

As a last official word on the local Board of Health last night, Dr. Amys, retiring M. O. H., warned his colleagues that the city water is far from pure or perfect at any time. "Hardly a week passes," he said, "but what I am called up by citizens who complain of leech or parts of fish being found in their city water."

The doctor strongly advised that the Board of Health request the Utilities Commission to install a filtration plant at the earliest possible date.

While such a plant would cost considerable, the burden would not be of too heavy a nature when distributed among the whole of the ratepayers. The health of a community is seriously menaced by impure water, and steps should be taken to preserve Peterborough citizens from contamination in that direction.

Fish and Fish Worms.

The Mayor declared that during the past two months he got a couple of leeches out of his water tap.

Chairman Buller: "I frequently find fish worms in my city water."

No action was taken last evening.

DR. GEORGE ADAMS PRESENTS A PICTURE OF LLOYD GEORGE

British Premier was Subject of Interesting Lecture Last Night—Hon. Fred G. Bale This Evening

Dr. George Adam of Montreal was the lecturer at the Chautauqua tent last night and his subject was "A Familiar Picture of David Lloyd George."

Dr. Adam as a member of the Munitions Board in England, was in a position to get a first hand an intimate knowledge of the Little Welshman and some of the personal anecdotes of the early life of the British Prime Minister as told on the lecture platform last night were truly remarkable.

Dr. Adam, who by the day admits his Scotch birth without pardonable pride is a finished speaker and early in his lecture had the audience with him and for an hour and a half kept the attention of all. He told of the life of Lloyd George, from his infancy to the present day, how he had climber step by step from the humble home of his cobbler uncle to the position he occupies today. He spoke of the devotion of the uncle in the matter of educating the boy David, and drew a vivid word picture of the conditions under which this education was accomplished. Of the struggles of the young lawyer and of some of the first law cases and of how throughout all his difficulties, he had ever been ready to serve his country.

Dr. Adam spoke of the work of Lloyd George in his capacity of Chancellor of the Exchequer, and declared that during the first two years he held this office, he put the finances of Britain on a sounder basis than they had ever been before. He also mentioned the Premier's work as Minister of Munitions and described how he had mobilized the women of Britain in the work which had formerly been done by men. In this instance Dr. Adam told the audience a lot of facts regarding the supply of munitions of which, which truly seemed incredible.

The lecturer declared that Providence was directly responsible for all the great events in the life of David Lloyd George. He had been a very pious man all his life and still is a regular attendant of the Baptist Church, of which he is a member.

Salaries of Teachers

Dr. Adam also had a word to say regarding the low salaries paid to school teachers generally throughout Canada. He made the statement that a Scotchman was to be found at the head of every great institution in the world and the credit for this was given to the old Scotch school teachers. For over five hundred years Scotch school teachers have been better paid than the teachers in any other part of the world. The lecturer is also an opponent to the system of home lessons for school children, declaring that when the parents refused to help the children with this work the teachers salaries would be increased. He said that Canada must immediately put her house in order in the matter of education if she wants to occupy the place in the world's affairs which she should adorn.

The musical section of the program was provided by the Chas. Edward Clarke Concert Company and consisted of baritone solos, violin and piano solos and a few readings. The music was of a very high order, the violin solos by Miss Rachel Steinman Clarke being worthy of special mention.

Program Tonight

Tonight the lecturer will be Hon. Fred G. Bale of Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Bale will have as his subject "Our Fourth Line of Defence," and will treat the question of child delinquency without gloves. He has been connected with the juvenile court in his home city for years and knows his subject thoroughly.

The Vissocfil Florentines will provide the musical entertainment and their offering promises to be well worth hearing.

Mr. Worth replied for city directories one for each school, allowed every two years.

Mr. Gordon—"What do the schools want directories for.

Mr. Worth—"To keep in touch with the address of scholars.

Dr. Neal—"In a city like Peterborough there is considerable moving of families from one place of residence to another."

Mr. Gordon—"I was wondering, doctor, were that not a reason for questioning the need for directories.

However, Mr. Gordon seconded Mr. Worth's motion that the report be adopted as read, which was done.

MINERAL OIL

For Chronic Constipation

By buying this product from us you can get the highest in quality that can be procured at an ESPECIALLY LOW PRICE. There are many thin oils on the market that are not suitable for internal use; other oils have irritating qualities which render them also unsuitable. The one we are selling is guaranteed thick and entirely pure.

It is recognized that a good grade of Mineral Oil is one of the best remedies for CHRONIC CONSTIPATION that is being used. It acts mechanically and does not irritate the intestinal tract, nor does the dose have to be continually increased, as is the case with ordinary purgatives.

It is much better and cheaper than Castor Oil as a laxative for children, since Castor Oil has two effects, the first of which is purgative, and the second or after effect, which is Constipating.

MOUNTAIN MONARCHS OF CANADA

MOUNT ROBSON, THE HIGHEST PEAK IN THE CANADIAN ROCKIES

Where are Canada's highest mountain peaks? This question of national interest, has been decided by the "Dictionary of Altitudes," prepared by Mr. James White, of the Commission of Conservation, Ottawa. This Government publication gives a list of the great mountains along the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, showing their superior altitude. These include the monarch of the Canadian Rockies, Mount Robson (13,068 feet). There are no fewer than [illegible] peaks along the Grand Trunk Pacific line with altitudes of eight thousand feet or over. These mountains not only excel in the matter of height, but are seen in their full contour and majesty by reason of their sheer rise from the valley floor. Some of these great peaks are:

THEATRICAL

Original Bathing Suit Worn By Star

The most original and fascinating bathing suit ever seen on the beach at Atlantic City was worn by Emmy Wehlen, charming star of "His Bonded Wife," the Metro presentation which will be the attraction at the Grand theatre on the Thursday for a three-day engagement.

The novel suit is bound to create a sensation wherever it is seen and is most daring in design and decoration. The bottom of the rather full skirt is painted to represent foam-topped waves in which minute mermaids disport themselves. Father Neptune, with his trident, stands full length on one side of the dress while a boat in full sail is the design across the back. This tunic is worn over a pair of baggy trousers of a blue-green changeable silk made tight at the knees in what is known as military or jockey style. With this costume Miss Wehlen carries a sunshade, [illegible] also, with appropriate designs to match to those on her suit. Many "close ups" have been taken of this distinctly unique and beautiful garment.

May Allison Becomes Leading Comedienne

METRO STAR IS NOTED ON STAGE AND SCREEN FOR BRILLIANT HUMOR.

The role enacted by May Allison in "Almost Married," a Metro comedy drama which will be shown at the Grand theatre on Thursday, next, leads her from a remote inn high in the Alps to the brilliant stage of New York's most famous midnight review where she reaps unusual plaudits as a singer.

It is a strange fact that Miss Allison's voice should be heard so often in the studio and never on the operatic stage for it was as a singer that she was first trained. Now, however, while the whole world enjoys her inimitable acting only a privileged few hear her golden voice.

Hours for Work and for Play.

The hours of relaxation must come; they are absolutely necessary for all of us, but a very definite line should be drawn between the hours of work and the hours of play if one expects to make any kind of success. It is a pity to have to be curt in order to make this line apparent to one's friends and family, but the line must be made plain, even if radical measures are necessary, and the sooner the business woman learns this the better will be her work and the calmer her nerves. —Exchange.

All More or Less Mythical.

The Indian rope trick is the sea serpent of the plains, and, like the mythical monster of the deep, varies in its form, appearances and disappearances. Much depends upon the mentality of the observer and narrator, says Stuart Cumberland in London Daily Mail. Things in this world seldom, if ever, occur exactly as related, and this applies with additional force to so-called occult phenomena, whether of occidental or oriental origin.

Woes Laid to Dyspepsia.

How many serious family quarrels, marriages out of spite, and alterations of wills might have been prevented by a gentle dose of blue pill! What awful instances of chronic dyspepsia in the character of Hamlet and Othello! Banish dyspepsia from society and you have no crime, or at least so little that you would not consider it worth mentioning. —Charles Kingsley.

She Almost Started a Fad.

A girl who selected two earrings from different sets yesterday morning when dressing hurriedly, was suspected of introducing a new fad. She was unconscious of the attention she attracted and did not realize that heads of her neighbors in church were turned and twisted to get a "close-up" of her jewels until she reached home. A glance in her mirror told her that she was the object of interest in her pew, for a huge pearl blossomed in one ear and a brilliant blue pendant hung from the lobe of the other.—Worcester Evening Post.

Opium.

Opium is the dried juice of the white poppy, a flower that grows in many parts of Asia. A few days after the flowers have fallen off the plants men go through the fields in the afternoon and make little cuts in the poppy head. Out of these cuts a milky juice oozes, which dries into a brown sticky paste. Every morning the men go through the fields again and scrape off this paste, which they put into jars. Later on it is made into half pound balls and then packed for shipment.

PORKERS PICKLE AND PACK AWAY ORIENTALS BY 11--9

A TRIPLE PLAY

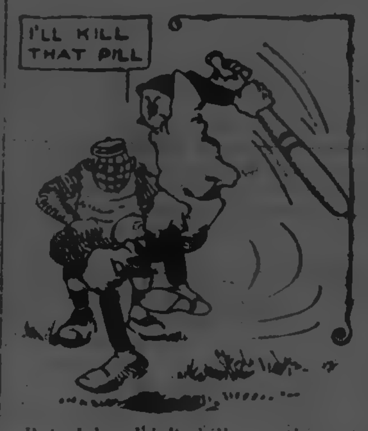
By taking a fall out of the Orientals in their Twilight League game at Riverside Pastures last evening, Matthews-Blackwell secured a stranglehold on the championship. With the Solomonites shot to pieces, it looks to be all over but the cheering and the box-stove league. The score was 11 to 9 after nine innings of one of the most erratic exhibitions ever offered Peterborough fandom. Howard Kirn, who humbled the Packers at the former meeting of the two teams, was hardly distinguishable. He had nothing but credentials as a nerve specialist, and the Southerners hit him hard and often, which, assisted by the slow work of the Oriental gardeners, allowed the opposition to run wild along the paths and in many cases get home.

But, bad as they were, the Orientals gave the McCabe outfit an awful run for the money, and in the eighth they came from behind, tied up the score and took a lead of two runs. It was in this big session that the Porkers got their long-hoped-for chance to howl at the Oriental pilot. Solomon, batting for Kennealley, worked Frost for two balls. Then he fouled the next two and struck out on the next ball thrown. Clancy, however, soon stopped the noise from the Coursey section of the grandstand by smashing the first ball pitched for a rousing three-bagger. The innings netted the Orientals five runs.

What they did to the Solomonites in their half of the ninth, leave it to the Porkers to tell best. With Corrin disposed of, it looked like a win for Jake. But Swanston cracked out a double, Hagerman was passed, the next three hit safely, and this fusilade, with the addition of a wild pitch and errors in the hayfield on fly balls gave the M.-B.s a quintet and a lead of two.

JAKE STRUCK OUT.

It doesn't make much difference now who builds the bally bridge or whether Kaiser Bill is roped and Willies' neck is wrung. Von Hindenburg and other vons may get their rightful fates, and all the dogs around the burg may hide on Jimmie Gates. Jim Coursey's iron-lunged brigade can yell themselves to sleep, the ball yard "mogs" can lock the gates—the crickets wish to weep. No difference will it make at all, there'll be no smiles or glee if Alex. Kay sticks to his vow—he says he's through and free. It doesn't make much difference now, there is no room for doubt—the deed's been well and truly done — they struck poor old Jake out.



But Jake didn't kill anything to speak of. Going pinch hitter in the eight, he struck out.

Orientals made a brave effort to get across in their last half, but a neat catch by Adams of Hoad's long fly to centre stopped the rally, and Cherrett was unable to get his team going again, ending the frame by striking out.

Fast Infielding.

The early stages of the fray were marked by some tidy work by the infields of both teams. The Orientals, however, put up the better showing, being credited with a retirement of the Porkers, who had three on, a triple play in the second, a dobule play in the third, and a double play by Phelan unassisted in the seventh. The play that retired the Packers in the first was a beauty. Corrin was at third and Lowe at second, when Hagerman hit through the box. Cherrett was too far away to field the ball, and it looked too difficult for McLeod. But the Oriental second-sacker made the effort, scooped the leather with his bare hand and threw to Cherrett, retiring the runner at second, and the side was out.

The triple play, the first of the season, was made by Cherrett, Murray and McLeod, the former spearing Lowe's drive, throwing to Murray to get Frost, and Murray returning to McLeod, who got Adams. The play caught the Packers asleep.

Holyman and Butcher were the shining lights for the Porkers, their fielding and throwing being a feature of the winners' play. Walter Jackson, besides playing a strong game at first, had four hits, two of them being consecutive doubles.

DIAMOND DUST.

Frost fanned ten. Kirn had one strikeout.

Jack McCarney displayed pep at centrefield, after entering the game in the ninth.

Something wrong with the Twilight League when players like McCarney and Shaughnessy occupy the bench. If they never hit a ball in ten years they are eligible as by-grabbers.

The Porkers should have a heart. It's the first time in eighteen years that Jake Solomn has been struck out. This is his own signed statement.

Clancy's triple was the prettiest of the season. It was healthy, and came in the pinch.

There are few who have anything on Holyman in getting them over to the first station.

MATTHEWS-BLACKWELL PLANT IS A MODEL OF CLEANLINESS

So Reports Dr. Amys, M. H. O.,—Pronounced by Government Inspector Cleanest Plant of Its Kind in Canada.

At the June session of the local Board of Health complaints were lodged that Matthews-Blackwell's premises were a nuisance, and the company was written to in that regard.

Last evening the Board had before them a reply from Matthews-Blackwell, expressing their readiness to make any changes in conditions practicable in the conservation of sanitation. However, the letter pointed out, this plant is government-inspected and reported as the cleanest in its own line in Canada.

Dr Amy's reported that in company with Sanitary Inspector Stapleton he had visited the Matthews-Blackwell plant where he was acorded the most cordial reception by the management. He was shown over the plant which he found, a model of cleanliness and spick and span in every particular. Mr. Matthews assured him that the company would install any device available for eliminating what odors exist at times. He (Dr. Amys) has suggested that his engineer experiment on running the odors over exposed gas fumes and thereby consmuing them and Mr. Matthews had promised to give this suggestion his serious attention.

Dr. Amys found even the pig pens in an exemplary clean condition and discerned that the company converts every by-product of their operations, except water, into cash. The odors complained of and which will be in the near future eliminated, either by fire or some other device, come from the process of rendering.

NO REDS WANTED BY THE FARMERS

AIM TO HAVE 80 MEMBERS IN NEXT HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Winnipeg, July 9.—Eighty farmer members of the House of Commons after the next general Federal election, was the prediction made by H. Mackenzie, vice-president of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, and one of the most powerful supporters of the movement to found a strong farmers' political party in Canada.

These eighty members will represent ridings scattered from coast to coast across the Dominion, Mr Mackenzie said, and will be pledged to the farmers' platform.

"What is the basis plank of your platform?" Mr. Mackenzie was asked.

"A reduction and in some instances an elimination of the tariff," was the reply.

"Has the farmers' party a recognized leader?"

"No, not as yet," said Mr. Mackenzie; "somebody will turn up out of the eighty men to be elected, who will have the necessary qualifications for leadership."

Mr. Mackenzie admitted that Hon. T. A. Crerar, if he were to remain in public life, was a strong man. He also admitted that Dr. Michael Clark was in accord with the farmers party and that he was a strong man and an experienced parliamentarian as well as a farmer.

Mr. Mackenzie said that the farmers' party would not affiliate with organized labor, although he anticipated that there would be much co-operation between bona fide unions and agriculturists.

"As for the Reds, we will have none of that stuff," said Mr Mackenzie.

SOVIETS PLOTTING AGAINST WEALTH

ARREST OF ROCKEFELLER AND PRESIDENT WILSON PART OF PLAN.

New York, July 9.—The arrest of President Wilson and John D. Rockefeller, the opening of all jails and the formation of Soviet organizations throughou the country to take over the Government were advocated in the Anarchist Soviet Bulletin, according to Archiald E. Stevenson, who produced a copy of the Bulletin at the hearing of the Lusk Investigating Committee in the City Hall.

The copy of the Bulletin was identified by Glenn Finnell, an attendant at the New York Public Library as being one of the 150 he had picked up on July 3, in the corridors of the library.

"Real Criminals Not in Jail"

Mr. Stevenson read into the record the following extract from the Bulletin:

"First make in known that as soon as you are organized strong enough into your Soviets you are going to open the door of every jail in the country. You wil not only free the political victims of capitalism, but also the economic victims of capitalism, whose voice, striving for the beterment of conditions is their only crime, for, remember, the real criminals are not in the jail houses.

"During the period of reconstruction the capitalistic society in the Commune we will have to put into jail all such honorable exploiters, oppressors, rulers, misleaders, hypocrites as Woodrow Wilson and Rockefeller. Putting every harmful Government official or capitalist in jail will give us the chance to free ourselves.

"Start to act, and, if you want it to be real action, organize into Workers' Communes Soviets, wherever you are."

Stevenson read into the record other extracts of this Bulletin.

No Longer Submissive

It is printed on both sides of the sheet. The back sheet contains an article headed "Time for Action." The part read into the record reads:

"Let our message to the Workers' Soviet of Russia be: Keep up your courageous battle for freedom. The working classes of the entire world will soon be fighting on the barricades of the social revolution against capitalism, its agents and upholders of the Government, the Church and the press. We, the Workers of the World, have committed a great crime against you Russian workers by remaining silent and submissive, but we will no longer be silent nd submissive."

NEW HONORS ARE PAID TO MISS MARGARET DAVIDSON

Is Promoted to Position of Supervisor of Domestic Science and Art in Toronto Public Schools.

Miss Margaret Davidson, who is a daughter of Mr. J. I. Davidson, George street, and who formerly was a teacher here, has met with new success in the teaching profession in Toronto. The Times of that city has the following:

Honor has been paid to Miss Margaret Davidson and public recognition made of her work in the Technical school by the decision which has been reached by the Board of Education to offer her the post of Supervisor of Domestic Science and Art in the Toronto Public Schools. The work Miss Davidson has done in the Technical School has been not merely practical but also idealistic, for she has overlooked no opportunity of planting highest ideals of home life in the minds of the girls who have passed through her department. The newest things in household science have been tried out, and if satisfactory, adopted, and the classes kept abreast of the times in every way. Miss Davidson has kept in touch with every phase of women's work, and from oone of her classes in the Technical School there was organized the Canadian Business Women's Club, one of the most flourishing women's associations in Toronto today.

A New Program.

The Public Schools once had a Supervisor of Domestic Science and Art, Miss Hunter, who left the staff eight years ago, and whose place has never been filled. The women on the Board of Education now feel that a change is necessary in the program, as it affects the teaching of Domestic Science, and that little headway can be made without a leader. At present the subject is taught in the schools in one room, with individual burners and little opportunity for anything but cookery. It is rather fragmentary instruction and does not teach household management. The new plan is to introduce home-like equipment with, in the one room, sections providing for teaching various branches of housework such as those involved in bedroom, laundry and kitchen. Such a scheme has been tried out in Lee School with such a degree of success that it is to be carried on into Williamson road, Eglinton avenue and Huron street schools. Miss Davidson will have to play a double part in making the best she can of what still must go on for a time in the old way and at the same time developing the new along the best and most practical lines.

Dr. A. C. McKay has expressed to Mrs. A. C. Courtice and Mrs. W. E. Groves his willingness to lend Miss Davidson to the Public Schools for a year and also to facilitate her return to the Technical School at the end of that time if her work for the schools shall have been completed.

LAWN SOCIAL LAST NIGHT AT SACRED HEART CHURCH

Members of That Flourishing Parish Again Show That They Understand the True Idea of Hospitality.

What was one of the largest affairs of its kind ever held in Peterborough took place last evening on the church lawn of the Sacred Heart parish. Evidently when this parish undertakes to entertain they do so in elegant manner. The splendid success of this event speaks well for the spirit of unselfish co-operation which must exist throughout the parish. It was just another striking example of that old truth, "United we stand and divided we fall."

The gates were opened at five and the people gradually streamed in until by eight o'clock the crowd was immense. Parties of pleasure-seekers from Lindsay, Lakefield, Innismore and other surrounding points motored in expecting a delightful evening and they were not dissappointed. This beautiful lawn is an ideal spot for such an entertainment and the weather man was certainly kind on this occasion.

The 57th Regiment band, which was in attendance, contributed largely to the pleasure of the evening, with some stirring musical numbers, which, well rendered as they were, brought forth favorable comment from the crowd. Dressed in their scarlet uniforms they lent a gala effect to the occasion which was most pleasing.

A special feature on the grounds was the Glee Club, conducted by young ladies of the parish, who had in charge the selling of flowers and candy. This booth was very prettily decorated with flags and evergreens and presented a most artistic diversion of color against the green back ground.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the evening was the lottery booth, conducted by a local gentleman, assisted by a number of young ladies of the parish. This was not only amusing but a novelty as well and judging from the manner in which the people patronized this booth, the spirit of enterprise is strong in Peterborough. But it was well worth the while as the pieces of art work were xquisite in themselves and the manner in which the efficient manager displayed his goods eulogising at length on the good points of each article was alone worth the price of admission. This booth was dressed for the occasion with evergreens and ferns presenting a very pleasing appearance. The young people in charge of the ice cream tables certainly had a busy evening, as is usually the case with a crowd of people on holiday-bent. They get the ice-cream mania as soon as they enter the gate, but all seemed to be well looked after despite the great rush and judging from their facial expressions, every one took the jostling good naturedly.

Later in the evening the grounds took on a shade of glowing beauty under a flood of electric light and the merriment increased as the evening passed. Every one seemed bent on having the time of his or her life and they seemed to have it all right. What presented a most strikingly beautiful scene was the balloon ascension, which took place after dark. The listening splendor of this luminous affair as it drifted up in the air was worthy of a fourth of july celebration. This fascinating picture held the gaze of the crowd for some time.

Left until the last for mention, not because it comes least by any means, but because it undoubtedly was the best part of the evening is the supper.

The ladies of the Sacred Heart parish certainly proved the truth of their well-earned reputation as excellent cooks, last night. Every one came there supperless, with visions of an old-time meal such as they used to serve down on the farm or of the kind that mother used to get up away back in the days when there was no such thing as high cost of living. Its safe to say without the least exaggeration that their visions were realized. It was a supper that would do the heart and other ecomomy of an epicure good. The inconvenience of "waiting your turn" must have taxed the patience of some, but they quite likely knew it was something well worth waiting for.

MR. BURNHAM QUITS UNION PARTY

Mr. Burnham told The Review to-day that even if honored by the Association again with the Nomination he would not be a Unionist candidate under any circumstances. So long as the Unionists were united as they were for the prosecution of the War, well and good, but when the War was over and it became merely a matter of hanging on to office while apprising each other of the trade policy of Canada, it became impossible to continue the support of such a Government and be true to Canada. The resignation of Sir Thomas White was a matter of course and as he was the man who bore the whole burden of the War for Canada, his resignation is a most serious thing. The Unionist government should be honest with the people and bre k up into its original constituent parts

TO RESTORE THE TARIFF WALL IN UNITED STATES

American Congressmen Plan to Stop Free Imports From This Country, Wheat and Potatoes Included

Washington, D. C. July 10—The Canadian reciprocity issue which agitated the farmers of the northwest and New England ten years ago, is being revived in Congress, and repeal urged as to all laws permitting free trade between the two countries. The fight will be made in connection with Republican tariff legislation backed by farmers of the northwest. A bill for the purpose was introduced in the House by representative Young of North Dakota.

Following rumors that Canada had reversed its attitude through an order-in-council and was prepared to take advantage of the first opportunity to ship wheat into the United States, Mr Young made an investigation. The order-in-council became effective as to wheat April 17, 1919 and as to potatoes November 7, 1918. The only thing in the way has been the food administration which has the power to prevent importation.

The bill introduced is to repeal, not only the provisions in paragraphs 581 and 644 of the Underwood Law, under which the order-in-Council was issued, but to repeal also the entire reciprocity law. "My proposal," he explained "is that while we are plugging the hole made by the Underwood Law, to plug every other hole, too.

"I noticed some time ago that people were going from the Northwest to seek changes in the tariff at Ottawa, and I wrote at once to see what was going on.

"I found that Canada already has provided for the exportation of wheat products into the United States, acting under the reciprocal provisions of the Underwood Law, yet Canada could have acted under the Reciprocity Law.

"According to information received both wheat and potatoes have been on the free list for a long time, the country has not awakened to it because the food administration has had control and could prohibit the importation of foodstuffs, which was necessary,

THE MAYOR REFUSED TO SIGN BY-LAW AWARDING CONTRACT FOR BRIDGE

Will Sign Document Today, However, Under Protest—By-Law Authorizing Execution of Contract With Russell-Townsend Co. Passes Its Three Readings—Vote 7 to 2—Ald. Taylor and Morrison Absent.

Mayor Duncan refused last night to sign a bylaw passed by Council to authorize the execution of an agreement with John E. Russell, Chas. H. Townsend and F. H. Navin for the construction of the Hunter street bridge.

The measure was passed on a vote of 7 to 2, Aldermen Morrison and Taylor being absent

His Worship, however, announced this morning that he will sign the bylaw today under protest. He seemed a little uncertain as to his position in the matter, one lawyer even having advised him he would be held liable should the bridge exceed Council's appropriation whether he signed the bylaw or not. Last night when the bylaw was submitted him by the clerk for his signature His Worship, in refusing to sign, said he would consult with his solicitor first.

Had Ald. Morrison and Taylor been in their seats, and the yeas and nays on the bylaw taken, His Worship would probably have had no hesitancy in signing, and his recorded negative vote would have answered as a protest to his officially enforced signature.

This morning the Mayor felt that he was personally safeguarded from any possible personal liability in his "nay" vote having been officially recorded last meeting when a resolution accepting the Russell-Townsend tender was carried on a yea and nay vote.

Seven to Four.

The vote last night on the bylaw resulted as follows:

For—Aldermen Garside, Crowe, Turner, Hamilton, Edgar, Phelan and Gainey—7.

Against—Ald. McIntyre and the Mayor.

Had Ald. Morrison and Taylor been present, they would most likely have voted in the negative, making the division stand at 7 to 4.

—Where Aldermen Morrison and Taylor were, see article under another heading.

Delighted at Settlement.

Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, expressed his delight at this vexed question having been at last settled after months of strenuous contest. He hoped that hereafter everything will run along smoothly and satisfactory, that the Russell-Townsend Co. wil build a good bridge, and start operations right away

Mr. Townsend replied that he would start from the Toronto end today.

MAYOR LEAVES IN A HUFF; ALD. PHELAN VOTED INTO THE CHAIR

Misunderstanding and Unpleasantness Arises Over Special Council Session Last Night---Mayor Takes Affront at What He Judged to be Lack of Courtesy---Where Were Ald. Taylor and Morrison?

A little hitch occurred last evening in calling to order the special meeting of the City Council, called with a view to definitely settling the Hunter street bridge question by placing the project under contract, in the passage of a by-law to that effect. And it happened in this way:

Prior to the hour for council to convene—8 o'clock—a meeting of the Railways Committee was held in the little room sandwiched between the Committee Room and the City Halls' entrance lobby.

The City Hall is undergoing renovation, the room in which the Railways Committee were meeting was crowded and the Committee room proper lumbered up. Consequently, while waiting for this Committee to finish their business, other Aldermen grouped on the sidewalk, outside evidently expecting to ascend, as last Monday, to the Council Chamber by way of the stairs from Simcoe street. Access at that time from the Committee room being blocked by renovation work and its necessaries.

The Railway's Committee rose at 8.10 and His Worship remarked, "come let's get upstairs to business; I don't intend to stay here all night."

The Mayor was followed to the Council chamber by Aldermen, Taylor, Morrison and Turner, members of the Railways Committee. Alderman Edgar stayed behind to phone Ald Hamilton for whose presence he was anxious.

This was at 8.15, maybe a trifle later, and Council's rules of order provide that should there not be a quorum present at that time, His Worship may postpone proceedings.

And there being none but the aforementioned Aldermen in attendance on the Mayor not enough to constitute a quorum His Worship enquired, "Where are the others?"

On being informed that the others were outside, His Worship called down stairs: "Tell those fellows to come up."

The other Aldermen not putting in an appearance by 8.25 Mayor Duncan would have adjourned the meeting, but as Council had not convened, this could not be done, so he left the Council Chamber, followed by Aldermen Taylor and Morrison. Ald. Turner remained calmly in his seat waiting developments.

Where the Others Were

At this moment Alderman Phelan, McIntyre, Gainey and Garside were grouped on the sidewalk outside the City Hall entrance, engaged in conversation and apparently innocent of any trouble. His Worship passed them with words to the effect that he was not going to wait their pleasure all night, entered his car and drove off. Ald Morrison and Taylor followed suit in the latter's car. Ald Edgar was trying to get in touch with Ald Hamilton, who was on his way down, but stopped by a citizen on Simcoe street.

Mayor Pro-Tem

Ald Phelan, MacIntyre, Gainey, Garside and Edgar, followed by Hamilton in a few minutes, ascended to the Council chamber, took their seats, and concluding that His Worship would not return, convened in the special session called for.

Ald Turner was first voted to act as Mayor pro-tem, but on pointing

BIG DIRIGIBLE IS HEADED FOR HOME

R-34 LEFT NEW YORK ON RETURN TRIP EARLY TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, July 10.—The British rigid dirigible R-34 is well on her way toward home after a stay in America of eighty six hours, following the first non-stop trans-Atlantic flight of a lighter than air ship, taking the air at 11.56 o'clock last night at Roosevelt Field, Mineola, Long Island, the big dirigible passed over New York city, circled over the Times building tower at 12.45, remaining in sight of a dense Broadway crowd for five minutes before heading south over Lower Manhattan and disappeared in an easterly direction at 1.16 a m.

The announcement by Major Scott, Commander of the R-34, of his intention to sail over the city was made in the theatres and restaurants with the result that thousands of persons crowded Broadway for a glimpse of the air ship. She passed through shafts of light, shot skyward from scores of searchlights. She flew quite low over Broadway, not being much over eight hundred feet in the air, and proceeding at low speed. She was plainly discernable from the open spaces and the roofs of buildings throughout the lower section of the city. The Gigantic sperry gyroscope in Brooklyn and searchlights with penetrating power kept the big gas bag in view until she passed out of range.

Off Marthas Vinegard.

Boston, July 10.—R-34 was reported 55 miles south of Martha's Vineyard Island at four a.m., in Radio message received here. Martha's Vineyard is off the southern coast of Massachusetts.

PEACE TREATY IS BEFORE SENATE

MUST HAVE TWO-THIRDS MAJORITY BEFORE IT CAN BE RATIFIED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, July 10. President Wilson takes the peace treaty to the Senate today. It will be the first time the President has presented the treaty in person and the first time the message of presentation has been received with Senate's doors open to the public.

The Senate situation confronting President one of many possibilities variously estimated by leaders for and against the League of Nations. With every Senator present or pared when the final ratification roll call is taken, the treaty with its League Covenant must receive a two-thirds majority, sixty-four votes. This total, the President's supporters declare, is assured, while the Opposition leaders assert it can never be attained without the inclusion of material reservations in the ratification resolution. The first test will come with attempt to write in various reservations. For this only a simple majority, 49 votes, will be required.

President Explains.

President Wilson, in presenting the peace treaty with Germany to the Senate, declared that a league of free nations had become a practical necessity, to which the framers of the treaty felt obliged to turn as an indispensible instrumentality for the maintaince of the new order it has been their purpose to set up in the world. The most sceptical of the peace conferees at Paris, the President said, had turned more and more to the league as the discussion progressed in seeking a solution of the problems that arose in framing the terms of the treaty itself.

VESSEL COLLIDES WITH AN ICEBERG

TWO KILLED AND TWO INJURED ON THE STEAMER GROMPIAN.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. John's, Nfld., July 10.—Two men were killed and two injured when the Allan liner Grampian Montreal to Liverpool, collided with an iceberg off Cape Race last night. The steamship, with 750 passengers and a crew of 350, arrived here this morning for repairs.

Struck Head On.

The killed and injured were members of the crew who were asleep in the bow of the ship when she struck. Virtually all passengers were awake, but although there were more than five hundred women and children aboard, there was little excitement and no panic.

That the Grampian did not suffer the fate of the Titanic with considerable loss of life is believed to have been due to the decision of the captain to strike the iceberg bow on instead of taking a glancing blow on the side.

The berg, which was very large, was encounter forty-five miles off Cape Race in the early evening. When it was sighted through the fog it was too late to clear it, although the ship was proceeding slowly. The captain said he realized that a glancing blow, which would tear through the ship's side, would sink her. The course was changed and the Grampian struck the ice mountain squarely head on. The entire forepart of the ship was smashed in above the water line, the steamer being driven back nearly forty-five feet. The vessel was undamaged below the water line however, as a portion of the berg, which struck proved to be an overhanging shelf.

The under secretary of the Home Office had argued before the committee that the inclusion of the clause in the bill would wreck the influence of the United Kingdom in the Empire.

SUNDAY ST. CARS FOR PETERBORO

ALD. GAINEY MOVES FOR SAME PRIVILEGE IN PETERBORO AS IN BIG CITIES.

Ald. Gainey cannot see why Peterborough should not have Sunday street cars as well as cities of larger population.

At last night's Council meeting he moved, seconded by Ald. Crowe, that legislation be sought to amend the Ontario Act to permit the operation on Sundays of street car system in cities of less than 50,000 population should a resolution to this effect be passed by Council in compliance with the expressed wishes of the people. And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Provincial Premier, and Councils of Windsor, Brockville, Kingston Galt, Guelph, Kitchener, St. Thomas and Sarnia. This carried.

Ald. Gainey pointed out that the above is in keeping with the agitation in other cities of less than 50,000 population for Sunday street cars.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK.

ALDERMAN GAINEY is on the right track when he sets out to secure an amendment to the statutes giving cities of less than fifty thousand population the right to operate street cars on Sunday if the people so decide by plebiscite. There is nothing of common justice in the present arrangement. The discrimination in favor of the larger cities is without warrant. Residents in the smaller urban centres are just as much entitled to choose their own course, if they are as competent to do so, as are the citizens of London, Hamilton, Toronto or Ottawa. The present legislation on this subject is a standing outrage upon a large section of the population of Ontario. Radial roads are not affected by the statute and this is simply another feature of the incongruity of the enactment.

The street car is the poor man's vehicle, the only means of transportation he has on the one day of the week that he can take his family on an outing. If the morals of a city are endangered by the operation of street cars on Sunday then let the prohibition apply to large and small centres alike. If Sunday street cars are demoralizing, then let the Legislature—or is it the Lord's Day Alliance that really handles such matters?—save the people from their sins by taking the same action with regard to those who use automobiles, livery rigs and other vehicles for purely pleasure purposes on Sunday.

The Legislature should have stamina enough to deal with this question regardless of the opinions of the members of any cleric or lay organization, or a combination of both, an organization that cannot be taken as representative of the people. Responsible government has been established at infinite cost, and should not be surrendered easily. The danger in Ontario is that the private organizations that make themselves so active in regulating the morals of the people will by their very excessive zeal drive the public to the opposite extreme.

It is by no means certain that the citizens of Peterborough would vote for Sunday street cars. A plebiscite on that question would be another issue between the classes. The man who owns an auto or a horse vehicle would naturally object to any change in present conditions.

Is it not possible that the poorer classes would use Sunday street cars for the purpose of getting to church? Would there, for example, be any sin marked up in the record against the man and his family who, living in the suburbs, took a Sunday street car in order to attend the Kennedy revival services in the big tent on Hunter street? Autos are parked around the big churches morning and evening every Sunday, and those who come in cars are surely no less devout in their worship than those who walk to the services.

It requires a big push to get the Legislature out of a rut and into action, but Alderman Gainey has at least made a beginning.

REWARDING EFFICIENT SERVICE.

THE ALDERMEN did the handsome thing the other night when they voted Dr. C. H. Amys, the retiring health officer, an honorarium of $100 for his faithful and efficient service to the public during his three years' tenure of what is really the most important and responsible position in the city and for which the set compensation is glaringly inadequate. But the members of the Board of Health, with whom the health officer is more directly associated, are in a position to better appreciate what he has done on behalf of the city. Those members unanimously ask that the honorarium in question be doubled.

Dr. Amys has risen to every occasion during his term of office. He has sacrificed his private interests to those of the public. The city has been singularly free from illness during his administration. He handled the flu epidemic last fall with an energy and efficiency that was the admiration of profession and laity alike. The value of his services during that trying period are not to be estimated in dollars and cents, but an expression of appreciation to the extent of $200 would at least be only fair when all the circumstances are considered.

SIR THOMAS WHITE.

SIR THOMAS WHITE for the past seven years has been an outstanding figure in the Dominion Cabinet. He owed his appointment in the first place to his reputation as one of the leading financiers in the country and to his record as an unwavering supporter of protection for Canadian industries. During his administration of the Finance Department he has amply maintained that reputation and has never swerved from his principles with regard to the fiscal policy of the country.

If Sir Thomas White insists on retiring now, the Government and the country at large will have reason to regret the loss of his services. He has during the war guided the nation's finances with a skill that has won encomiums not only at home but in the United States and from the financial experts in every country in Europe. His task was gigantic, but he was equal to the duties imposed upon him, duties heavier than those which have fallen to the lot of his predecessors.

Sir Thomas White has made personal financial sacrifice to serve his country. His earnings as a Minister in the Cabinet have been less than one-third of the amount that he could command in private business. If he retires now to accept a position for which his talents fit him, his appointment to a new post marks another step in his successful career.

PEACE DAY JULY 19TH.

THE ALDERMEN at their meeting last night were not in favor of a holiday one week from Saturday, as suggested by the Government at Ottawa, in order to celebrate the signing of the peace treaty. While the City Council was in session the Merchants' Association of the Board of Trade were recording the same opinion.

It is quite possible to overdo the holiday business. Peterborough has already taken the lead in celebrating the signing of the peace treaty. The day set apart for that purpose immediately preceded the Dominion Day celebration. The annual Civic Holiday is not far in the distance. Another peace day would bring two more holidays close together. No business should be subjected to such a strain, no workingman should be required to sacrifice so many days' wages. It is not a question of loyalty. That idea, too, has been overworked to the point of exhaustion. The best patriot is he who looks most closely after the needs of his dependents. The man devoted to his family is as a rule the best citizen. Loyalty is the twin sister of charity, both virtues being rocked together in the same cradle.

At the time of writing the Government have not yet declared July 19th a statutory holiday. If they do, the people here and elsewhere will have no alternative but to suspend business on that date. If, however, they leave the matter to the option of the municipalities, there is no valid reason that can be urged why Peterborough should indulge in a veritable orgy of holidays.

A MAN OF DEWART'S STAMP.

(Flesherton Advance.)

WILLIAM PROUDFOOT, who was denied the leadership of the Liberal party in convention at Toronto, has said that his reason for supporting Union Government during the war was that he had two sons in the war and both had written home saying that they needed men. The straight Liberals who opposed Union Government delayed the sending of needed reinforcements, as everybody knew at the time. This fact will not soon be forgotten by the country, either, and Mr. Proudfoot's statement only makes the truth more prominent in the memory of those Liberals who wished to give their sons "over there" the help they needed. A man of Dewart's stamp will never reconcile the fathers and mothers of this Province to the action of the Liberal party in its fatal policy of delay when help was needed.

If a society comes in which pleasurable, co-operative work produces plenty for all, it will be built upon those democratic and industrial institutions that evolved through long centuries of struggle. County And City To Pull Together Is One Aim Of The Board Of Trade

The Board of Trade Committee on Agriculture wants a pull-together spirit between the rural and urban citizens based on common interests and common sense. With this object in mind the farmers are to be the guests of the merchants and members of the Board, in all likelihood at the time of the Fall Fair. The basic idea is that the farmer and the merchant are equally concerned in making Peterborough a good buying and selling market.

The City Plan Committee of the Board is to find out what improvements will profit the city and strengthen its prestige as an industrial center. It is looking ahead twenty-five years. One result of intelligent planning is a rise in property values.

At small cost to the ratepayers improvements may be made in the building of parks, beaches, parkways, streets, etc, etc, but the benefit to the whole city is very great. Thomas L. Adams, Esq., Government Town Planner, is a specialist of international reputation, and at the invitation of the Board has promised to visit the city as soon as the Committee on City Plan has definite and matured proposals in hand.

Informing the whole people about City Government will be the task of the Committee on Civic Education. By going direct to the people, a better knowledge of the relations of the citizen to the community is sure to result. The business-like conduct of the city business is up to the citizen by publicity and constant agitation a better understanding of public business will be spread.

Peterborough has no bad neighborhood and housing problems, but as the city grows these matters will demand preventative action. It is the intention of the Committee on Housing and Neighborhoods to see that the rising generation gets proper living conditions and to work out the troublous rental problem with a view to a more equitable adjustment between rental and housing accommodation.

The plan adopted by the Federal Government by which the Province of Ontario will loan money for home building, by workmen, is before the City Council, which has the privilege of appointing a Housing Commisson for Peterborough. In carrying on building under this plan all rake offs and profiteering are cut out.

Several problems of city government, community development and public service will be investigated by a Committee on Research and Recommendation.

PRICES SOARING IN ENGLAND

Household soap, which sold before the war for 3d. and 4d. a lb., and is now selling at 9d. a lb., will rise to 10d. a lb. in London.

This increase, affecting every household in the country, is due to the great rise in the price of all oils and fats, and is stated to be due to the reopening of trade between Europe and the world. The continent is bidding against Great Britain, and everything into which oils and fats enter, from soap to the fish-fryers' oil, is soaring in value.

Coming upon the top of war prices these increased values are hitting the woman with a family hard. Judging by the price list of a great store in the West End of London, a woman who was paying from 1s. to 1s. 6d. a lb. for fresh and salt butter five years ago must now pay 2s. 6d. Margarine has jumped from 8d. to 1s. 2d., while suet is nearly double the price of the last peace year.

In tinned provisions the West End store lists show advances of more than 100 per cent.; bacon and hams have doubled and nearly trebled in price since 1914.

Green vegetables and fruit are still ridiculously dear in spite of the advanced season. Strawberries are fetching from 2s. to 3s. a lb. Lettuce, cauliflower, and other household greenstuffs are two to three times the price they were before the war.

Crowded Warehouses.

In clothes and boots and other articles of attire the price is still extortionate. Retailers blame the wholesalers. As usual, every trade attempts to put the blame on some other back.

The one thing certain is that the country is filling up fast with the raw material of woollen and leather goods, and there is no excuse for high prices on the ground of shortage of raw material. The Port of London warehouses have been groaning for months under the weight of amazing quantities of wool and hides. In the history of this country there have never been such importations.

A stroll down Oxford street, the great middle-class shopping thoroughfare of London, is instructive. The Oxford street shopkeeper never makes a mistake. He puts in his window what the public wants at the price he knows the public will pay.

10s. Hat For 25s.

Next door is a middle-class woman's blouse and shirt window. The costumes at £5 15s. 6d. and £6 16s. 6d. are double the price they would have been before the war. A few doors farther down is a shop which deals in all kinds of men's wear. A ready-made suit is proudly displayed, as a bargain presumably, at £8 8s., and a Norfolk jacket, of the kind sold before the war for £1 1s., at £2 2s.

Here is a soft velour hat for a man at 15s., and a soft grey felt at 25s., the latter looking no better than a hat sold before the war for less than 10s. The gloves round the corner at 10s. 6d. and 14s. resemble the pre-war 3s. 6d. and 5s. 6d. article, and the rain-coat at 5s. under £6 would have been no temptation to the purchaser of other days at any price over £3.

The Ministry of Food announces that the absence of rain in the large grazing districts is expected to influence the supplies of home-killed stock. Supplies of home-killed meat may therefore be very short during the next few weeks.

THE EAST AND WEST BROUGHT CLOSER TOGETHER.

Western Canada and the Pacific Coast have now been brought within much quicker reach of the East by "The Trans-Canada Limited," the new popular all-sleeping-car train operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway from Toronto and Montreal to Vancouver. It makes the fastest time betwen terminals of any transcontinental train in America. Leaving Toronto at 7:15 p.m. daily, Fort William is reached in 26 hours, Winnipeg in 39, Regina in 50, Calgary in 64, and Vancouver in 90. By this means a business day is saved—a great convenience to the large number of business men who travel between Eastern and Western Canada. Leaving Toronto on the evening of Monday, for instance, it is possible to spend a full business day in Winnipeg and be back in Toronto by Friday afternoon. Tourists to the famous resorts of the Canadian Pacific at Banff, Lake Louise, Glacier, Vancouver and Victoria will also find this train particularly convenient. It consists of standard sleeping cars, dining car, and compartment observation car, and sleeping car passengers only are carried.

TUNIC IS TO BE GIVEN A TRYOUT

France Flings Magnificent Warlike Garment Upon Happy World.

COLORS TO REIGN SUPREME

Models Made of Glistening Coat-of-Mail and Metallic Cloths, and Others of Crepe de Chine or Chiffon.

New York.—Some historians may know when the tunic started its career as a fundamental fashion in the clothing of the human race, but no one has stated the exact date with an attempt at accuracy, according to a prominent fashion authority.

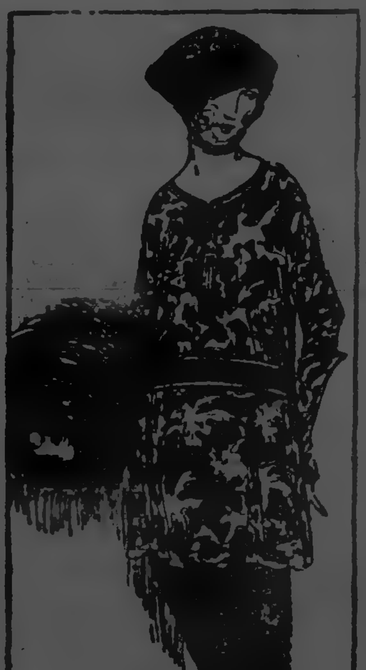
There are many who believe that it was the first garment worn by Adam and Eve, when they realized that clothing was to be a necessity to their species. The tunic really followed the mantle, and from Elijah to William I of England is a long, long spell in history, but we know that the former wore a mantle and the latter a tunic. Julius Caesar occupied a place in the sun between these two, but he wore a toga. Beau Brummel brought in coats and George IV, picturesque as he was in his costumery, blazed the path for the ugliest clothes that the men on this planet have ever worn.

The tunic was a masculine fashion, as most garments are that women think are their own. The critics of this generation fall upon women and smite them hard for their fripperies and frivolities, the whims and caprices of their clothing, and yet these critics are men who do not seem to realize that all the centuries of progress of the male part of the human race were given over to caprice and brilliancy in apparel, as well as to defeat and victory in arms.

War and the Primitive Tunic.

No doubt the clash of arms in France brought back to the minds of the designers the long centuries of warfare that had preceded the peace since 1870. The tunic was the fundamental part of the British warrior's costume, and the cuirass—that glittering breastplate of steel and highly polished metal—was the symbol of all fighters. So France introduced the tunic of that other and primitive warfare which she thought had gone forever, and suddenly found one August morning that it had come to her with all the cruelty of the early centuries.

She did her best to enforce this tunic into the fashions of other countries, but with small measure of success until late this autumn. After steady persistence, a trick she has in the making of all her forms of art, the least of which is fashion, she found that America had suddenly awakened to the comfort and beauty of this garment.



Oriental tunic of terra cotta and gold brocade, with narrow girdle at hips of terra cotta, tied in the back. The long, outstanding cuffs are at the top of fashion.

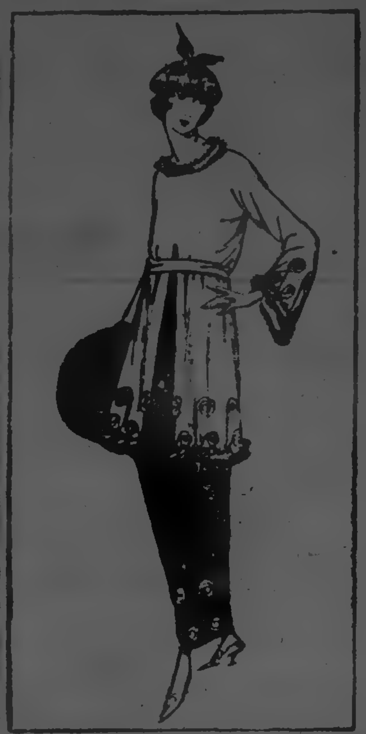
It is difficult to persuade American women to go without shirtwaists. They borrowed the idea of a wash shirt from man, as they have borrowed all their fashions, and they felt, and rightly so, that there is an element of cleanliness in putting next to the skin throughout the day hours a garment that can go to the tub. The tunic does not go to the tub, and the only way to keep it entirely fresh is to wear it over a long-sleeved muslin lining, which many women do.

Practical and Ornate Blouses.

The tunic and the outside blouse are one and the same thing. You may call it a cuirass [illegible] blouse with a peplum, or a [illegible] or whatever name [illegible]. The elemental fact [illegible] fashionable blouse of today [illegible] shoulders to hips. It may [illegible], it may not. Its sleeves may be cut according to the fashion of William I or they may be after the manner of Dagobert of France—long and wrinkled to the wrist.

Building on this foundation, the designers in America and Paris have thrown caution and economy to the winds and accepted this new blouse in such an extravagant manner that they seem to be making up for that time when they let it rest neglected in the dark corners.

The cables from Paris insist that coat suits are much smarter than one-piece frocks for the woman of fashion and her followers, but here in America, even with the impetus given to tailored suits in the early autumn, the pendulum appears to have swung back to one-piece frocks and luxurious wraps of fur and velveteen. Probably with the advent of early spring, with the southward bound tourist, the coat suit will regain the prestige of October. If it does, these extravagant, short, medieval tunics will have a high chance for development. In the interim, they are worn not only with heavy tailored suits, but as tops to separate skirts.



Outside blouse of gray velvet embroidered in black and trimmed with bands of fur. It is worn with a skirt of black velvet embroidered in gray.

Can Be Made at Home.

It is in this department of dress that they are most brilliant. There are some dressmakers who feel that smart women will no longer order entire frocks if the enthusiasm for these brilliant accessories grow in strength. However, there is no reason for despair in that, for the tunic blouse, as it is displayed at this hour, is no mean thing to make and no poor thing to purchase. Its fabric and the ornamentation put upon it bring the cost well up beyond the average purse. But the best part of it is that the amateur can make these things at home, for they have nothing but straight lines and are built from loosely hanging widths of the material.

And yet there is danger in the work of the amateur, especially if she is guided by this hasty description, for it is the tunic of the Conqueror that is in fashion, not the smock of the Russian moujik or the gorgeous coat of the Arabian potentate. The widths must outline the figure, and they must cling to the hips, and the armholes must be cut with precision and perfection. The whole attempt of fashion today is to throw the figure into a sharp outline, and we must watch that tendency if we would keep abreast of what is happening and cultivate our vision to look ahead.

There is no reason for women to cry aloud over the extravagance of some of the new tunics that are offered, for these may be copied in simple fabrics.

Leather Buckskin Brocade.

Here are a few of the most extreme short tunics that are sponsored by good houses in Paris and America. First, there are the blouses of leather, which were shown in America a month ago, with and without sleeves. They came out with the leather top coat and the service coat of peltry and leather.

As a rich sister to the practical leather blouses are those of colored buckskin, made in deep pink and embroidered all over the surface. These are worn with long, narrow black and seal-brown velvet skirts.

The metal tricots are also used. They are reminiscent of the early centuries of warfare. They are cut on the fashion of the Conqueror's tunic.

Tunics That Will See Active Service.

As opposed to these gorgeous specimens of tunics that never were worn by William the Conqueror or any of the medieval warriors, there are practical ones in brilliant wool jersey. In France they are wearing them in colors taken from splendid-hued flowers. Crepe de chine is a good fabric, and all manner of velours, suede cloth and knitted wool are turned into these tunics. They are not somber or demure. The world wants color, and it is going to have it. Let none rise to cry it down. There may be other shadows threatened by the pessimists but we have emerged from the blackest shadow of them all; and in our new state of happiness we intend to dress in scarlet and purple!

A SINGULAR CUSTOM

And How It Was Illustrated by a Russian Countess

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

A ball was in progress in the Winter palace at St. Petersburg. There were few persons in the resplendent throng who were not titled, and in Russia even a prince cannot hold his position in the court circle without complying with a number of requirements. Among the few at the ball without the prefix to the name of count, baron, duke or even general, without gold lace or a string of decorations on the breast, but in plain black evening dress, was Adelbert Wyman, an attache to the American legation.

If Wyman was bereft of artificial plumage nature had endowed him with an attractive personality. He was finely built, being tall and proportioned for an athlete, while his countenance bespoke a manly spirit within. Having inherited a fortune and work not being a necessity with him, he had adopted a profession in which money making had no part and which to him seemed full of interest—diplomacy.

Wyman had prepared himself for his career by the study of international law and more especially of several foreign languages, Russian among the number. He was therefore enabled to chat in her native tongue with a young Russian girl, with whom he danced several times at this imperial ball. The Countess Olga Ivanovna was one of those women of the north whose complexions are fair, whose eyes are blue and whose hair is flaxen. Notwithstanding the fact that she was noble and her companion was a commoner, she seemed to be pleased with him. Indeed, there was something unique in that unadorned figure among hundreds of men most of whom relied for admiration on their velvet clothes, tinsel and the medals strung on their breasts. Some of them were misshapen, some had homely faces, and all were dressed as if for a play. Wyman alone was unadorned.

"How do you like Russia?" asked the countess. All visitors are asked this question and if they are well bred usually reply that they like the country they visit very much. Wyman's reply was that the country interested him. When asked why, he said that it was in the marked difference to what he had been accustomed.

"In what way?" asked the girl.

"First, with you Russians everything points from the people to the government, while with us everything points from the government to the people. In other words, here the people seem to be for the government, while with us our government is for the people. But it is the many singular customs in the different parts of your great empire that especially interest me, the pronounced varied types of your people. I have read that in a certain province dowryless girls are raffled for as wives, the money paid in for chances being given for a marriage portion."

"There is a more singular custom than that," added the countess. "In a certain part of Russia the girls propose to the men. If a girl wants to marry a man she goes to his house. If he refuses to marry her he is regarded as insulting her and her family, and they take revenge upon him."

"The privilege of proposing marriage," said Wyman, "accorded to the man is a mere custom. For my part I see no reason why a woman should not be as free to ask a man to marry her as that a man is free to ask her to be his wife."

"Do you really mean that?" asked the countess, looking up at Wyman archly.

"I certainly do. But you must not take me in that respect as representing my countrymen. I like to think for myself and am not a slave to customs."

The two parted at this point, but just before the ball closed they met again.

"We go next week to our home in the province of Viatka," she said. "If you will make us a visit there I think I can show you some more of our odd customs. The people about us have some very singular ones."

"I assure you I feel highly honored by the invitation and shall accept it with much pleasure."

In time Wyman received a formal invitation to visit Count Ivan Ivanovna's estates in Viatka. A time was set for his coming, but none for his departure. This surprised him, for it is usual among most entertainers in high life all over the world to invite their guests for a definite period. The American was cordially received by the young lady's family and a suit of rooms placed at his disposal. He had not before met any of them except Olga, and he seemed to be considered her especial guest. At any rate, she took upon herself his entertainment, driving him about herself, showing him the people, how they lived, how they worked and how they reared their children. Wyman was much interested in it all and more especially in the ignorance of not only the children, but of their parents.

"But you have not shown me," said Wyman one day when they were out together "any of those singular customs you spoke of when in St. Petersburg."

"You must be patient," was the reply. "You Americans are always in haste. If you are to be a diplomat you must get rid of that American trait."

A couple of weeks passed. Olga Ivanovna showed no disposition to part with her visitor, nor did he care especially to return to the city. There were no intricate questions between the United States and Russia to render his attendance on his chief necessary, and he was not recalled. He occupied his time during the day in studying the Russian people under the guidance of his fair hostess, and the evenings did not seem long enough, since he invariably spent them in her company.

If Wyman thought of what might come of this association it certainly did not occur to him that a family whose nobility might be traced back for centuries, which was in high favor with the czar, would consent to admit a commoner like himself into its charmed circle by giving him one of its members to wife. Nor did he suspect that Olga Ivanovna would stoop to ally herself with him. He was happy, and he was young, and young persons are not given to looking to a point where their happiness may come to an end.

One evening Olga showed a well defined symptom that the little god had claimed her as one of its victims. Her parting with the American was accompanied by an intensity of feeling not before definitely displayed. Wyman went to his rooms wondering. Could it be that, yielding to love, this high-born beauty would surrender to an untitled man from the other side of the globe?

The next morning Olga told her guest that there was to be a singular ceremony in the line of what she had promised him. He was delighted. Olga would take part in it. Would he like to do the same? Certainly. What was it like? There would be racing. She would be dressed in running costume. If he intended to take part he would better dress for the same purpose. Capital! He had been a sprinter in school and afterward in college. He had several cups at home he had won on the cinder path.

An hour later Olga appeared attired in a dress the skirt of which came only to the knees. Wyman had no sprinting costume with him, so he appeared simply in a pair of white flannel trousers and shirt. Thus arrayed, the two sprang into a phaeton which stood at the door, and Olga drove to a field on which was a crowd of people. At one end of the open space was a tent. [illegible] drove to a point near the canvas, and both she and her guest alighted. Olga went into the tent for a few moments, where she divested herself of her jacket and came out ready for a run.

Wyman saw no one else prepared for racing and noticed that he and Olga seemed to be the center of attraction. While he was wondering what it all meant, Olga, who had walked a short distance from him, turned, beckoned to him and then darted away over the field.

Wyman ran after her. There was the same excitement, the same cheers, the same shouts, as when he had won cups in America. He was surprised to see that Olga was running very swiftly. Gallantry at first caused him to moderate his pace, but it was not long before he realized that if he was to catch her he must do his best.

The space to be traveled was 200 yards, and to win Wyman must catch the fugitive before reaching a goal at the other end of the field. He was at first so dilatory that when Olga had made half the distance it seemed he would lose. And so he would have lost had not Olga in the next quarter slowed her pace. Within a hundred yards of the goal she ran so slowly that Wyman had no difficulty in catching her. He put his hand on her shoulder, and she fell back into his arms amid a vociferous approval of the onlookers.

Having recovered her breath, she slipped her arm through his, and they walked back together to the starting point. Out of the tent came a priest and advanced toward them. Olga raised her hand in protest.

"No, no, father. This is not a real wedding. This gentleman wished to see some of our customs, and I thought I had best show him one of our wedding ceremonies and arrange that he should be a part of it, but your services will not be required."

Wyman stood looking at the speaker wonderingly. The excitement of the chase was upon him. Moreover, a delightful suspicion flashed in his mind that there was something more in this ceremony than to show him a custom of the country.

As for the crowd, it showed signs of dissent. There were cries of "A wedding, a wedding!" But the countess, who was much beloved by the people, stilled them.

"For my part," said Wyman, looking at Olga with eyes that expressed far more than his words implied, "I think the people are right. We should not disappoint them."

At this the cries were renewed, and this time Olga found it impossible to still them. She gave Wyman a questioning look, then dropped her eyes. Wyman struck while the iron was hot and signaled to the priest to advance and perform the ceremony. Olga yielded, and the two, having been made one, were escorted to the bride's home by a singing, shouting populace.

Wyman returned to the embassy at St. Petersburg, and it was announced to the world that the secretary of the American legation and the Countess Olga Ivanovna were betrothed. Not long afterward they were married in presence of the imperial family, and there were few persons at the capital who knew that this was a supplementary ceremony.

Wyman's life has been spent mostly abroad, but a portion of it he has lived in America with his Russian wife.

Original "Yeoman."

The title "yeoman" is of military origin, and the yeomen were so styled because, besides the weapons fit for close engagement, they fought with arrows and the bow, which was made of "yew," a tree that has more repelling force and elasticity than any other. After the Conquest the name of yeoman, as applied to their original office in war, was changed to that of archer.

A CAMPANILE.

A Style of Architecture Rare in the Western World.

The campanile is not found in Western Europe outside Italy, except in rare places where Italian influence had penetrated. It is a detached tower, standing on a foundation of its own, but associated with a building, usually a church, for which its bells are the announcer.

The campanile is thus the tower complete, being itself an architectural unit, whereas other towers surmounting buildings, are but adjunct and decoration. Being treated as a thing in itself, the campanile is the tower come into it own, the perfected tower.

Hence the campanile obtains a treatment that no ordinary tower can, and becomes a thing of grace and beauty, of dignity and proportion. It requires heroic treatment and architectural genius to be realized in all its possibilities. Not every campanile is a success or as much of a success as is permitted by its nature. The most famous one stands in the square of St. Mark's in Venice, rebuilt upon the site as a replica of the ancient one which an earthquake shook down a few years ago.

A good example of the campanile in America stands in Chicago next a Roman Catholic church in the Byzantine style. It is not so ambitious as it is harmonious with the church whose bells it holds. A campanile does not consort with a Gothic edifice or indeed with a Renaissance one. It is distinctly a Byzantine feature or anyhow a Roman one.

The Byzantine building is derived from the ancient Roman basilica, whose arches are round. The campanile is the natural, or originally the necessary supplement to such a building. Half domes or even whole ones are not discordant to the campanile, but Gothic vaulting and Renaissance facades are incompatible with it.

The Chameleon.

A general belief is that the chameleon changes its color in accordance with its surroundings. Some experiments throw doubt on this view. The color changes seem to be regulated by light, temperature, excitement, etc. Thus one placed in sunlight so that only one side was exposed to the rays of the sun became dark brown on this side and pale brown mottled with green on the other. Placed in a dark box and kept at a temperature of 730 degrees Fahrenheit, another emerged a brilliant green. Another specimen in a dark box at 500 degrees Fahrenheit assumed a uniform salty-gray color.

Springs Make Comfort.

The comfort of the passengers in an automobile is to a great degree dependent upon the character of the springs of the vehicle. These may be adjusted to suit the loads by means of a new invention of French origin. At each end of the rear springs is an elongated slot, in which the eyebolts can be moved by a lever or wheel at the driver's seat. The effect of altering the position of the bolts is to lengthen or shorten the springs, thus decreasing or increasing their stiffness and resistance. Definite positions or stopping points are provided for the sliding bolts, so that the driver may adjust his springs to a specific number of passengers.

Soap In Pompeii.

A soap boiler's shop was among the thing discovered in the excavation at Pompeii several years ago. The city was buried beneath volcano ashes A. D. 79. It is said that the soap found in the shop had not lost all efficacy, although it had lain under the ashes more than 1,800 years. Soap making was quite a business in a number of the Roman cities at the time that Pompeii was destroyed.

Ancient Bombs.

Workmen making an excavation for a building at Bahia, Brazil, unearthed a zinc box containing four dynamite bombs. The bombs apparently had been buried nearly half a century, as they were wrapped in a copy of the New York Weekly Bulletin of the year 1874.

The Grand Defile.

That the reader may the more fully see the scene of the Grand Defile, let him picture a great square of state and university buildings, within which is a circular half-mile track, not of cinders for athletic sports, but of clay and gravel for military parade, and within the track rich turf, cultivated trees and shrubbery, writes Frederick W. Bookman, in Scribners. At the central point of the northern end was the Tribune du President or Reviewing Stand. Within a few moments after the filling of this stand by the guests of the republic, soldiers cleared the track and were posted closely along its edges.

The Defile began with the approach of a French general with staff, followed by a cavalry band. Saluting the President and reviewing officers, the general wheeled outward and took position facing the stand and at the head of the long turfed aisle, which stretched away between trees as the diameter of a circle. Then there passed for an hour French soldiers and sailors of every branch of the service, mostly members of Gouraud's army, the poilus in horizon-blue, the Moroccans with yellow uniform and red fezzes, resembling a moving field of poppies; artillery, the heavies and the seventy-fives, and the smaller types, mortars and machine-guns, like big insects ready to crawl, cavalrymen and marines, with the pompons rouges of Brittany, many of them of the immortal nine thousand, which for seven days held at bay forty-five thousand Germans on the retreat on Paris, in 1914. Last of all came the tanks, which moved along the parade-ground like huge turtles. As every branch of service, led by its band, went by, its officers coming to the salute as only Frenchmen can—picked units from fighting divisions of the line — our admiration rose; but Alsace herself was still to come, and for this we waited.

After the last tank a moment passed. Then a few hundred yards away could be seen approaching the Alsatian column, and at its head the French veterans of '70. Admiration and cheers for the young, the vigorous, the victorious gave way to indescribable emotion. Cheers and tears, tears and cheers, and as the head of the column came abreast the Presidential stand, from these gray-haired soldiers of France of the last war, from these prisoners of hope, their heads uncovered, their right arms lifted high, involuntarily, and without command there burst forth the pent up cry of long years: "Vive la Patrie. Vive la France!"

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, July 10.—Prior to the departure of Mrs. (Rev.) Snell for Frankfort, she was presented with a hymn book and the following address:

Dear Mrs. Snell,—

In view of your intended removal from our midst, we have felt that it would be a satisfaction to us to intimate to you our genuine appreciation of you and of your labors during your stay with us. We realize that in your removal we are sustaining a loss that is heart-felt. During your stay here, we have always found you arraying yourself on the side of right. You have always stood for all that is worthy in life, and have given generously of your time and talents to help on every cause for the advancement of the kingdom of God.

There is no means of measuring how much the church really owes to you for the example of true Christian character and sterling integrity you have at all times set, and while you may feel that your work here is finished, yet it is not, as your influence will live on in the lives of those you have mingled with, and, though absent in body, your example will still contiue to be a benediction and a blessing, for we conscientiously believe that your services were rendered, not for reward, but from an earnest desire to "spend and be spent in His service." In times such as these, words fail us, and what we would say we cannot, so, on behalf of the Ladies' Aid and W. M. S. we ask you to accept this gift as a small token of our esteem for you, and rest assured that our earnest prayers will ever be, that a kind providence may continue to grant you His richest blessing, and that some sweet day when praise here is no more our privilege to render, we may all meet you in the higher sphere, where "praise shall our noblest powers employ."

We hope that in your new sphere of labor you may meet with the success that your zeal deserves, for we feel that your light will shine to brighten another circle of friends, and when you are called to sever your connection with all earthly friendships, may you hear the Master say, "She hath done what she could."

Signed on behalf of the Ladies' Aid and W. M. S. of the Hastings Methodist church—Mrs. Jas. Buck, president of Ladies' Aid; Mrs. N. Beavis, president of W. M. S.

A very pleasing event took place at Bethel Church on Tuesday evening when the congregation met and made a handsome presentation to Rev. and Mrs. Snell, who leave during the week for their new charge. Mrs. Snell was made the recipient of a beautiful autograph quilt and Mr. Snell a purse containing $30.00. Following is the address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Snell—

We, your friends of Bethel Church, have met here tonight to spend a social evening with you before you enter your new field of work. We regret very much that you have to leave us, for we have always known that we have had your sympathy in every phase of work we have undertaken. Your sojourn amongst us has been marked by kindness and helpfulness and has gained for you the confidence and appreciation of your congregation.

These few words but tamely express the respect in which you are held, and thus we ask you to accept these gifts, not merely for their value, but as a remembrance of the esteem in which you are held by us. As you go from our midst to your new field of labor, our united prayers go with we wish you God's protection and strength in all your undertakings.

Signed on behalf of the Bethel congregation.

TACOMA WOMAN GAINS 25 POUNDS

MRS. PERRY WILL PRAISE TANLAC FOR THE REMAINDER OF HER LIFE, SHE SAYS.

"I will certainly praise Tanlac the remainder of my life," said Mrs George Perry, residing at 1920 North Stevens street, Tacoma, Washington, recently, for the medicine has really and truly made me feel like a new woman and in just about two months time after I began taking it my weight had increased twenty-five pounds."

"Seven or eight years ago," she continued, "my stomach began to act in a very peculiar manner. Things I had always been eating failed to agree with me and I had no relish for my food any more. Then my appetite left me entirely and what I ate seemed to do me harm instead of good, as I would bloat up so with sour gas that I was miserable all the time. My whole body, even to my face, would bloat terribly and this gas would press on my heart, causing it to jump and palpitate fearfully. I suffered so with shortness of breath that I could not walk a block without having to stop several times to get my breath, and was completely exhausted by the time I had walked that far. I felt absolutely worn-out all the time, although I did very little work, being physically unable to do much, and was so nervous and restless that I would lay awake night after night. My eyes just seemed to be propped open—and there was no sleep for me. I often had raging headaches, my kidneys were in bad shape, too, and there was such awful cutting pains in my back that I could hardly bend over to pu my shoes on. My limbs and feet got so they would often swell until I could not get my shoes on and sometimes I could not walk at all.

"I was paying out money all the time for treatment and medicine, but only got worse, and at last reached the point where life did not seem worth living. My mother finally persuaded me to take Tanlac and the results are I am a well and happy woman. My appetite is splendid and I eat just anything I want at any time without suffering the least bit afterwards. Since the gas has stopped forming on my stomach I can walk any distance, in fact, I am walking nearly all the time every day, and never suffer any more from palpitation or shortness of breath. I have also gotten entirely rid of the headaches, as well as the pain in my back, and my kidneys are in fine shape. I sleep like a child every night, and I never have that tired feeling any more, although I am going all the time. To put it all in a few words, I was never in better health than I am right now and words cannot express the gratitude I really feel for what Tanlac has done for me. It has been a God-send to me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in field by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield, Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Geiert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

The community was deeply shocked last Saturday afternoon to learn of the death of Mr. David McCarthey, while raking hay on his farm one mile east of Keene. His little daughter, Mabel, who was in the field with him, noticed the team standing alone. When she went to see what was wrong she missed her father and went in search of him and found him lying on the ground covered with blood. She immediately summoned help, but on being taken to his home he lived only a short time, being badly injured internally. Mr. McCarthey was a life long resident of the vicinity, having been born and raised here, and was highly respected by all who knew him. The family have the deepest sympathy of the community in their bereavement. Those left to mourn his loss are his wife, four daughters Isabel, Mabel, Margaret and Kathleen, and three sons, Michael, James and Owen, all living at home. Two sisters, Isabel and Abigail, of New York, and two brothers, James, of Saskatchewan, and Vincent, Keene, also survive. Jackson—Dawson

The home of George Dawson, "The Maples," South Monaghan, was the scene of a pretty wedding at high noon, on Wednesday, July 2, when his only daughter, Myrtle C., became the bride of Joseph Oscar Jackson, also of South Monaghan. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. M. W. Leigh, B. A., in the presence of a few, of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The wedding march was played by the bride's cousin, Mrs. Rev. M. W. Leigh, and little Mildred Dawson, neice of the bride was flower girl. The bride was attired in a dainty gown of white and carried a shower bouquet of Canterbury bells and roses. The couple were unattended, but the groom's brother, Alfred and Miss Mary Dawson of Grace Hospital, Toronto, were witnesses during the signing of the register. A very tasty wedding dinner was served and after a few hours of pleasant fellowship the happy couple motored to Frazerville where they took the train for Toronto and Niagara. On Wednesday of the preceding week a number of the bride's friends assembled at the home and by a miscellaneous shower expressed their good wishes and the esteem in which she was held, because of the endearing work accomplished in the Church, Sunday School and W. M. S. of which she is a life member.

Presentation to Mrs. Higgs

A committee, appointed by the Sunday School teachers and officers and the members of the W. M. S. met at the parsonage on Friday, July 4, and presented Mrs. Higgs with a beautiful reading lamp and a copy of the following address.

To Mrs. William Higgs.

Dear Friend:

The members of the Women's Missionary Society and the teachers, and officers of the Millbrook Methodist Sunday School have sent us here this evening to express in some degree, the enjoyment we have all taken in our associations with you and also our appreciation of your cordial friendly spirit. It has been an inspiration to us in learning the secret that the kingdom of Heaven lies within ourselves, and that the blue bird of happiness is singing outside our own door if we have will to hear him.

We know that your home will be happy, wherever your lot can be cast because you have learned this secret, and we hope that outside of your home, in the Sunday School, in the Missionary Society, and in all your Church associations, its bright radiance may be shed upon all with whom you come in contact.

We want you to accept this electric reading lamp as an expression of our regard for you. We hope that you may derive much pleasure from it and that it will remind you of your friends in Millbrook, who wish that Fortune may smile on you, wherever you go.

Signed on behalf of the Women's Missionary Society and Sunday School Committee.

100 Years a Parish

The services held in St. Thomas' Church on Sunday last, in connection with the hundredth anniversary of the parish of Cavan, were of a most impressive nature. There was a large attendance at the morning service, when the Ven. Archdeacon Warren, of Peterborough, assisted by the Rev. A. G. E. Westmacott and the Rev. C. R. Spencer, officiated. Special and appropriate music was rendered by the choir and the beautiful flowers on the altar were gifts from friends in loving memory of those called to higher service.

At four o'clock in the afternoon a children's service was held. The church was filled from end to end with the scholars, teahcers and superintendents of all the Sunday Schools in Millbrook, and Cavan. It was indeed an inspiring sight to see so many from the different denominations gathered "of one accord in one place," and good to hear them all join heartily in the singing of the well-known hymns. Archdeacon Warren addressed the teachers and scholars impressing on them the importance of learning how to live in connection with present day problems.

The evening service was indeed a fitting one for the close of such a day, commemorating, as it did, not only the hundredth anniversary, but also the signing of the Peace Treaty. The service throughout had a note of deep thanksgiving, and the large congregation joined with the well-trained choir in its hymns of praise. His Lordship, the Bishop of the diocese, gave a most scholarly address on the text, "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ," leaving with his hearers the thought that where there is no growth there can be no life.

Preached Farewell

large gathering met in the Millbrook Methodist Church, on Sunday evening last, when the Rev. W. H. Higgs, preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon to the Orangemen of the district.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good-even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

FORTY YEARS' WORK EARNS PENSION FOR TEACHERS

Salaries During Past Decade Have Increased by Over Fifty Per Cent.

From some pension memoranda now being prepared in the Ontario education department it is shown that the salaries of the teachers throughout the province have increased a little over 50 per cent. during the last ten years.

Another interesting item developed was that a lady of 77 years of age is at present teaching school at Aylmer, she having been born in 1842. Ten years ago the veteran teacher was receiving $400 per annum. She now fets $450, and is about to retire on a pension of $365 a year, the latter being the minimum retiring allowance for teachers in the province.

According to Status.

There are also cases of teachers who are getting the $365 pension under the act who never received that amount per annum in their experience. The salaries, of course, vary largely, according to the status of the school.

The pensions run from $365 to $1,000 a year for 40 years' service, and are governed in different ways. The time of service before a pension can be awarded varies from 15 to 50 years, and there are many cases in which more than the half century has been spent by men and women in the profession. No pension is given for less than 16 years, and even then only on account of incapacity.

A teacher who is not incapacitated but who has served between 30 and 40 years, receives an allowance which is designated as actuarial, or almost equivalent to a full pension. The full sum is only payable for forty or more years' service.

Defective Records System.

At present 154 cases for pension are being considered under the new act, and more are to be considered by the education department on Monday next. All the records of the applicants require to be verified. In not a few cases of the older teachers the records are lost and this is attributed to the bad system in vogue in the department some forty years ago. The records branch today leaves nothing to be desired.

Some instances are given to show how the salaries of the Ontario teachers have increased during the last ten years, and these, which follow, are taken from the present lists of applicants for pensions, the years being 1909 and 1919: $600 to $900 $710 to $1,310, $700 to $1,050, $500 to $627, $400 to $450, $1,650 to $2,500, $225 to $450.

RAILWAY BOARD ACTS QUICKLY

TAKES OVER WINDSOR STREET RAILWAY ON ACCOUNT OF STRIKE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Windsor, July 10.—The Ontario Railway Board have now taken over the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway, with Vice Chairman Ingram as manager. This was done after the board had conferred ten minutes on arriving here today.

Employes now on strike have increased their demands. They first asked for a scale of from forty to fifty cents an hour but now demand 50 to 60, saying that the cost of living has increased within the last three weeks.

SIR THOMAS WHITE DENIES REPORTS

SAYS HE HAS NOT ACCEPTED POSITION IN PRIVATE LIFE.

Toronto, July 10. — Sir Thomas White, who is at his home in Toronto for a few days, stated last night that reports which have appeared and are appearing in the press to the effect that he had been offered and had accepted an executive position with some railway corporation, or bank or life insurance company, were entirely without foundation, and were unfair to the men occupying the positions which have been mentioned. The minister stated that he had made no financial plans whatever for the future.

Speaking to the Canadian Press, he expressed himself as greatly pleased with the success of the Canadian loan in New York. The result he said, would be to more firmly establish the credit of Canada among American investors and facilitate the future sale of Canadian, provincial, municipal and other securities. This would tend to favorably influence exchange conditions between Canada and the United States. The minister stated that all the Dominion's external maturities were now arranged for a long time to come. On July 1, he said, a sterling obligation of about $20,000,000 was paid off in London and there were no further maturities for many years to come. The New York maturity of $75,000,000, due on August 1, would be paid for from the proceeds of the loan which had just been successfully floated in New York.

STREET LABORERS ARE BETTER PAID THAN SCHOOL TEACHERS

Hon. Fred G. Bale Lectures at Chautauqua Tent on Value of the World's Rising Man Power —Interesting Program For Tonight

Hon. Fred. G. Bale, of Columbus Ohio, delivered the lecture at the Chautauqua tent last night, his subject being "The Fourth Line of Defence." Mr. Bale, who is the head of the juvenile court of his home city, is well qualified to speak on the subject of conserving the future man-power of a nation. He is a forceful, convincing speaker, and although his lecture was generally more applicable to an American city, his listeners last night managed to get his point easily enough.

He compared the first and second lines of defence of a nation to its navy and army and the third to the conservation of natural resources and thrift. The fourth line of defence he declared was the conservation of the nations future man-power. Young men are taught to fight and handle a gun but little is done to fit them morally and mentally.

The lecturer strongly advocated marriage reform laws by which the contracting parties should be made to produce a health certificate after medical examination. He made the statement that thirty per cent of the men called by draft in the United States had failed to pass the physical requirements simply owing to the fact that they had defective parents and through no fault of their own. He declared that today there were twenty-five per cent. more defectives in the United States than there were ten years ago, and yet there has been no legislation passed to reform the marriage laws.

Mr. Bale made little of the attempt of the National Security League to have legislation enacted making military training compulsory and declared that instead we should have universal physical and moral training. He gave a vivid word picture of tenement life in New York and said that while the nation was busy with preparedness parades they were letting thousands of children die of starvation in that great city. In a recent investigation in New York city schools it was found, after investigating only one-third of the schools, that there were 14,000 underfed children attending. This condition should not maintain.

The lecturer scored the educational system of the United States and Canada in that they did not look for the supreme God-given talent in each child and strive to develop it. He was dead against the examination system and if permitted would do away with all such tests. There is too much discipline and not enough individual freedom in the school system today. Teachers were given too many pupils in a class and with the number given could not begin to give any of them the personal attention they should have.

Mr. Bale had quite a little to say regarding the salaries paid to our teachers and declared that a laborer on the streets was better paid than the average teacher of the young. In the United States last year five times as much money was spent on automobiles alone as was spent on education. Congress had appropriated about eight millions of dollars for the raising of better hogs and cattle, but had only devoted twenty-five thousand dollars to educational purposes.

Mr. Bale related several incidents of child delinquency directly caused by the liquor evil and put himself on record as being an enemy of John Barlycorn. He declared that until we finally got rid of this terrible curse we would always have cases of delinquency among children.

He eulogized the playgrounds movement and stated that this would do more for a community than anything else he could think of. Mischief in a boy was simply mis-directed energy and with a proper place to play and with proper supervision this energy would find an outlet and mischief would soon become a thing of the past. Every boy had an inherent sense of fair play and he related several instances to prove this. This statement made a hit with a number of small boys who were peeping under the tent and their applause apparently pleased the lecturer.

Mr. Bale thought that while the playgrounds movement was the first step in the right direction it was not complete enough. Community play centres should be established during the winter months thus continuing the work of the summer.

The lecturer is a warm supporter of the women's suffrage movement and among other things said that as men had made such a mess of the government of nations women should now be given an opportunity of showing what they can do. The old idea of women staying at home and attending solely to her household duties was a dead issue. The day had arrived for women to take up the task of the legislator and revise some of these man-made laws of ours. This had been done already in several countries, including Canada, and would, no doubt, soon maintain in every other country in the world.

The Vissochi Florentines provided an excellent musical program, consisting of vocal and piano solos, piano-accordion solos and a few readings. The piano-accordion as played by Vissochi is a wonderful instrument and the large audience of last night demanded encore after encore.

Tonight's program will consist of a lecture by Dr. Frank Bohn, whose subject will be "Revolutionary Europe," and the concert will be by the famous DeMille quartette of Toronto.

TO RESTORE

"At the end of this crop year, June 30, 1920, we will go out from under the price-fixing business as to wheat. Then these provisions of the Underwood Law, and the order-in-council will become an important factor in establishing the market prices of a free and open market."

Mr. Young would restore a high wall on potatoes and wheat, and their products, viz: ten cents a bushel on wheat 45 cents a barrel on flour ,and 25 per centum ad valorem on Irish potatoes.

Mr. Young is a majority member of the Ways and Means Committee, and announced today that he would make a vigorous fight to have his bill considered.

WHISKEY CARGO WORTH MILLION

HIRAM WALKER & SON HAVE TO FIND EUROPEAN MARKET.

Windsor, July 10. — When the steamship Lake Norden of the Emergency Fleet Corporation of Detroit weighed anchor at Walkerville outward bound for Glasgow, according to Capt. Loughin, she had on board 1,150 tons of whiskey from the distillery of Hiram Walker & Sons.

This is but one of several shipments to be made to Scotland, the temperance laws of Canada forcing the company to find markets overseas. The value of the shipment is estimated at over $1,000,000.

The Lake Norden is one of ninety-five ocean-going boats built by the United States since they entered the war.

CATTLE IN WEST LIKELY TO DIE

COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURE TOLD HALF MILLION LACK FOOD.

Winnipeg, July 10.—The chief topic of discussion at the opening session today of the Cabinet Council of Agriculture was the necessity for giving relief to the burned-out areas of Alberta. The following telegram was received from Geo. S. Ferris, of Nanton, Alta., by H. W. Wood, president of the council:

"Half a million head of cattle in Southern Alberta (five thousand between High River and Willow Creek) must be shipped out for winter food or will perish. If hard winter, total loss. No feed south of Edmonton. Amount of feed below average north of Edmonton. Relief must come from Manitoba or farther east. Matter most urgent in history of country. Action must be immediate or loss will cripple stock industry for years to come."

The council decided that action for relief must be taken and a committee was appointed to investigate the matter and make a report.

Various other matters were discussed, but the important questions of political action and of the handling of the 1919 crop will not be brought up till Thursday, when it is expected there will be a full attendance. Hon. T. A. Crerar was not in the city yesterday and the Ottawa members were not due to arrive till today.

CITY WILL AGAIN PRESS FOR STREET RAILWAY EXTENSION

Deputation Will Visit Toronto, and Once More Get After Sir Adam Beck & Co.—Railway's Com. Strong For Abatement of Nuisance at Night Created by G. T. R. Trains.

At a meeting of the Council's Railway Committee last evening, on motion of Ald. Taylor and Turner Chairman Ald. Edgar and Ald. Morrison were appointed to go with Mr. G. N. Gordon and the Hydro Electric Power Commissioner's engineer over the proposed electric rout from Peterborough to Kinmount.

Ald. Morrison and Street Railway Extension.

Ald. Taylor moved that a deputation from this committee go to Toronto and urge upon the Hydro-electric Commission the extension of the street railway on Park street from Albert to Landsdowne street, and on Lnsdowne street to Lock street, and on Monaghan Road to Byersville. Carried.

Chairs For Band Stand.

Ald. Edgar reported that he had purchased thirty-five chairs for the King Edward Park band stand. This action was approved on a motion by Ald. Turner, seconded by Ald. Morrison.

Garden Tools.

Ald. Taylor and Turner moved that the tools used in the Victoria and Central Parks be purchased from the Horticultural Society at the price of $60. Carried.

Request Laid Over.

A letter was received from the Trades and Labor Council suggesting that the Central and Victoria Parks be better lighted. This matter was laid over.

Railway Nuisances.

On motion of Ald. Turner and Morrison, committee will confer with G. T. R. Agent McNabb in regard to the nuisance created by the company using its line where it crosses Ware, Lock and Romaine streets, as a general shunting line, and also as to a nuisance at night on Bethune street by the G.T.R. running its engines to the station to take water, having disconnected with trains higher up the line.

Praise Well Deserved

(From The Globe.)

Once more the statement is made that Sir Thomas White is about to resign his portfolio as Minister of Finance and return to business life. While the resignation has not yet yet been accepted, it is reasonably certain that Sir Thomas, after a remarkably eventful although brief Parliamentary career, will return to Toronto to take his place in the city's financial life. The Minister of Finance is an honorable member of the Commons in the best sense of the term. He had been intimately associated fith Big Business for many years. He must have had frequent opportunities during this long association to get rich quick by the short-cuts that are frequently taken by the financially immoral. The best evidence that he had walked in the middle of the road, instead of straying into devious by-paths, is that, after holding the purse while Canada has been spending money at the averagerate of more than a million dollars a day for over four years, he steps down into private life under the necessity of making provision for old age by return to business.

FIRST DIVORCE IN MANITOBA

ABSOLUTE DECREE ISSUED BY JUDGE IN COURT AT WINNIPEG.

Winnipeg, July 10.—The first decree of divorce granted in Manitoba was given by Chief Justice T. G. Mathers, in the Court of King's Bench, when Myrtle M. Corneluson, was granted an absolute decree divorcing her from her husband, Louis Corneluson. The contending parties are residents in Brandon, Manitoba.

Grounds for divorce were infidelity on the part of the husband. The original application in the case was made before Mr. Justice MacDonald, in the Court of King's Bench, July, 1918. A decree nisi was granted at the time, but the decree absolute was held up pending the Privy Council decision in the Walker vs. Walker case.

THE MAYOR REFUSED TO

would be ready for its signatures Friday.

Ald. Phelan replied that just as soon as the contract is signed he will notify Engineer Barber to convey his instructions to the contractors.

The Agreement.

This document was read and practically went through without any amendments.

Wages Again.

In going over the agreement, Ald. Crowe thought the exact wages to be paid should be specified—45c an hour for laborers and 67½c for carpenters. "The men might, after working on the bridge a short time strike for higher wages, which would increase to the city the cost of the bridge."

Ald. Gainey saw reason in Ald. Crowe's suggestion. "He would not like to see a strike for more wages after the contract had been started."

Ald. Crowe did not agree that anything would be gained by specifying that the present union wages be paid by the city for eighteen months, or until the bridge is completed as the first of May each year generally ushers in changes in union scales.

Ald. Garside understood the men had agreed that their present scale should stand eighteen months, while the bridge was being constructed.

What, Another Strike?

Ald. Edgar replied he had heard a rumor today that as soon as work on the bridge had been well started the men were going to strike for higher wages.

Ald. Garside: "They can't do that. It would not be constitutional."

Under pressure from Ald. Edgar, a clause was embodied in the agreement providing for the prevailing scale of union wages being paid up to May 1st next. After that time the wage question will be another Council's business, he said.

Who Were There.

There were present the Mayor, Ald. Phelan, Gainey, Garside, Crowe, Turner, Hamilton, Edgar, McIntyre.

Detroit restaurants raised the price of all drinks, hot and cold, including tea, coffee and milk, from 5 to 7 cents.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.
As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said— and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

For Artificial Limbs.

Willow, or other wood of a similar nature, has heretofore been made use of in the manufacture of artificial limbs, but a cheaper and at the same time superior substitute has been found in a composition in which celluloid largely enters. The composition is made use of by spreading upon pieces of fabric, which are then wound about a mold. The new material is said to be light, easily worked and of trivial cost.

As to Democracy.

If democracy means that any man may help who can, that school and university will give every man and woman the fairest chance, the most generous inducement to help, to do the thing he can best do under the best conditions, then, yes; but if democracy means getting up a riot and boycott among the stupid and lazy and illiterate whenever anything is doing, then [illegible]—H. After the organization of the Confederacy Tyler was elected a member of the Confederate congress. He died at Richmond, January 18, 1862.

Pearls.

A pearl is built up in layers, like an onion. The layers are very hard, but with sufficient skill one layer after another may be removed or "peeled." Sometimes a pearl that appears dull, spotted or imperfect in shape, when peeled yields a gem of the finest lustre and consequently of great value. Dull, rough pearls, bought for a few dollars, are sometimes sold for many hundreds of dollars after having been peeled.

MISS EMMY WEHLEN STARS IN "HIS BONDED WIFE" TONIGHT

Story of the Picture Play That Will Be Presented at Grand For Rest of This Week

The following is the story of the [illegible] play, "The Bonded Wife," which will be presented at the Grand for the rest of the week, with famous movie artist, Emmy Wehlen, in the leading role.

Doris Morse, only daughter of Digby Morse, copper king, has taken the assumed name of Dora Mills and is stopping at a quiet little boarding house in Atlantic City. She has run away from home to escape fortune hunters, having made up her mind to marry a man who loves her for herself alone. She thought she had found such a man in Sidney Lawrence but fortunately discovered her mistake before their engagement had been publicly announced.

Philip Hazard, a clever, but struggling young architect is spending his vacation at Atlantic City. One day he rescues Doris from drowning, when she has been carried out by an undertow. They become greatly interested in each other and since he knows nothing of her money Doris at last has the satisfaction of knowing that here is someone who really likes her for her own self. She tells Phil that she is a clerk at Macy's. Their friendship advances rapidly and they are already very much in love when Phil's two weeks vacation comes to an end and he returns to the city. Doris phones him immediately upon her arrival in town, and Phil plans to meet her at Macy's at closing hour. He has arranged to take her to his home for dinner, where he lives with Tom Lloyd, his best pal, and Lloyd's widowed sister, Kate.

Doris is inclined to be jealous of Kate at first, but that very night Phil wins her promise to marry him. On her way home Phil tells her they are going to start life right by saving for the future. His mother was an heiress, and his father was a poor man. Their life had been ruined on account of his mother's money, and finally his mother had left both husband and son. For this reason Phil disapproves of one member of the family being rich and the other poor.

Doris is horror stricken. She has been on the verge of telling Phil all, but now it seems impossible. She insists upon leaving him at a corner, saying that her landlady objects to her receiving "gentleman friends."

Kate, looking through a society magazine, has come upon a photograph of Doris Morse. It is an excellent likeness of their "Dora." She and Tom show it to Phil as soon as he comes in, but he refuses to be convinced and decides to go next day to the Morse mansion and find out if Dora is really the heiress.

The following morning, Sunday, Doris has just told her father all about Phil when his card is brought in. Mr. Morse insists that Phil knew who Doris was all the time, or else he would not have known where to find her. But Phil instantly corrects that impression by declaring that he will not marry a woman he can't support in the way she has been accustomed to living. Doris pleads with him but to no avail. Digby Morse is an ideal father. He pretends to be furious, saying that a daughter who would have clandestine meetings with such a young scoundrel had forfeited her right to his home and fortune. It works. Doris leaves with Phil for Kate's home, and they are married.

They take a little apartment above the Lloyds. The novelty of keeping house pleases Doris at first until some of her friends come to call. They clearly show their pity for her and Doris begins to yearn for the luxuries she has always had. However, at that very moment Phil is being interviewed by Mr. Leeds, the president of a big milling firm, who has sent for him. Phil's father-in-law is sponsor for the whole thing but of course Phil knows nothing of this. Mr. Leeds suggests that Phil draw some plans for them in his leisure hours, and if these are successful the young man will be offered a handsome position.

He decides to keep it all a secret from Doris, not wishing to arouse any false hopes, so he decides to work at the Lloyds in the evenings and not tell Doris a thing about it until he is successful.

Poverty is getting on Doris' nerves. She opens a little package her father had given her on which was written "To be opened only by my daughter," should she crave the little luxuries which her father has always been able to give her, and which she may miss in her new life. The packet contains ten $10,000 bonds.

Phil is away every evening. He explains that it is on account of business, but Doris declares that it is an old story. She rents [illegible] apartment next to her own, brings a retinue of servants, and purchases rich furniture and tapestries. Phil feels like a cat in a strange garret and spends more time than ever at the Lloyds, working on his plans. He tells Tom and Kate his troubles, saying that the bonds given Doris by her father are the cause of all his woe. Tom has a brilliant idea. Why not steal the bonds. The suggestion meets with Phil's approval and he decides to go upstairs immediately and get them and to make it seem like a real burglary he will take some of the silver too. Doris hears someone at her silver chest. She comes into the room, revolver in hand, sees a man helping himself to her belongings and fires a shot at him. The thief runs down the fire escape.

The shot wounded Phil. He crawls into the Lloyds' apartment. Kate bathes his wound and is trying to make him comfortable when Doris enters. Not knowing that Phil was the "burglar," her jealousy is again aroused. Undoubtedly this is the way in which Phil has been spending his evenings. She declares at once that she is going to get a divorce and rushes down stairs before Phil can explain.

Doris telephones her father and tells him of the robbery. He sends a detective to trace the thief and starts for his daughter's home. The detective finds the bonds in Phil's pocket. Doris is thunderstruck. She sees the whole situation. Phil has taken them to give to Kate. She will listen to no explanations. Her father arrives. With each presenting their side of the case, Digby Morse straightens things out in his own way and makes both Phil and Doris see their folly. Doris declares she is going to live the way they did when they were first married, for she was far happier then than ever before in her life. But just then Phil is called to the 'phone by Leeds, who tells him his plans have been accepted, and that a high-salaried position is awaiting him. Phil takes Doris in his arms. His "bonded" wife may have her beautiful home after all.

World Must Do Something For Prostrate Roumania, Declares Take Jonescu

THE statement was made recently by the well-known Roumanian statesman, Mr. Take Jonescu, as to the conditions prevailing in his country. It not only sets forth, in the most forcible way, the dire needs of Roumania, needs which ought to be met at the earliest possible moment, but incidentally helps to a realization, still much needed in certain quarters, of what the war has meant and means. The impression that "all is over except the shouting" and a certain moderate amount of clearing up, which may well be left to a chosen few, paid to do the work, is far too prevalent. "The war," as Mr. Lloyd George remarked recently, "is not over," and all who had a hand in it should have a hand also in repairing its ravages.

The necessity for this is well illustrated in the case of Roumania. Roumania needs, at the present time, are of the most fundamental character. She lacks almost everything that can be imagined, for she has been stripped of almost everything that can be imagined by Germany; but she needs, most of all, food and clothing. At the present moment, as Mr. Jonescu explains, the country is practically without bread, and although one of the most fertile countries in the world and one which, in times past, was a great exporter of grain, there is little prospect of her supplying her own needs in this respect for another eighteen months. Almost the whole of her last harvest was taken by Germany and Austria, whilst lack of cattle, lack of tools, and, above all, lack of seed have prevented the proper sowing of the land this spring, so that not more than one-half of the usual area is down in grain.

As for clothing, Mr. Jonescu declares that the situation is indescribable. "There is," he said, "an absolute lack of shoes, and one is continually meeting wealthy people in rags and tatters, for there is no clothing to be had for love or money." In nothing, however, is the hard pass to which Roumania is reduced more clearly shown than in the fact that, although an exceptionally well wooded country, the people during the past winter, endured terrible hardships from cold, owing to lack of fuel. This lack was due, not to any failure in the supplies of fuel, but entirely to the breakdown of the railway system. Germany, as Mr. Jonescu explained, took or destroyed four-fifths of the railway engines, thus adopting the most effective means of crippling the whole commercial and economic life of the country.

When it is remembered that Roumania represents only a very small part of the territory similarly affected; that even more urgent cries for help are coming from Jugo-Slavia, from Tzecho-Slovakia, from Poland and Armenia, to say nothing of the vast unknown want which is yet to be made known and dealt with in Russia; when all this is realized, as it must be realized, it is seen that the call to those who have to meet the needs of those who have not is even more urgent than ever, and that the time for patriotic economy and generous giving is by no means past.

CORN $2 A BUSHEL

Chicago, July 10. Two dollars a bushel for corn, a price once regarded fabulous, was surpassed in the market here. Scarcity of available supplies, together with new crop record quotations on hogs, had much to do with the advance.

SHOULD HAVE UMPIRES FOR ALL TENNIS TOURNAMENTS

No single feature of the management of a tennis tournament contributes more to its success or failure than the umpiring. It ranks second in importance only to the efficiency of the tournament manager in scheduling matches and his firmness in insisting that they be played according to schedule.

Tennis is an amateur sport and its devotees are men and women who play for the love of the game. Very few would intentionally claim a point to which they were not entitled.

On the other hand, most players would prefer to give up the point rather than be accused of taking it unfairly.

This is a main reason why umpires should be provided. Many of the players are so honorable that even though a ball may strike several inches outside the court, they play the point out rather than make the decision, fearing lest some spectator may take exception and they be accused of poor judgment, thereby cheating themselves.

In the early rounds of a tournament, when scores are for the most part one-sided, a few points one way or the other makes little difference.

At these times a player frequently appeals to his opponent for the decision. In case of doubt the point is replayed.

The umpire is usually nothing more than a scorekeeper, for from the umpire's chair it is almost impossible to make some decisions and these can usually be made more accurately and satisfactorily by the players themselves.

In close matches, however, especialy those in which the better players meet in the later rounds of a tournament, it is important not only to have competent umpires, but as many as may be necessary to cover every line of the court.

At such times, the minds of the players are engrossed with tactics and the general plan of play. They should be relieved of all such detail work as keeping the score or making decisions.

In these contests every point is important. Scores of many matches show that in five sets a difference of barely a dozen points frequently separates the winner and loser.

Many sets hang on the decision of a single point. The writer, personally, has seen several times the entire course of a match changed by a single wrong decision, and some of these were at Newport, where the national championship was at stake.

Great care should be taken in the selection of umpires and linesmen, for poor ones are worse than none.

The most important qualification, of course, is a thorough knowledge of the rules. Not less important is good eyesight, good voice, the ability to keep the attention centred on the game, promptness in making decisions and firmness in sticking to them.

In the writer's opinion the following are a few important points that should be kept in mind:

1. A linesman in taking a line should place himself so that he looks along the length of the line. It is almost impossible to make a close decision from any other position.

2. When a decision is required the linesman should announce it as promptly as possible, in a voice that is loud enough to be distinctly heard by both the players and the umpire.

3. The umpire should repeat the decision of the linesman.

4. Every decision should be given whether close or not, and nothing left for granted.

5. The linesman should remember that the only decision he should announce is "out." Silence on his part means that the ball is still in play.

6. The lineman's decision on a question of fate is final.

7. If by chance a player should obstruct a lineman's vision and he is unable to make a decision, he can so state, and appeal to the umpire, who will then make the decison.

BOXING SURELY PAYS.

Some people say that boxing is a poor business. If you think so, just look at the following figures, then think again:

Willard received for his nine minutes of actual boxing $100,000—$11,111.11 per minute, or $185.18½ a second.

Dempsey received $3,055.55 per minute or $51 a second.

That's what we call high finance, but as long as they get it honestly, as they did in Toledo, no one will complain.

JESS WILLARD FOUGHT GAME BATTLE TO THE LAST DITCH.

Toronto, July 10.—The fight fans are all back from Toledo, and opinion seems to be pretty unanimous that Jack Dempsey proved almost better than his most ardent supporters believed and that Jess Willard fought a game battle to the last ditch. Judge Francis Nelson points out that the ex-champion was far from being trained to form, but pays tribute to the courage of the big man. I sat within a foot of the edge of the ring, writes Mr. Nelson, and saw him vainly endeavoring to stave off the whirlwind that was wrecking his fortune as a fighter, but never anything but the gamest effort a beaten and outclassed man could put up. When he was called to the centre of the ring for the fourth round he sagged forward in his chair as he attempted to answer the bell, and his seconds had no recourse but to advise the referee that their man, but ten minutes before the champion of the world, could not toe the mark.

Will Keep Fit for Post Season Series

The International League season closes on September 14th and the American Association runs through to the 28th of that month. This means a lay-off of fourteen days for the Fults league champions before they tackle the association pennant winners in the post season series. To fill in the time a series will be played between the first two teams in the International, and this will keep the flag winners right on edge for their clash with the A. A. winners.

BOYS FINED FOR THROWING STONES

FREIGHT AND PASSENGER TRAINS ARE NOT PERMISSIBLE TARGETS.

Several boys faced His Worship Magistrate Dumble, this morning on the charge of throwing stones at passing freight and passenger trains.

The charge was proved and the juveniles fined.

This should be a warning to all boys that what appears to be a favorite pastime—throwing stones—is a punishable offence.

THREE HEAT PLAN FOR HORSE RACES

OWNERS ALL OVER ARE INTERESTED IN TORONTO FAIR PROGRAM.

Toronto, July 10.—Horsemen are showing a very lively interest in the revival of the trotting and pacing races at the Canadian National Exhibition and the four days' speed trials, August 23, 25, 26 and 27 give every evidence of having a large entry. It is some years since the races were held at the exhibition but in those days the track was recognized as one of the fastest half mile ovals on the continent. It has received rough usage of late from the big guns and heavy military equipment that has been used on the grounds since the war started but for two weeks past, under the skilled supervision of Ald. Sam McBride, workmen have been busy putting it into shape and it is now said to be as fast as ever. It will be carefully nursed until exhibition time.

The program as originally arranged some time ago has undergone slight revision and under the new arrangements there will be a trot and a pace on each of the four days, postponments to be made to the following morning at 10.30 should any be necessary. There will be $1000 per day in purses, $500 to a race and there will be no deductions from money winners. All races are to be run on the three heat plan, $150 for each heat, divided 50 per cent. to the first horse, 25 per cent. to the second, 15 per cent. to the third and 10 per cent. to the fourth. The balance of the purse, $50, is to be awarded to the horse scoring the highest in the three heats. Entries are to close Monday, August 11. Horses eligible August 1st. Mr. Geo. H. Gooderham, M.L.A., is chairman of the committee. The officials have not yet been named but will be appointed at a meeting to be held within the next few days.

BEGS KING TO SAVE BROTHER

PRINCE HENRY OF PRUSSIA PLEADS FOR THE EX-KAISER.

Berlin, July 10.—Prince Henry of Prussia brother of the former German Emperor, has now come to the aid of the dethroned War Lord, and adds his plea to that of the others for abandonment by the allies of their project to bring the former Kaiser to trial, for his crimes against mankind.

Prince Henry, in a telegram to King George, begging him to desist in the effort to extradite the former monarch, pledges himself to assist the King in bringing to light "the truth regarding the war and its consequences."

In his message Prince Henry says that after his conversations with King George in July, 1914, he returned to Berlin and was with the then Emperor when mobilization began. The telegram continues: "I can testify that the Kaiser and his councillors endeavored by every means to avert the war and disaster to mankind. I am ready to refute the calumnies regarding the German Kaiser, which have circulated for years in contradiction of all truth, and I place myself at your disposal in order to assist Your Majesty in bringing to light the truth regarding the war and its consequences."

Former Junker General Wants Prussian Leaders To Receive Punishment

"IT is the right of our enemies to punish those responsible men on the German side who are to blame for this war," declared Field Marshal von Buelow, retired, in an interview with the Berlin correspondent of the Handelsblad." Gen. von Buelow commanded the Second German Army in 1914, was engaged in the fighting near Maubeuge and was retired in 1915, owing to a paralytic stroke from which he has not yet recovered.

"As an old soldier I have not learned to ask for mercy," continued the field marshal. "I only ask for justice for the German people. We soldiers went out to fight by the Kaiser's orders because the Government said the country was in danger. It was not our task as soldiers to investigate. If we had been told the truth our duty was merely to obey. If the German people were misled when they were told that they were assailed by a superior number of enemies, then may a curse be on those who, by false dealings, made three-quarters of mankind the enemies of a great peace-loving people. If there are wretches who deceived us when they said we were attacked, then they deserve the severest punishment, whoever they may be.

"But to destroy a great nation because it is misled by a few people is to sin against the spirit of human justice."

The field marshal, who is one of the founders of the society called the German Society for Civic Education, declared Germany was now in the throes of a moral revolution. The materialistic philosophy, he said, would give way to a new one which would be crowned by the victory of the social idea.

"The one aim of the German society for Civic Education," he said, "is to bring the German people back to the religion of human love. We ask all the intellectual and moral leaders of the world to join us in forming an international community. It was the materialistic and mechanical conception of the world which ruined Germany. It also will destroy our enemies if they do not see that it is the spirit of the citizens which constructs a state."

The Bolshevist War.

Russia under the Bolshevist becomes more and more swamped with its steadily depreciating currency of ruble notes printed in quantity and issued without the financial guarantee of a trustworthy treasury. The system, it appears, is part and parcel of Lenine's determination to make money valueless as a medium of exchange, and so introduce the Bolshevist idea that whatever a person needs shall be paid for in work. One form of work, in short, is to be bartered for another form of work, but quite naturally people who have hitherto bought things with money still cling to the notion that money is valuable. And so the printing presses are kept busy, printing ever more and more ruble notes, and day by day the ruble notes become more and more like pieces of waste paper. Eventually, thinks Mr. Lenine, people will be convinced that money is worthless, and everybody will agree to the cumbersome method of buying one product of labor with another product of labor. Already, so he is reported to have said with considerable satisfaction, the hundred-ruble note is "almost valueless."

Viscount French's Book, Filled With Criticism, Is Considered Ill-Timed

LORD FRENCH has written an account of the earlier operation of the war in which he commanded the British armies, and it appears under the title of "1914." In England the publication of this book has led to a demand that Viscount French be censured, but because he is now Viceroy of Ireland, the Speaker of the House of Commons severely checked an attempt to bring to the attention of the House Lord French's "entry into journalism." Viscount French is peculiarly qualified to write of the events his account deals with, but from a perusal of some of the early chapters which have appeared in United States newspapers, one gathers that it was not so much his competence as an author as his desire to answer criticism, open or implied, that moved him to undertake this task. His friends must surely have tried to dissuade him. He made a fine record in the early days of the war, and the first British Expeditionary Force did more than could have been expected of even that incomparable army. Viscount French relinquished control of the army assured, one would suppose, of a permanent place in the regard of the British people as one of their great soldiers. His subsequent course of taking command of the Home forces and throwing himself energetically into the work of that command increased the number of friends and admirers. He showed not the slightest disposition to sulk over the Government's relieving him of his responsibility in the field and the placing of a younger man in his stead. If he felt that he had been unjustly deprived of the command he was a big enough soldier to bear his burden in silence, trusting to time to vindicate him.

LORD FRENCH.

So long as the war was raging this was no more and no less than the public had a right to expect in a soldier, but now Viscount French appears no longer able to hold the rein on his sense of being wronged, and the book promises to be more a defence of his conduct than an exposition of the military movements of 1914. He is frank in his blame of Gen. Lanrezac, who had the misfortune to impress Marshal French unfavorably at their first meeting, and the writer declares that his forebodings were more than justified. He also criticizes Gen. Smith-Dorrien, and does not scruple to give some of the details of a quarrel he had with Lord Kitchener. The Secretary of State for War visited France as a field marshal, in full uniform, and expressed his intention of reviewing the British troops, then falling back from Mons. Sir John French would not allow this, for he considered that Lord Kitchener was exercising an authority that was properly vested in the commander-in-chief alone, and he felt that Kitchener's appearance in uniform would only have the effect of weakening the confidence of the troops in their actual leader. No layman is entitled to pronounce upon the military questions raised by Lord French and decided by him in his own favor; but it is intimated that the Duke of Connaught may be asked to conduct an enquiry into the earlier stages of the war. One need not wait for the result of this investigation to arrive at the conclusion that Viscount French has made a grave blunder in writing his book at this time, especially when it contains so many unpleasant references to his colleagues, some of whom have given their lives in the war.

GREAT PEACH SHORTAGE

Disease Has Ravished Orchards in Niagara District.

Cheap and Effective Home-made Remedies to Combat the Fly Nuisance—Especial Care Required in Case of Dairy Cattle—Care Must Be Taken to Prevent Sun-Scald of Pigs During the Hot Weather—Prevention and Treatment Explained by Expert.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

NO fruit tree disease this year has been so conspicuous and so injurious as the Leaf Curl of Peaches. In early June more than half of the peach orchards between Beamsville and St. Catharines and many orchards in other localities were so badly affected that almost every leaf was distorted, swollen and turning a brownish color. Most of these trees will not enter winter nearly so healthy nor bear so large a crop next year as if they had not been attacked by the Leaf Curl.

Control.

This year's experience, though a hard one, will doubtless be of much value to the fruit grower, for it has shown as perhaps seldom before the great importance of early spraying of peaches to prevent Leaf Curl. By early we mean before the leaf buds have begun to swell. Sometimes late spraying, that is spraying after the buds have begun to swell, will control the disease, but it will only do so where the wet weather does not come until after the spraying. A single day's rain would not of course be sufficient to start the disease. It takes several days of moist weather. There is good evidence that even fall spraying after the leaves have dropped will also control it.

The best mixture to use is lime-sulphur about 1 gallon to 7 gallons of water. Soluble sulphur 12½ pounds to 40 gallons of water will also control the disease, but is not so popular with the growers as the lime-sulphur. — L. Caesar, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

Fly Remedies.

The fly, like the poor, is always with us in summer-time. In spite of many campaigns having for their slogan, "Swat the fly," he is still with us, and likely to be until the end of time.

Flies are a terrible nuisance in the home, in the dairy and in the stable. They torment the very life out of cows. It is strange that man with all his inventive genius, has not yet been able to overcome his agile enemy, the fly.

Up to the present, no very satisfactory remedy for cow-flies has been worked out. The most we can do is to apply something which keeps them off the cows for a time. The number of fly remedies is legion. There are several very good patent remedies.

A good home-made mixture consists of two quarts of fish-oil or any kind of cheap oil or grease, one-half pint coal-oil, and four tablespoonfuls of crude carbolic acid, thoroughly mixed and applied to all parts of the cow except udder and teats, by means of a cloth or brush. This quantity will coat twenty-five cows, and unless there be rain soon after applying, one coating will last a week. (Leave out the coal-oil for calves.)

Lighter mixtures, containing creosol, zenoleum, etc., may be sprayed on daily. If done before milking, great care is needed, else the milk will become tainted. — Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

"Protecting Pigs From Sunscald."

Now that the hot summer weather has come those who own light colored pigs are beginning to complain of sunburn or sunscald. This condition of the hide of the animal is similar to that of people; it gives the same degree of uncomfortableness to the pig and is caused in the same manner. Consequently, the same method of prevention and treatment may be carried out.

In the first place, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and the prevention is shelter. No matter what kind of stock is in the pasture, shade is essential, and much more so is it for pigs on account of the thin coating of hair on their bodies. If the pasture for pigs is so situated that there are no trees to afford shade to the animals it would be just as well to keep them shut up during the hottest parts of the day and allow them to run out during the evening, night and early morning hours. By keeping them in a pen that is somewhat darkened, they miss both the hot rays of the sun and the flies that are always so bad around a stable of any kind, during the hot weather.

Some people provide a "hog wallow" in their pasture which is a very good thing, but the location should be some place in the shade, as it is a well-known fact that the hide will blister far quicker when wet than when dry. A pig seems to think that a wallow is an essential thing, and if he persuades the farmer into thinking the same, the farmer should lead him to believe that during the heat of the day it is the best time to keep out of it.

If the pigs have become sunburned at all, it is well to keep them inside for a few days and thoroughly grease their bodies, with some nice smooth grease such as vaseline. The grease tends to keep the air from the irritated skin and ease the uncomfortableness of the animal. Vaseline also has a wonderful healing and curative property which makes it preferable in such cases. — J. C. McBeath, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Joseph's Church, Douro, on Tuesday, July 8th, when Miss Agnes Dalton, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dalton, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. John Joseph Condon, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Condon.

The bride wore a cream crepe-de-chine dress with hat to match. Miss Susie Dalton, of Peterborough, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, dressed in grey crepe-de-chine with Panama hat. Mr. Alphonsus Condon, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

Little Miss Lillian and Beatrice Grady, of Peterborough, cousins of the groom, were flower girls and looked dainty dressed in white silk carrying a basket of sweet peas and maiden hair fern.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold wrist watch, to the bridesmaid, a gold brooch set with pearls, to the groomsman, a tie pin, and to each of the little flower girls, a gold bar pin.

The wedding party left the church amid showers of confetti, and motored to the home of the bride's father, where a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate friends of the bride and groom. In the evening about a hundred and seventy of their young friends gathered in, and the evening was spent in music and dancing. EVANGELIST KENNEDY ON THE HEALING OF NAAMAN

Tells How the Conceit Was Taken Out of Proud General by the Prophet Elisha---"The Biggest Fool in Peterborough" Topic Tonight

"How to Take the Conceit Out of a Man" was the subject of Evangelist H. D. Kennedy's address last evening in the big tent on Hunter street. He based it on the story of Naaman, the great Syrian general, who was afflicted with leprosy and who, by going to Elisha the prophet of Israel, was cleansed from the disease.

Mr. Kennedy showed that through the faith of a little Israelitish maid that had been taken captive by the Syrians and who told her mistress of the prophet Elisha in Israel, the great general, Naamau, was induced to go to Israel in search of a cure. All through the scriptures leprosy stands for sin. It is incurable. Sin like leprosy is a disease. It puts everything out of gear. It does not belong on earth and is here only through the agency of Satan. Just as Naaman, the Syrian general, was absolutely helpless to cure himself of leprosy, although he longed to be clean, so the sinner is unable, through anything he can do, to rid himself of his load of sin. Even Naaman's king and all his wealth could not purchase or obtain the healing that he desired. So today neither riches nor power are sufficient to find a cure from sin apart from the method offered by God through Christ.

When the general sought Elisha he took with him rich gifts and a great company. He expected that his greatness would be recognized and that he would be honored by Elisha. Owing to his proudness of heart, Elisha did not even go to the door to meet him, but sent word to him that he should go and wash himself seven times in the river of Jordan. This treatment greatly enraged Naaman and he asked haughtily, "Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?" II. Kings v: 12. The great general felt that he had been humiliated. While he wanted to be cleansed, he desired to be cleansed in his own way. He was willing to pay Elisha a big sum to heal him.

In all of this he is the type of the sinner today who does not like to come to God by the simple way of the Cross, but would prefer to obtain salvation by giving big gifts to the churches or missions, engaging in social service, assisting the poor or in other similar ways. Mr. Kennedy said that there is a great difference between being a servant of God and a child of God. Many professing Christians are willing to serve God without obeying Him and approaching Him in the God-ordained way. It is possible for such people to serve God all their lives and yet lose their souls. On the other hand, it is also imossible to find salvation by gifts to missions, the helping of the poor and needy, engaging in church work and in similar ways. God has ordained that first of all comes faith, and the aceptance of Christ as a personal Saviour, and only then will good deeds done in the name of Christ count.

It was not until Naaman, the Syrian, humbled himself and relinquished his false pride by consenting to bathe seven times in the River Jordan that he was cleansed. So today the sinner must come to Christ in all his humbleness, conscious of his need, confessing his helplessness and trusting only in Christ for salvation before he can be saved and find God. Mr. Kennedy pointed out that the fault with Unitarianism, Christian Science, Spiritualism, and other such teachings is that they deny the diety of Christ and the need of the atonement and thereby set aside the God appointed method of finding salvation. At the close of the service several more conversions were recorded.

The subject of tonight's address will be "The Biggest Fool in Peterborough," and tomorrow night, "How Country People Live in Town." On Sunday night Mr. Kennedy will speak on "The Handwriting on the Wall." Word has been received that some people in Oshawa, where Mr. Kennedy conducted a campaign some months ago, intend visiting Peterborough on Sunday night to hear Mr. Kennedy.

In the course of the song service last evening a duet was sung most effectively by Miss Ida Lynn and Mr. H. J. McKeown of St Paul's Church choir. This evening the service will start sharp on time. The singing will be led by the Salvation Army songsters, a large number of whom, it is expected, will be present.

SPARKS FROM KENNEDY'S ANVIL

No higher office can be held by citizen than an ambassador. The Christian is a citizen of heaven, but an ambassador for God on earth.

The ungodly man respects the preacher that confines his sermons to the Bible.

The Christian who bows the lowest before God in secret, will stand the most fearless before men in public.

Some folks read into the Bible or out of the Bible, whatever suits their own fancy.

No man can be a leader in Christian thought, unless he has more conviction than the people he is addressing.

It's not our opinions people want, it is our convictions.

You have done a bad man a good service when you make him despise himself.

No bird sings when it has a sore foot.

No man is happy when sin is in his soul.

Every sin a man commits is only storing up sorrow for the days to come.

If you have hell in your heart a home sin caused it.

Sin is the one thing you cannot justify for being in the world. Affliction and sorrow have their place, but sin puts everything out of gear. Christ was made perfect through suffering, without sin.

All of us are being constantly haunted by what we have done or not done.

Humble yourself before God or God may have to humble you.

NO PUB. HOLIDAY PEACE DAY, 19TH

PETERBOROUGH IS LOYAL, BUT SHE HAS ALREADY CELEBRATED PEACE.

Ald. Turner suggested in Council last night that his Worship would be quite justified in not proclaiming a public holiday on Saturday, July 19th, an empire national holiday, in celebration of peace.

Peterborough, Ald. Turner said had already celebrated peace on Monday, June 30th, and her loyalty could not be questioned in refraining from a second celebration, in the event of July 19th being observed elsewher in Canada. So many holidays, he contende, especially those coming on Saturdays, are a hard ship on merchants and upset business generally.

But three cities celebrated peace on July 30th—Peterborough, St. Catharines, and Sidney, N. S.

Ald. Edgar thought this question could be left with the people themselves. If citizens genrally want to observe July 19th as Peace Day let them do it.

And so the matter stands.

Merchants Agree.

The Retail Merchants' Association in session last evening agreed to request the Mayor not to proclaim a public holiday on July 19th, peace having already been celebrated in this city.

Carnival Comes For Solid Week Starting Monday, July 21st

The Polack Bros. 20 Big Shows, one of the biggest and best amusement enterprises now traveling and which has been giving splendid satisfaction in Montreal, comes to this city for a week's engagement, beginning Monday evening, July 21, under the auspices of the Peterborough Industrial Board. The shows will come in their own special train of 30 cars.

The Polack Show is announced as being different from many carnivals. The rough-neck show element is conspicuously missing and in their places a clean-looking, gentlemanly lot of barkers and showmen. The Polack Bros. Shows have dozens of the most clever acts and the management will not permit an attche of the shows to be anything other than a lady or gentleman. Manager Larry Boyd keeps a keen lookout over the big shows, making his rounds regularly. The committee expect thousands to fill the shows and grounds every afternoon and night. Shows grounds at Exhibition grounds.

TO ASK PRINCE TO VISIT PETERBORO

AT THE OPENING OF EXHIBITION IN SEPTEMBER IF POSSIBLE.

Ald. Phelan introduced into Council last night the question of inviting H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to visit this city when on his tour of Canada.

The Mayor—"I understand the Exhibition Board are anxious to have his presence at the Exhibition Sept. 15-16, and Mr. Burnham has written a letter of invitation this afternoon."

On motion of Ald. Phelan and McIntyre, Council will invite His Royal Highness to include Peterborough in his tour of the Dominion, timing his visit during the Exhibition if possible.

STRANGER GOES TO JAIL

Belleville, July 10.—A. Kilborn, a stranger in the city, was fined $230 and costs for being intoxicated and having liquor upon his person. Being unable to pay the fine, he was committed to the county jail for three months.

You cannot argue against a fact, you may alter the name of sin, but you cannot change its nature.

You may go to poetry for a nicer sounding word, or to philosophy for a less exacting turn, or to public opinion for a less threatening expression, but the defiling quality is still there.

Most people die of poison because the bottle had the wrong label.

Sin is a foreign element to the soul, as a bullet to the body.

If you break the laws of digestion or gravitation you suffer and every sin against God has its penalty.

Bathing House Is About Completed

THE MAYOR AND ALDERMEN INSPECTED WORK THIS MORNING.

A party of Aldermen, by invitation of Ald. McIntyre this morning visited the public bathing house, just about completed, at the end of Lake street, and found its erection in keeping with their views, and the city's needs.

The Mayor and Ald. McIntyre, chairman of Council's Bathing House Committee, have interested themselves considerably in the need for a public bathing spot to serve especially south city. They authorized minor changes from the plan in the buildings' construction, but such deviations are admittedly an advantage, and react anyway, in favor of the contractor.

MAYOR LEAVES

out that Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works was the proper person to assume that temporary office, the bridge bylaw being the main issue to be decided. Council's heavy weight, on motion, squeezed himself in to the Mayor's velvet chair and opened proceedings. Business had just started, when His Worship returned and wanted to know what was doing.

Explaining that they understood the Mayor had left for good, so far as last night was concerned, Ald. Phelan at once vacated the chair and His Worship ascended the dias.

Lack of Courtesy?

Mayor Duncan here remarked that when calling the Aldermen to a meeting that was already fifteen minutes late he did not like to be told "they would come when they were ready."

Ald. Phelan denied sending such a message, or of hearing any one else do so. "Why, we did not know you were waiting," he declared.

Ald Hamilton apologised for being late and Ald. Crowe, who here walked in did not know five minutes made much difference.

So far as could be learned, or hearing that His Worship was ready to open proceedings one of the aldermen outside remarked "that they were not ready." And this was conveyed to His Worship.

Down to Business

Peace and harmony restored, the by-law to authorize the execution of contract with the Russell-Townsend Co. to build the bridge was tackled. Regrets being passed at the absence of Aldermen Morrison and Taylor, His Worship remarked: "I don't know that we should wait; they left in good faith that proceedings had been postponed.

Ald Turner—"Let some one take a car and go after them.

The Mayor—"Why should be run after them? The bylaw is going through anyway."

However, Assistant Clerk Curtis did attempt to get in touch with these absentees, and reported his non-success to His Worship.

It was rumored that they were at the fire hall, and would not return to the city hall. But Ald. Morrison denied that this morning, asserting that Alderman Taylor and he were out in the country at that time—8.30—and knew nothing of the Mayor having returnedand a council meeting being in progress.

No Tears

In this connection it can be taken for granted that neither the Mayor Aldermen Taylor or Morrison would have shed any tears had the meeting not been held and opportunity opened up for further intervention between the bridge contract and the Russell-Townsend Co.

STEAMER CELTIC IS AT HALIFAX

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, July 11.—The White Star liner Celtic docked this morning after an uneventful passage of seven days from Liverpool. The Celtic is the first ship to arrive here since the return movement began without a full complement of soldiers. She sailed for New York at noon.

FORD RAISES PAY OF HIS EMPLOYES

MINIMUM WAGE OF $7 A DAY TO TAKE EFFECT AUGUST 1.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Detroit, July 11.—The reorganization of the Ford Motor Company is being completed, whereby Edsel B. Ford, the 25-year-old president of the company, becomes, with the exception of one other stockholder, the sole partner with his father, Henry Ford, in the corporation. It is estimated in financial circles that $100,000,000 is involved in this deal. Up to the present Henry Ford has held 58½ per cent. of the Ford Motor stock. Today's announcement comes as a complete surprise in motor and financial circles, as it had been rumored for some weeks that another large automobile corporation was seeking the minority holdings.

$7 a Day the Minimum.

Mount Clemens, Mich., July 11.—It was learned on authority here today that Henry Ford has decided to increase the minimum wage of the Ford Motor Company employes to $7 a day. It is believed the new minimum will be put in effect soon probably by August 1st or thereabouts.

Capt. J. M. Bygott For E. Peterboro

LAKEFIELD VETERAN TO BE CHIEF ENUMERATOR IN EAST RIDING.

With the exception of the unorganized districts and one or two other ridings, the chief enumerators who are to have charge of the preparation of the voters' lists for the referendum have been appointed by the government. The list was made public by Hon. I. B. Lucas yesterday, who stated that the work of preparing the lists is to be commenced on Monday next.

Capt. J. M. Bygott of Lakefield has been appointed chief enumerator for East Peterborough. No appointment for West Peterborough appears in the list just announced, but it is altogether likely that the same course will be followed here as in the east riding and that the position will be filled by a veteran.

MASONS CROSSED THE BRIDGE OF SIGHS TO LAND AT IDYL WYLD

Weather, Arrangements, Provender and Entertainment Conspired to Make Annual Outing a Success—Results Show That Crowd, Efficiently Directed, Could Build Hunter St. Bridge

The annual afternoon assembly of the Masonic Order was held, as usual, yesterday to Idyl-Wyld. The day, the weather, the arrangements, the provender and entertainment were all that could be wished for. Under such gracious auspices nothing less than complete success could be expected. Nothing less was realized.

Key Outside the Door

In fact, for this special occasion the Masonic Order might be said to be self-contained. The Island of Idyl-Wyld belongs to Bro. Thos. Hooper, himself a valued member of the Craft. That fact settles the question of occupancy, for so to speak, the key is always found hanging outside the door. The Craft has a perpetual franchise, which is a desirable acquisition. Then again Bro. Hooper is the hereditary caterer to the Craft. That of itself would be enough fame for most men, but Hooper wears his honors easily and efficiently. If he would only acquire the steamboat, then, as will be quite evident to any discerning person, there would be no use for committees, or past masters, or delegates. All that would be required would be for Hooper to say the word go. All this explains why in many respects the afternoons down the river are what Walter Stocker calls "a whale of a success."

Glory for Walter

Yesterday Walter covered himself with water and glory. Going across the lake a very strong gale was blowing and the boat could not tie up to the usual wharf, and had to slip arond to a lee shore to make a landing. In fact it was the freight that had to achieve the landing, while the boat rested quite securely on the bottom of the lake. Chris Graham an exclusive deputation of venturesome spirits that went ashore hand-over-hand along the first and only snubbing rope. Assisted, of course by public criticism and comment in the aerial flight, with observations as to individual styles of wriggling and contortion while the suspension act was going on. Others had to walk the gank plank. Amidst cheers of encouragement and infinite direction Walter builded a pier of rocks to hold the other end of the plank, got a door from the old and exclusive bar building and presently the congregation was rescued and ashore. Facetious people who made the trip were properly splashed by heaving debris into the lake. The only want not filled was for a clothier's pressing establishment convenient. But let is give and take. Most took, exclusively.

A Wild Scramble

Amidst the tall grass and high wind, the sports went on. A series of foot races for those under thirty and over resulted in remarkable bursts of speed and many falls. Velocity takes along with it momentum and this means weight in motion. So when an obstacle on the ground interfered a fall followed. Watch your step was disregarded, wholly. Most of the races were a wild scramble, each. Still they got there in good shape. Heavy weight races and speed contests for all over eighty had numerous entries with numerous results.

The tug-of-war was a concussion, almost a cataclysm. A sort of three-handed game, for Peterborough, Corinthian and Royal Arthur Lodges had on the ground men of great physical prowess. So one team had to pull twice. The ground about the scene of hostilities will need to be rolled and re-turfed, so prolonged and desperate was the struggle. It was a marvellous thing to see men work so hard. And without any thought of going on strike for better conditions or higher pay. That same crowd, if efficiently directed could build Hunter street bridge in no time at all. It seemed a real pity to see so much perfectly good energy going to waste. Amidst much excitement and clamor Royal Arthur carried off the palm, and the scalps of the defeated will hang in the lodge room for another twelve months.

Hot Coffee—What?

Lunch was the prevailing impression immediately afterwards. An impression that merged into reality. It was the intention to serve the viands out on the grass, and to some extent this idea was carried out. Things were cut and sliced, boiled and heated in the old kitchen, and when ready everybody sailed in.

ANOTHER INJUNCTION AGAINST BUILDING HUNTER ST. BRIDGE

Mr. J. Guise-Bagley Acting For Several Ratepayers—And Still a Third Injunction to Come is the Rumor.

Mr. J. Guise-Bagley, at 2.15 this afternoon, was busy in the City Hall, gathering data, on which to issue an injunction to restrain the Council from building the new high level bridg, under contract with the Russell-Townsend Co., of Toronto.

The City Clerk furnished Mr. Guise-Bagley with the names of those aldermen who voted to award the contract and for the subsequent by-law adopted Wednesday evening; the amount of money for this purpose, and the sum totalled in the Governments' and Railway Boards' grants.

Mr. Guise-Bagley says the restrainer in this instance is a well known ratepayer, and others. Asked who the others were, he was not prepared to say, but was serious in his declaration that application for restrain will be made by him in the approved way.

The contention is, as before, that the bridge cannot be built for the money voted by the people, under present plans, and that all who voted for placing it under contract on a cost plus basis will be held personally liable should the work exceed in cost the amount voted.

Ald. Edgar happened to be seated in Council's Committee room when Mr. Guise-Bagley entered in search of Mr. Armstrong. On learning the solicitor's errand the worthy alderman said: "You can issue all the injunctions you like, they won't stop up building the bridge" and he laughed merrily, in which he was joined by the Mayor, who had just entered. "We are past that scare now," added this one of the "personally liables."

Still Another

Aldermen Taylor and Morrison, to the press, did not take this threat seriously. Although in opposition to the Russell-Townsend Contract for the bridge, they are going to throw their weight with the majority in pushing work on it now that the contract is let, threatened injunction notwithstanding.

Incidentally, these gentlemen laughingly remarked that they understood Mr. R. R. Hall is also again talking "injunction."

Before Mr. Navin, of the Russell-Townsend Co., the successful tenderers, left town on Thursday, he declared that should any further intervention arise, his company were through with the Hunter street bridge.

BOTH SIDES ARE READY TO FIGHT

LONG STRUGGLE LIKELY OVER PEACE TREATY IN AMERICAN SENATE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, July 11.—With the Senate in possession of the peace treaty and its League of Nations covenant, but with the sessions adjourned until Monday, advocates and opponents of the League today began preparations for the ratification contest which is expected to engage the attention of the Senate for some weeks.

Both sides were expected to hold informal conferences todya preparatory to the initial meeting Monday of the foreign relations committee, to which the treaty was sent yesterday after it had been laid before the Senate by President Wilson. The committee is expected at its meeting on Monday to agree on a basis for its study of the document and accordingly its session is awaited with unusual interest.

BIG CONTRACT LET FOR SHIP PLATES

DEAL CLOSED BY GOVERNMENT WITH FIRM IN NOVA SCOTIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, July 11.—A contract for 250,000 tons of ship plates, involving five years' work and the completion of the erection of a monster rolling plant at Sydney, N. S., costing in the vicinity of $5,000,000 was let today to the Dominion Steel Co. by the Federal Government, according to an announcement by Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, minister of marine. The contract was accepted by the company at 50 cents per 100 pounds lower than the price now paid.

Ends Labor Trouble.

The announcement of the letting of the ship plate contract indicates that Canada is to continue its ship building program. The order will likely cause the settlement of the troubles of several thousand steel workers at Sydney and ship workers in plants in Montreal who were either thrown out of work or on strike. The new wage demands could not be met by shipbuilding plants until the contract was let.

The new price will be $3 6½ per hundred pounds.

MAYOR SIGNS BRIDGE BY-LAW

At 2:15 this afternoon his Worship Mayor Duncan authorized the announcement that he had attached his official signature today to the bylaw authorizing the execution of a contract with the Russell-Townsend Company for building the Hunter street bridge.

UNDER PROTEST

His Worship, however, has done so under protest that he waives all responsibility for this tender having been accepted.

U. S. TO RESUME TRADE WITH HUNS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, July 11.—Secretary Polk announced today that trade between the United States and Germany may be resumed immediately. It was made clear that this would not abrogate the trading with the Enemy Act, or mean that state of war was at end. Many things that Germany wants to sell are urgently needed in the United States, particularly dyestuffs.

NOTE

Just as this story was going to the machines the restrainer for whom Mr. Guise-Bagley is acting phoned the Review and asked that his name be omitted until the injunction is issued.

FIVE PACKERS TO CONTROL PRICES IN THE UNITED STATES

Trade Commission Submits Report to President Wilson Giving Evidence of Monopoly Among the Big American Dealers—State Control is Advocated as Only Remedy.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, July 11.—An approaching packer domination of all important foods in the United States and the international control of meat products with foreign companies seems certain unless fundamental action is taken to prevent it, the federal trade commission declared today in part one of its report to President Wilson on "The extent and growth of the power of five packers in the meat and other industries."

"A fair consideration of the course informal conferences today preparaposition they have already reached," said the report, "must lead to the conclusion that they threaten the freedom of the market of the country's food industries and of the by-products of the industries linked therewith. The meat packers control of other foods will not require long in developing.

Declaring that the history of the packers' growth is interwoven with illegal combination rebates and with undisclosed control of corporations, the report urged the importance of public or corporate ownership for all industries, alleging that "the 'Big Five' packers, Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Wilson & Co. Morris & Co., and the Cudahy Co., jointly or separately, will be the controlling interest in 574 companies, the minority interest in 95 others, and the undeterminate interest in 93, a total of 762 companies, and that they produce or deal in some 775 commodities, largely food products," the report gives a graphic picture of the growing packer invasion into related and unrelated industries.

SAYS GERMAN REVOLUTION IS PLOT OF THE AUTOCRATS

Dr. Frank Bohn Tells the Chautauqua Audience That the Affair Was Staged by Militarists in Hope of Obtaining Favorable Terms From the Allies.

What was the largest audience yet gathered in the big Chautauqua tent last night to hear the lecture on "Revolutionary Europe," by Dr. Frank Bohn. Dr. Bohn was one of the Chautauqua lecturers last year and made just as good an impression last night as he did on the occasion of his former visit to Peterborough. Since his last visit to this city he has been engaged on propaganda work for the Allies in Europe and spoke from knowledge he has gained at first hand of conditions obtaining in that continent.

Dr. Bohn was greeted with a burst of applause on his appearance on the platform and in acknowledging this said he remembered the very kind treatment accorded him here last year and that it was a pleasure for him to be able to return again.

He spoke of the revolution in Germany and declared it to be the biggest piece of camouflage the world has ever seen. The political leaders of Germany had gathered together early in November of last year had arranged the so-called revolution to the order of General Ludendorff. Arrangements were made for carrying it into effect one night and the next day it was advertised in all the newspapers and on all the bill-boards according to schedule. The Government wanted a revolution which they could control and they got it. At no time during the uprising were conditions so bad that they were beyond the control of the political leaders of Germany, and the revolution was only brought about in the hope that through it the Allies might grant Germany peace terms to her liking. Dr. Bohn said that no time should be wasted in pity for the German people; that the peace terms were on the whole as fair as they could be made; that Germany was well able to pay the indemnity asked in the time allotted. The German people do not know the truth about the war yet but some day they will learn and then will come a revolution which will be for real democracy and not controlled by the autocratic party.

Ex-Kaiser Shall be Tried.

The lecturer was in favor of trying the ex-kaiser and his war lords as common criminals and felt assured that the judiciary committee appointed to conduct the trial would mete out fitting punishment to these arch-criminals.

Good Word for Russia.

Dr. Bohn next told of conditions in Russia and declared that Russia deserves well of us for her efforts for the common cause during the first two years of the war. He said that this Bolshevik revolution was caused by the fact that the great masses of Russians were absolutely ignorant and could not think for themselves. He compared Russia of today to England of five hundred years ago. Ninety per cent. of the Russian people could neither read nor write. He prophesied that the Bolsheviki would be defeated and their leaders in exile within two months.

Several stories were told of the manner in which the Bolshevists administer justice and the lecturer stated that no story told of these people is too horrible. They are fanatics but the danger from their movement is nearly past. He declared that Bolshevism would never make any progress in the English-speaking countries, because the labor element was given a fair chance in the government of the countries.

Labor in England.

In explaining the latest labor developments the lecturer stated that England leads the world in this direction. He explained the report of the Whitley Commission on Industrial Relations in England and said that this report was about to be adopted in Canada in a slightly modified form. He advised everybody to read the Whitley Report, Lieut.-Gen. Jan Smuts' pamphlet on the covenant of the League of Nations, the report to the archbishops of the Church of England on the subject of Social Progress and the Labor Movement. These

Business As Usual July On 19th

The merchants of the city will keep their places of business open on Saturday, July 19, even though the Government has declared it a statutory holiday for the celebration of the signing of the peace treaty, a celebration which is to be universal throughout the Empire. Each municipality, it is now held, has a right to make its own choice in such a matter. It is nothing unusual for a city to shift the statutory holiday from one day to another. Very often when such a holiday falls on Saturday the observance of it is postponed until Monday, in the interest of business. If this can be done in such cases, there appears no reason why the same course cannot be taken in the present instance.

Peterborough has already celebrated the signing of the treaty. There will be another patriotic recognition of the same auspicious event in the exercises to be held in this city on Civic Holiday, which Mayor Duncan will declare. That, the business men and the aldermen agree, should suffice.

DIRIGIBLE HALF WAY TO ENGLAND

WORD RECEIVED BY WIRELESS AT FOUR O'CLOCK THIS MORNING.

London, July 11.—The British dirigible R-34 was in direct touch by wireless with Clifden station at 4 o'clock this morning, Greenwich time. It gave its position as about half way across the Atlantic.

Made 1,500 Miles by Noon.

The dirigible R 34, speeding eastward across the Atlantic, at 12:10 o'clock (Greenwich time) today had reached 46 degrees north latitude 39 degrees 50 minutes west longitude, approximately 1500 miles from her starting point.

When Road Oiling Becomes a Nuisance

WHELLMAN FALLS FROM HIS MACHINE INTO A SMALL LAKE OF IT.

Oiling the streets is now being pushed with commendable vigor and the black stuff laid on pretty generously.

Road oiling is popular with the general public as the only known device for laying the dust satisfactorily, and as yet but one objection to it has been recorded this season. And that was last evening when a wheelman on one street got a little too much of a good thing.

This cyclist, riding in that section of the road not oiled, was crowded off to the oiled section by a street car and a couple of motors. His wheel skidded and sent its rider sprawling into a veritable miniature lake of the liquid that sticketh closer than a brother. Picking himself up, the wheelman took an inventory of himself—his hands, boots and clothes—for a few tense moments; and then Well one is constrained to draw the veil over the subsequent events. Suffice it to say that the atmosphere was punctured with language not usually heard in Sunday School rooms. Mothers held their breath and called their little ones in from the street for the time being.

STORM LEAVES DEATH IN WAKE

FIVE DEAD AND MANY INJURED IN TORNADO IN PENNSYLVANIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Pittsburg, July 11.—Five persons were dead today, a dozen others missing, and more than a score were injured as the result of a severe electric storm accompanied by high winds and a cloudburst which swept this vicinity of the State late yesterday.

The most serious damage done was at Bradford, where the tornado killed two persons, injured three others and demolished seventy-five houses. Lightning killed two campers near Clinton and a farmer at Greensburg. The property damage will run into many thousands of dollars.

NIGHT LIFE IN CHATHAM

Chatham, July 11.—A special committee of the local Social Service Council will begin at once to investigate allegations of night life of the youth of the city which is reported to be serious.

FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1919

MR. BURNHAM AND UNIONISM.

J. H. BURNHAM, M.P., in The Review yesterday repudiates the new Union party and announces that even if such an honor is offered him he will refuse to accept a nomination on that ticket. Anyone who has watched Mr. Burnham's course and who has read his speeches during the last session of Parliament will not be surprised at his decision. No other course was to be expected. As a matter of political principle his action is justified.

The Union Government has had its day. It was organized for a specific purpose, and that purpose has, fortunately, been achieved. An appeal was made to the patriotism of the electors in 1917, and the response was emphatic. They were asked to forget all political issues and to lend their aid in the great task in hand, the winning of the war. The result was one of the greatest political revolutions ever witnessed in any country on earth.

When the Union Government was formed it was understood that it was to be for the duration of the war. The electors were not asked to abandon their old-time political affiliation for all time. If they had, the result would most certainly have been different. The political faith of a life time is not so easily surrendered.

Is it fair now to the voters of Canada to go back on the pledge given them before the election of 1917? Is it fair to the Conservative party, either, to have that organization sponsor the cause and the fortunes of men who have been cast out by their former political associates and against whose return the party doors have been closed? Will the retention of these men in the ranks bring any strength to the party with which they are now willing to identify themselves permanently, not as a matter of principle, but with political expediency as the sole inspiration for their action?

The Liberals in Ontario have jettisoned those former members of the party who identified themselves with the Union movement two years ago. What would be the reception of these Unionists if they returned to the constituencies that elected them in 1917, seeking a renomination? Take any Unionist member of the Cabinet today, and how is he regarded by the rank and file of his own party at home? This is an unfortunate sentiment, perhaps, but it is a sentiment for which the old time Conservative party is in no sense responsible. That party must accept conditions as it finds them and regulate its affairs accordingly. Could Mr. N. W. Rowell, elected triumphantly in 1917, hope to repeat his triumph if he made another appeal to the voters of Durham this year or at any time in the future?

It may be the prerogative of any party at Ottawa to meet in caucus at the Capital and draw up a platform, but it is the people who in all such matters have the last word. If any party believes that the eyes of the people are still blinded by the old partisan scales, then that party is laboring under the delusion of its career. Is there in Canada today a politician so short-sighted himself as to fail to read the signs of the times and to see the evidence of a general awakening on all sides?

The masses of the Canadian people are wearied unto the point of death with the old-time tactics. They are tired of this flag-waving, these professions of loyalty, the racial and religious strife that has formed the chief stock in trade of a certain class of politicians in the past. They are looking for bigger men and higher national ideals. They have come to themselves and no longer can be either driven in meekness or led in humility.

The war has been won. It would have been won even if the Union Government had never been formed, no matter to what extent the temporary severance of party ties may have strengthened the hands of the Administration and concentrated the energies of the people.

And now that the war has been won, the people are not likely to tolerate any political party who seeks to turn a calamity that overshadowed the world for four long years to political account. Waving the bloody shirt in a political campaign in the future will be as unpopular with the people as waving the red flag of anarchy itself. The soldiers who made the winning of the war possible will be the very first to object to having themselves made so many pawns in a political game designed to maintain any party in power. The sacrifices those veterans made were made for the people as a whole, not for any particular political clique.

In a recent interview in The Review Mr. Burnham expressed a great deal of truth in a single sentence when he said:

> "People who are ready to give up their principles are not desirable, and if they retain those principles sometimes they are even less desirable."

Canadians are irrevocably committed to the policy of protection for home industries. They are in this regard in line with every civilized country on earth. In the neighboring republic the last vestige of free trade is to be swept away by the Republican party that is once more in control in Congress, and the tariff on all products is to be restored. Is the new party to compromise on the fiscal policy of the nation? As Mr. Burnham says in his statement in The Review yesterday, the members of the new party are opposed to each other on the trade question. What stability in the foundation of an organization can there be without unanimity on such an issue?

BIG AND LITTLE.

IT WAS NOT EVER THUS, but times change. The Globe praises the administration of Sir Thomas White as the financial guide of Canada during the most crucial period through which such an official ever passed in this country, and expresses genuine regret that the country is about to lose his invaluable services.

Not so with our George Street neighbor. That exponent of rail fence politics insinuates that Sir Thomas is deserting his country in a crisis and that he will leave an enormous burden upon his successor.

The rain falls and the sun shines without discrimination upon all sections of a potato field, and yet large and small tubers are found growing together in the same hill. It is the same in the political garden. Large minds and those of smaller calibre, with similar opportunities for development, are side by side.

MOVING CANADA'S WHEAT CROP.

THERE IS AT LAST a prospect that the Hunter street bridge is to be built in spite of the exasperating delay of the last three months, and that work will be begun on the structure next Monday morning. When the bridge is completed, it will be used, not maintained merely as a monument of civic enterprise or a national or municipal ornament.

Now that the Trent Valley Canal has been all but finished, to what purpose is it to be put? Is it to be utilized as a means of getting the products of the country to the tide-water ports ready for shipment overseas or is it to be maintained simply as a pleasure resort for the yachts of the wealthy? Perhaps the canal may never be made an important avenue for the movement of Canadian grain, but at such a time as the present every possible utility should be brought into service for getting that grain to the seaboard. It was believed that when the canal was opened from this city to Lake Ontario, coal from Oswego would be brought to Peterborough by water, but so far nothing has been done in this direction.

The export question is one of the grave problems that confronts Canada today. There is an abnormal crop of wheat in the United States, and every available channel for exporting the surplus to Europe will be monopolized by that country this year. No Canadian grain can be sent through American ports to the European markets, and the result is likely to be a disastrous stagnation in this country. There is not only a dearth of shipping facilities from Canada, but the railways seem to lack the equipment required to get the season's crop to the seaboard.

As Mr. W. S. Campbell stated the other day after a visit to Ottawa, where the above facts were discussed, Canada has in the past been leaning too heavily upon its American neighbor. Canada must take steps to manage its own export business. The Government has announced a shipbuilding policy and work has already been started in the different yards. It is given out that already six ocean-going vessels have been finished for the export trade, but not enough bottoms can be constructed this year to relieve the pressure which the American embargo has created.

If Canada is to get her produce to market this or any following year, the means to move it on time must be provided at home, and every available channel for export must be utilized.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

LACKING the essentials of cohesion, there is no strength in unity, political or otherwise.

• • • • •

THERE IS NO country so unsafe for the agitator, political or industrial, as the one that is safe for democracy.

• • • • •

FRANCE will increase its protective duties. Incidentally it may be stated that there is no union government in that country.

• • • • •

IF AT HIS TRIAL the ex-kaiser receives his due, the world will not refuse him or his friends the scant comfort of the claim of martyrdom.

• • • • •

MEMBERS of the new party, as Mr. Burnham says, oppose each other on the trade policy of Canada, and the trade policy is all important.

WAR ON INDECENT FILMS.

(New York Tribune.)

Vigorous war on salacious or other improper motion picture plays has been declared by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, whose membership includes practically all the recognized and reputable producers of photo plays. The association has decided to serve notice immediately upon the proprietor of every motion picture theatre in the country, about 17,000 in number, that none of the distributing agencies of the producing companies will serve any theatre or exhibitor with photo play films if at any time the exhibitor presents for public exhibition any film that has been disapproved by the National Association.

HAS DONE NOTHING.

(Brantford Expositor.)

In five years of the most reckless profiteering, the government of a growing and democratic country like Canada has scarcely done a thing to restrain this orgy, or to allay the discontent that is everywhere breaking out.

NOT A "SCRAP OF PAPER."

(New York Evening Sun.)

Should the Germans attempt to tear up the peace treaty, which they openly call "a new scrap of paper," they will perhaps find that it has been written on steel.

QUITE LIKELY.

(Kingston Whig.)

The peace terms, it is said are to be signed this week. The day may yet come when the Allies will be sorry that they halted hostilities at the time they did when they had the Germans in the hollow of their hands.

Nathaniel Hawthorne's handwriting was so illegible that some of his manuscripts remained unpublished because nobody could read them. This was likewise true of Carlyle. The story is told of a type compositor who was employed by a London printing office because of a strong recommendation which he brought from Scotland. "My God!" said the new typesetter. "Have you got that man here, too? I fled from Scotland to avoid him."

THE EAST AND WEST BROUGHT CLOSER TOGETHER.

Western Canada and the Pacific Coast have now been brought within much quicker reach of the East by "The Trans-Canada Limited," the new popular all-sleeping-car train operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway from Toronto and Montreal to Vancouver. It makes the fastest time betwen terminals of any transcontinental train in America. Leaving Toronto at 7:15 p.m. daily, Fort William is reached in 26 hours, Winnipeg in 39, Regina in 50, Calgary in 64, and Vancouver in 90. By this means a business day is saved—a great convenience to the large number of business men who travel between Eastern and Western Canada. Leaving Toronto on the evening of Monday, for instance, it is possible to spend a full business day in Winnipeg and be back in Toronto by Friday afternoon. Tourists to the famous resorts of the Canadian Pacific at Banff, Lake Louise, Glacier, Vancouver and Victoria will also find this train particularly convenient. It consists of standard sleeping cars, dining cars and compartment observation car, and sleeping car passengers only are carried.

U. S. WAR DEBT $32,000,000,000

Washington, July 11.—America's war debt totals $32,000,000,000, including loans to the Allies of $10,000,000,000, Senator Smoot of Utah told the Senate. Nearly one-half of the $22,000,000,000 actual debt will be paid by the people in taxes.

Senator Smoot said that America stood highest among the nations in the matter of increasing the tax rate, the rate during the war having been increased 2,000 per cent. England raised her tax rate 1,000 per cent., France 10 per cent., and Italy about the same.

If the United States had entered the war at the same time as England the senator added, the taxes would have been spread over a longer period, and the rate would not have been increased to such a high figure.

"But America never could have imposed such heavy taxes if she had come into the war when England did," continued Senator Smoot. "It would have been impossible to collect revenue under them, and the condition of the country would not have made such taxes possible. But when America did enter the war she had enjoyed two years of prosperity selling munitions to the Allies and after that she was able to impose these large taxes."

Senator Geary of Delaware showed that the amount to be raised by taxation is 41 per cent of the total cost of the war to America. He said this was an unprecedented situation and placed the United States at a better advantage than other countries which started out to raise a very small proportion of the war cost by taxes and the greater proportion by loans.

"I do not think in the history of the world finance there has ever been another country that has raised by taxation so large a percentage in payment of war expenditures," the senator said. "It is a tremendously high percentage and is undoubtedly one of the best fiscal operations for financing war expenses that any nation has ever carried through."

Senator Smoot said that in his opinion Congress had adopted the proper course in demanding that a large percentage of the war cost should be raised by direct taxation.

LESSONS FROM RECENT STRIKES

(Journal of Commerce)

The strikes in Winnipeg and other Western Cities are practically over. Order has been restored and business and social life is getting back to normal conditions. Such disturbances as have occurred usually leave some useful lessons and the present case is not an exception to the rule. For all parties concerned there are lessons which, if properly applied, will make for better conditions in the future.

There are lessons for some employers of labor. Many employers have already observed the spirit of the age and governed themselves accordingly. For too long a time many employers in all parts of the country held and acted on the principle that it was their right to get from their workmen all the service possible, at as low a wage as possible. Capital felt that it must look after itself, and that when it had paid its workmen the stipulated wage—kept down to the lowest possible figures—it had done its duty. Movements for organization among the workers—the formation of trade unions—were regarded as something to be discouraged. The mistakes of the workmen—and what class is there in which no mistakes are made?—were seized upon as reasons for hostility to all forms of organized labor. Thus, in days that are not far away, there was created in many quarters an atmosphere of suspicion and distrust between labor and capital in which small difficulties easily grew into great ones. The spirit of the twentieth century is demanding a better atmosphere. Labor is asserting its power in a manner which must command the careful attention of all thoughtful men. Capital cannot successfully take the high and mighty stand which has sometimes in the past been exhibited. Capital must recognize its responsibility, not only to its dividend-seeking shareholders, but to its workmen. It must be prepared to co-operate with labor in the bringing about of better social conditions, and to that end, it may be obliged to content itself with a more modest share of profit than in former times. Labor has shown its power to insist on these improved conditions. Capital will do well to frankly recognize the spirit of the new age and adapt itself to its requirements. It should be as ready to respond to all reasonable requests from labor as it should be to resist every unfair demand and every effort to set aside or over-ride lawful authority.

John R. Rockefeller, on his 80th birthday, said he wanted to live to be a hundred. He attributes his good health to golf and a daily tablespoon of olive oil.

TO-DAY'S STORY

Major Mackinnon has told how at the annual Scottish Gatherings in Malta the pipes aroused the interest and astonishment of the Maltese. Similarly Highland pibrochs have waked the echoes among the mountains where the British contingent fought hard for Italy's freedom from the Austrian invader. But a hundred years ago and more there were Highland soldiers and their pipers in Italy, and an amusing account is related of a Highland piper belonging to the British troops who fought at Maida, encountering in the streets of an Italian town an Italian piper kept busy charming the ears of his countrymen with the strains of his primitive instrument. The Highlander stopped short in his career and gazed with astonishment at the curious pipes from which proceeded the feeble sounds. Then in a little time astonishment gave place to contempt on the face of the Gael. Muttering a few choice words of Gaelic, he suddenly threw the drones of the great Highland bagpipe over his shoulder, blew up the bag, and set free a hurricane of sound compared with which the Italian thrills were indeed tame. The piper marched right upon the the agonized Italian who retreated behind the Highland blast and fairly ran and left Donald master of the street.

Music in the Home

ADJUSTING THE TAIL PIECE OF THE VIOLIN

To fasten the tail piece to the button at the back of the violin get a little piece of gut string at the music store. The gut is thicker than a D string and nearly the size of a 'cello A. Put the ends of the gut through the holes made for the purpose in the tail piece, leaving a loop of the proper size at the end of the tail piece. Then hold the flame of a lighted match against the ends of the tail gut, which will swell them into two little knots. Tie the two ends together with a piece of stout black linen thread and the job is complete.

You can buy vulcanized rubber tail piece which is curved at the end, so as to fasten over the end of the violin on to the button. This requires no tail gut, as it is all in one piece and never breaks. It is a great convenience for the violinist as it is very annoying to have the tail gut break, the bridge fly off and possibly the sound post come down. This may happen while playing, and put the violin player completely out of commission until he can get another violin. It is of little use to replace the tail gut and try to resume playing at once, for, owing to the constant stretching of the tail gut, the violin will not stand in tune for some time to come.

DANCE STIMULATES MUSIC

The dance acts as a stimulus to the technical study of music. Having felt and known what beauty and joy there are in music, we will desire to express our musical feelings on musical instruments. Interest in anything so specialized as the technical study of music often lags when there is no such impetus, no such immediate means of expression as the dance affords.

Since music may be held to have followed the paths of human progress and recorded its spirit and life more faithfully than any other single art, we are able to receive the message of the ages through music better than we could by any other means.

Music conveys to us the inner spirit of all the appearances of Nature. In music are conveyed to us in sublimated form the joys we feel on beholding grass, flowers, trees, mountains, sky, clouds, air. It is a familiar fact that the dance arose as a mystic religious tribute to the phenomena of Nature notably the change of the seasons.

Said a business man the other day, "A few [illegible] teachers make big salaries it is true, and a few big artists attract large paying audiences, but the rank and file of musicians are not today making as much as their talent and work warrants."

USE OF CHILDREN IN THE OPERAS

The number of roles in which children are permitted to take part in the opera is, of course, very limited, and the number of parts representing children is comparatively few. Wagner was wise enough not to make anything more than a pantomime part for Elsa's little brother and other composers have known that it is very difficult to carry out the illusion of a child when the part is sung by some mature singer. The fairy like character of Humperdincks' "Hansel and Gretel" as well as that of Goldmark's "Cricket on the Hearth" makes the juvenile parts in those pieces plausible and fascinating.

Many people will be surprised to learn however that in old time performances of operas, as in the days of Shakespearan plays the leading woman's parts were frequently in fact in some cases exclusively taken by boy singers. The idea of having a woman upon the stage was abhorrent to the audience in an age far more licentious than our own. The great difficulty with the boys, however, was the change of voice just at the time when they were becoming most proficient. Handel was said to have been particularly fond of having boys in his operas although we know that he had many women singers. Even as late as 1731 his Esther was given with scenic action in England, the [illegible] parts being taken by boys selected from the Children of the Kings Chapel.

The children's chorus in Mascagni's "Lodoletta" was one of the spontaneous hits of the piece and the boys' chorus from "Carmen" never fails to please the audience. It seems as though opera which inclines frequently towards the spectacular was missing a big opportunity when the chorus was omitted. No city group is ever composed exclusively of adults except in the heart of the great metropolis and to omit the children would be to leave out a very significant bit of "local color."

CHOIRMASTERS AND MINISTERS SHOULD CO-OPERATE

Music is not the end of public worship. It is an aid. The church does not exist for the choir; the choir exists for the church. And unless the choir assists the congregation in not fulfil its chief purpose. But to promote devotional, congregational worship should be the aim of every choir. No service can be said to have been a failure in which there has been hearty singing by the congregation.

To achieve this there must be the most complete co-operation between the clergyman, the choirmaster and the choir. The tyranny of the choir has killed many a church, and the tyranny and unreasonableness of the minister has ruined many a fine choir. To get the best results in this as in every sphere of activity there must be co-operation. Think of the possibilities of a church where clergyman and choirmaster are both looking at the church's work from the same angle. The minister preaches the Gospel; the choir sings it. Consequently if the sermon is of a devotional character the music will be devotional. The hymns will breathe the spirit of prayer. The anthem will harmonize with the general theme. Even the [illegible] music will express the main purpose of the service. But the trouble is that too often the clergyman does his work without the co-operation of those associated with him. He chooses his subject and preaches his sermon while the choirmaster selects his music with perhaps an entirely different thought in mind. And the result is a jangle.

WHAT DE BERIOT SAYS

The great Violinist De Beriot was an advocate of vigorous tuning. To his pupils he said, "Tune with long bows, with energy, but distinctly, so as to get the full vibration from the strings. A violin so tuned will remain in tune much longer than one tuned in a timid feeble manner."

JUST GOSSIP

If singing was good for the soldiers in war times it is good for civilians in peace times.

If the musical sense lies dormant during childhood it will be awakened only with a great deal of trouble.

Church music as we have it to-day commenced about 600 A.D., when the choir schools attached to the English cathedrals were established.

A home is known by the piano it keeps. But how can any place be "Home, Sweet Home" if the piano is out of tune.

There are certain people who do not enthuse over the educational value of music on the school curriculum because they think any subject that entertains, any subject that the student enjoys is not of much value. It would require a Lloyd Georgism to properly score such a belief as that.

The great Adelina Patti who made a name for herself that will endure was born in Madrid, Spain. She was the daughter of a Sicilian tenor and of a Roman prima donna. After earning, it is said, $5,000,000 in forty years Patti retired to her castle in Wales. Her husband Baron Cederstrom is her third.

AERIAL MAIL A SUCCESS

U. S. Aerial Posties Flew 19,825 Miles Without Single Failure.

Washington, July 11.—Aerial mail routes were operated during the month of June with almost perfect efficiency. On the Chicago-Cleveland division machines flew 19,825 miles and carried 19,603 pounds of mail without a single failure to meet schedules.

The average speed by mail planes on that route was 97.8 miles per hour.

The new station to the service rout from New York to Cleveland has been operating with the same success since July 1, the department said, while the original route from New York to Washington made a 99 per cent. record during June, carrying 15,643 pounds of mail for a total mileage of 11,118.

Brad Merrell, Guardian

By HERBERT H. GOODWIN

(Copyright.)

There was vituperation loud and deep on Turkey Creek. The owner of the ranch, himself temporarily brought low by a refractory cayuse, was expecting a visitor from the East—his niece—and Brad Merrell had been told off to act as her guide, if not philosopher and friend.

Brad was the steadiest man on the ranch. This fact was enough for his employer. He was also the worst woman hater. This fact made it too much for Brad.

"Why couldn't it hev been Paper-Collar Joe?" he demanded collectively and fiercely of the men, as they loitered outside the bunkhouse. "He'd hev been like a high-stepper with a new harness on. He'd sooner talk soft to a woman than rope the liveliest steer that ever bellered. But me! I won't hev nothin' to do with her. I'll take my time in the mornin'. I'll light out overnight. I'll burn down the whole ranch!"

"Now, Brad," wheedled Tom Mason, affectionately known as Old Soft Soap, by reason of his peacemaking proclivities, "now, Brad, jest stop an' think. Ye've yer own nice little place up on Turkey creek, where ye kin look after it handy, an' all plans made fer the summer. What would ye do with the rest of the season ef ye take yer time now? Yer place is rented, it's too late to get taken on anywhere else, an' ye'd only lope eround an' spend yer wad. This tenderfoot gal 'll only stay a few weeks, an' it'll be a rest for ye—"

"Rest!" bellowed Brad. "Rest! It'll wreck every nerve in my carcass. She'll be one of two kinds; she'll either squeal every time she sees a lizard, an' be afraid of her own shadow, or she'll carry a blamed tin box fer bugs an' things. She'll either gush eround about me bein' 'so picturesque,' or she'll be shocked at my language an' my pipe an' try to reform me. Rest! A woman'll let a man rest only when she's been buried an' has a granite monument over her!"

Old Soft Soap prevailed, however, in the end. Next morning Brad started for the railroad, as a lamb begins its journey to the shambles, yet with a most unlamblike mien and accouterment, for his pistol-belt and dirk, his leathern "chaps" and rakish sombrero, proclaimed him a "bad man," indeed.

The Overland Limited was late, and the engine seemed to puff and whistle its disgust at being stopped at the little station that raised itself above the surrounding sea of grass. With much complaining and creaking it halted for a moment, and then its rattling links climbed slowly up the rise.

Brad looked for a mass of furbelows and a Saratoga trunk, but the platform was vacant except for an ample female, standing beside a bulging carpet bag, a heap of boxes and bundles, and a shrouded bird cage.

"She ain't come," muttered Brad, his skies brightening.

The ample figure bore down upon him like a ship under sail. It was surmounted by a pleasant face of florid complexion beneath a broad hat and a veil of grass green.

"Can you tell me if Turkey Creek ranch is anywhere near here?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am," answered Brad, awkwardly pulling at his bathrim; "it's only about twenty-five miles over east. Was ye wantin' to go there?"

"That's what I came for," she replied promptly. "I'm Orphelia Gordon, an' I've come to visit my uncle, John [illegible]."

"Ye're Orph Miss Gordon!" exclaimed Brad. "Why, I thought—" he checked himself suddenly.

"Yes, I s'pose you did think I was a young girl," she retorted. "No harm done. I was once, an' if I ain't so good-looking as I was then, I know a heap more. If you've come for me, don't let's lose any time, but help me get my baggage loaded, an' we'll be startin'."

The cage cover fell apart, and a brilliant red and green head appeared. It cocked itself impertinently on one side, one beady eye looked Brad over from head to foot, and a high pitched, energetic voice ejaculated:

"You be blamed!"

For the first time the bewildered look on the man's face relaxed, and a grin spread over his bronzed features. The woman's floridity deepened, and finally she, too, laughed.

"I'm ashamed of Polly's language. Old Doctor Henderson told me once that it was as bad for me, a professor, to keep a profane parrot as if I was profane myself; but I might've had a husband that swore, and the minister wouldn't have wanted me to get a divorce for that. Besides, this bird is more knowin' and less troublesome than any man I ever saw."

"I don't mind him swearin' at me," said Brad, recollecting his ferocious armament. "I reckon I ain't much of a picture."

She turned, and for the first time scrutinized her companion.

"Land!" she said reassuringly. "You're all right for a cowboy, away out on the frontier this way. You look like a man, any way, and not like some of them perfumed little counter-jumpers back in Harmon Center."

Brad straightened his slouching shoulders and walked across after the last piece of luggage with a swagger that set his spurs jinglin'. Just as he stooped to pick it up Miss Gordon checked him sharply.

"Leave that basket alone! That's Jeremy Taylor, and he's the touchiest Maltese that ever spit. It hurts his feelin's enough to be shut up that way, and if a stranger handled him he'd have a fit. I'll hold him in my lap as we drive. No, you needn't help me. I've been gettin' in and out over wheels alone all my life, and this buckboard is low. I'm glad that you don't use overhead check-reins on your horses. I belong to the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and I'm sorry to see you wear spurs."

They were trotting swiftly over the prairie, and Brad had recovered his faculties sufficiently to give brief answers to Miss Gordon's running fire of questions and observations. Suddenly the man involuntarily checked the mustangs that he drove, and gave vent to a smothered exclamation. He looked in perplexed alarm at Miss Gordon.

"What's the matter? Sick?" she queried.

He pointed to a horseman some distance in front of them.

"Bill Jukes," he answered briefly. "He's promised to shoot me at sight, and he's likely drunk enough not to know whether you're a man or woman. You drive an' I'll get out an' meet him on foot. I'll come back after ye soon, or else—Sykes, a mile north of the station, will bring ye over to Turkey Creek."

As he proffered the reins, Brad already had his revolver out of his belt. She gave an indignant sniff.

"It's likely I'll drive off and leave you to be shot! Give me them reins, and you look to your guns. We'll drive by Mr. Jukes at a pretty good pace, and if you should happen to hurt him—may the Lord have mercy on him!"

Shaking off Brad's restraining touch, and deaf to his expostulations, she put the whip to the ponies, and the buckboard lurched forward on the deeply-cut trail. Jukes was bearing down upon them, his face inflamed with drunken rage. Two or three shots whistled past them. Miss Gordon held the reins tightly and ducked her head.

NP SOAP 40 years without a Peer and still leading

Brad fired repeatedly as they passed, and just beyond them Jukes reeled heavily from the saddle. With an effort the woman brought the team to a standstill.

"I'm glad I fastened Polly's cage on good and tight!" was the first exclamation. Then, noticing a broken check-rein: "I'll get a piece of twine out of my pocket to tie up that strap. Why, your sleeve's all bloody. I do believe that nasty wretch bit you!"

"Jest my arm, I guess, Miss Gordon," replied the man, a little uncertainly; "but I hope that is, I'm afeerd I've done for Jukes!"

They looked back. The outlaw lay motionless by the trail, his bridle rein still over his nerveless arm.

II.

As the rays of the setting sun slanted level across the prairie, a strange procession stopped at Turkey Creek ranch. Miss Gordon still drove, superintended by Jeremy Taylor, who thrust his head through a hole in the lid of his basket and glared balefully at the universe in general. Beside her sat Brad, pale under his tan, with his right arm swung from his neck. At the tail of their chariot, so to speak, was tied the horse of Bill Jukes, and fastened in the saddle, plentifully bandaged and besmeared with blood, was the man himself. His manner was drooping in the extreme, while from an opening in the cage cover Polly bestowed an unbroken succession of choice epithets upon the captive.

Miss Gordon of them all was unruffled, and she explained with a cheerfulness that was almost airy:

"Jukes rode down on us, shootin' and swearin' dreadful, and Mr. Merrell had to defend us, of course, so I took the lines. Then we couldn't go off and leave the man layin' there, maybe to die, so we went back, and I bandaged him up, and we brought him along. You can do what you want to with him. I don't reckon he feels very spruce, seein' that he was shot through the lung, an' that Polly's been swearin' at him every step of the way. Mr. Merrell, here, got a bullet in his arm, and has bled considerable, though it's only a flesh wound."

The gods on Olympus may have been surprised to see Minerva spring full panoplied from the brain of Jove, but that was the merest ghost of an emotion compared with what the men of Turkey Creek ranch felt when this splendid apparition in dusty black cashmere dawned upon them, with her nonchalant tale of daring, leading as captive one of the deadliest outlaws of the country. For a minute there were murmurs of exclamations and glances of amazement; and then, as Miss Gordon, bearing Jeremy Taylor, clambered to the ground, Paper Collar Joe, the Chesterfield of the ranch, gracefully advanced.

"Allow me to assist ye, madam!" he began sweetly, but the visitor waved him back.

And Brad, being tenderly helped over the wheel, drew [illegible] with [illegible].

"No [illegible]. It was too good a chance to [illegible] improved it. Miss Gordon's [illegible] to come up Turkey [illegible] [illegible] the future Mrs. Merrell [illegible].

LOW SALARIES FOR CABINET PLACES

COMPENSATION OF MINISTERS OF CROWN REGARDED AS RIDICULOUSLY INADEQUATE.

Ottawa, July 11—The resignation of Sir Thomas White, which his been placed in the hands of Sir Robert Borden, whether it is finally accepted or not, raises anew the question of the Cabinet Ministers' salaries. Undoubtedly one of the chief reasons which has led Sir Thomas to seek retirement from public office is financial. He has neglected his own private affairs for the past eight years and it is stated on good authority that his private fortune, never more than that of a moderately rich man, has been seriously impaired. He has had many opportunities in financial and industrial life at many times his present salary as a Cabinet Minster, which he has been compelled to refuse.

Apparently Sir Thomas feels that with the war over it is no longer a public duty to sacrifice himself both in pocket and health. He feels somewhat as Treasurer McAdoo, of the Wilson Cabinet, when he resigned because he said he could no longer afford to remain in public life. At the time of Mr. McAdoo's resignation Sir Thomas White privately expressed sympathy with his viewpoint Sir Thomas and Mr. McAdoo are great personal friends and it is believed his resignation had some influence on Sir Thomas.

The salary of a Canadian Cabinet Minister is only $7,000 per annum with $2,500 sessional indemnity, making $9,500. In view of the handsome salaries paid by executive heads at the present time the stipend of a Cabinet Minister is ridiculously low, particularly when one considers the heavy demands upon the purse of a Minister of the Crown even the necessary modest social requirements of a Minister without society predilections are costly in these expensive days. As for the work there is a popular opinion that the Cabinet Minister's life is one of ease. It is doubtful if there are any captains of industry in Canada who work as hard as Cabinet Ministers, especially in these days when new problems are arising almost daily. I would refer any Doubting Thomas on this point to Hon. T. A. Crerar and Hon. C. C. Balantyne, both of whom before entering the Cabinet were at the head of large enterprises.

Incidentally Mr. Crerar himself is an example of the difficulty of big men accepting Cabinet portfolios. Mr. Crerar, as head of the Grain Growers' Grain Co., draws $15,000 or nearly six thousand more than as Cabinet Minister. Testimony was given at the cost of living inquiry that no other official of the same company draws more than Cabinet Ministers. Even aside from his difference with the remainder of the Cabinet on the tariff question Mr. Crerar would have retired to private life. There is no certainty about a Cabinet portfolio. There is heaps of Criticism and abuse and worry continually. Mr. Crerar felt he could not afford to give up his Winnipeg position.

Hon. Arthur Meighen is another Minister who has sacrificed much financially to remain in public life. He has turned down many attractive offers from big corporations through loyalty to his leader and a sense of public duty. If Sir Thomas White insists on retiring the impression is general that Hon. Arthur Meighen will succeed as Finance Minister. It is not generally known that Mr. Meighen is fond of finance, and although not a business man or a financier, has been for years a close student of financial economics. He graduated from Toronto University in mathematical honors and taught mathematics before entering law. As a westerner in touch with western sentiment and yet not a free trader he might prove the best possible man to guide the new Unionist party in the successful middle course which is planned as a means of harmonizing and uniting east and west.

MAIL DELIVERY IN LINDSAY TOWN

TO BE INAUGURATED TOMORROW — POSTIES LEARNING ROUTES TODAY.

Lindsay posties, having written on their examinations yesterday are making a trial trip over their respective delivery routes today. Tomorrow Lindsay's street mail system is to be inaugurated. But, according to the "Post," there are in this sleepy town some stores and residences yet un-numbered, in which event a postie or two will have a puzzling time until this defect is remedied.

IT IS THE LAWYERS WHO REALLY MAKE TNE LAWS

South Carolina Attorney Has a Word to Say on Present Legal Situation.

(Charleston News and Courier.)

In his brilliant contribution to the life of James Louis Petigru, delivered at the University of South Carolina, Joseph W. Barnwell makes the statement. "After all, it is the lawyers who make the laws."

No man in South Carolina is better qualified to speak on such a subject. Himself a lawyer, in the forefront of his profession, after a life's service, knowing conditions in the State minutely, Mr. Barnwell declares that lawyers make the laws.

Inasmuch as lawyers dominate the General Assembly and constitute an organized profession, fed and nurtured by the State, as no other profession is, and further, since they know how to write laws and how to provide adequate means for their enforcement, the moral obligation is unescapable.

Even if they have not found remedies they have these remedies before their eyes.

The United States courts have no difficulty in convicting criminals, and a layman, unlearned in law, can readily perceive wherein the difference lies.

Under the jury system of the State it is quite possible that juries are in full sympathy with criminals. In many localities they are known to be, both grand jury and petit jury.

The remedy is the one selected by the Federal courts. Take the accused before a grand jury that has no local ties, and petit jurors to the Federal courts are selected.

Nothing will so quickly put a quietus on crime as the certainty of conviction. The lawless desperado soon becomes as meek as a lamb when he knows that punishment awaits him. The raiding of towns in Texas by cowboys ceased for all time when several cowboys were convicted and hanged. It would be in full blast now but for such treatment. Such men, miscalled desperate, act with full knowledge that the power is in their hands. They run little risk against an unarmed population.

Murder and murderous assaults, for which the Cattle Belt in this State is notorious, are the outcome of the same condition. In a society where the officers of the law give aid and comfort to the criminal, when juries are selected by them for the purpose of covering up crime and for preventing the punishment of the criminal, it is not strange that the bushman assumes a haughty and domineering attitude.

Change of Laws.

There is small hope of relief until a change in the laws is made; and people have long thought the legal professions responsible for the condition.

A man who commits crime is a common enemy. He should have no mercy from any source. A fair trial, according to the law and the evidence, is all he has a right to ask.

It certainly is a strange new doctrine, which is being circulated over the world to-day, that nobody but the criminal is deserving of consideration. The vast majority of men who lead honorable lives, who observe the laws and to whom Government looks for its support and perpetuation, surely are entitled to protection at the hands of their own Government.

This used to be unnecessary to argue. All men concede it. The legal profession in South Carolina is composed of hondrable, high-toned men, with few exceptions. In the minds of lawyers distinctions are sharply drawn. The line between right and wrong is clearcut.

The assertion of Mr. Barnwell leaves nothing to be desired, except that members of the legal profession should frankly act on what they know to be true, and end a shameful condition, which besmirkes the honor of the State, and menaces its existence.

HOW TORONTO WILL BUILD HOUSES

EASY TERMS OF PAYMENT OFFERED BY COMMISSION IN THAT CITY.

The Toronto Housing Commission announces that in order to be sure of securing one of its model homes applicants must present themselves at the offices in the Temple Building before the end of July. The commission has at present contracted for as many houses as it has applications and will be guided in its future contracts by the number of additional applications received. As the minimum time for construction is three months and as the building season is comparatively short, citizens who leave off applying until after this month are in danger of missing their chance. Another element in the situation is a ten per cent increase in the cost of lumber and plumbing. Those who delay may find that the later-built homes are more expensive than those now under contract.

The price which the commission is at present charging for its six-roomed homes is $3,600, with $360 cash. But citizens of the right type who can show ability to pay can purchase whith as little as $180 down, the remaining $180 to be made up in three instalments. They get 5 per cent. interest on the money until the house is theirs. The houses are said to compare with homes, which ordinarily sell for $4,100, and there are the following advantages in the matter of payment:

1. Initial payment is only $360 with interest on that amount allowed until the house is ready.

2. The mortgage of $3,240 may be paid off in 240 monthly instalments. (20 years.)

3. The interest charged is only 5 per cent. or thereabouts as compared with 6½ or 7 per cent being paid elsewhere.

4. The monthly instalment (including interest at 5 per cent) will be only $21.19 which is actually cheaper than rent.

5. Unlike many monthly payment mortgages, those of the commission will provide that the monthly payments go to reduce the mortgage when and asmade, instead of applying as a lump sum at the end of each year. This greatly reduces the amount to be paid.

The commission's houses will be located in the east and west of the city, there having been few applications from the north, which is largely without factories. The homes will be of brick and stucco, and the exterior designs will vary, so as to avoid giving the appearance sometimes presented by a "block" of houses. They will be built in pairs, on desirable lots in localities not far from transportation and with sewerage and other city conveniences.

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for woman's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. SARA SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did.

Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice in regard to such ailments write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its forty years experience is at your service.

LABOR IS URGED TO CARRY ITS FIGHT TO THE POLLS

Metal Trades Issues Call to Arms—Put Up Candidates in Federal, Provincial and Municipal Elections.

In a statement just issued Messrs. A. Hamilton and R. C. Brown, Secretary and President respectively of the Metal Trades Council, Toronto, call on all workingmen to gird on their armor and start in to remedy their grievances by carrying Labor's fight to the polls in municipal, provincial and federal elections. The statement follows:

"The Metal Trades Council of Toronto believe it desirable at this time to call special attention to the existing state of affairs in Canada respecting the use of the governmental function in the interests of the employing class.

"The consensus of opinion amongst those whom we represent appears to be that a considerable number of financial and industrial buccaneers in this country are bending the Government to their will, that price, harsh repressive measures and the raping of human liberty are constitutional in the estimation of the Federal Government, and that in the name of the constitution, law and order this government has violated the constitution of Canada, the British boast of fair play, trial by jury, the right of public assembly, freedom of speech, and freedom of the press, and has carried out in contravention of Canadian law, kidnappings of labor representatives in the West at the demand of the masters of the bread.

Rights Must Be Secured.

"We urge that the workers refuse to submit to these illegal acts intended to destroy the legality of our efforts to better the condition of 85 per cent. of the population of Canada.

"It appears that we shall again require to strive for the elemental rights of all human beings—expression of thought, the right to organize for protection, the right to peaceably assemble. We cannot arrive anywhere nor become free men and women unless we make secure these rights once for all.

"Majority rule has a legal status in this country. We, the workers, are in a vast majority and we are justified in the contention that our voice should be the sole voice in the management of ourselves and the management of our affairs of getting a living out of an earth that should be the joint possession of us all.

"We urge and believe that the working class will shortly attend to this matter of vital interest to them and we warn the Government here and now that strong arm repression of economic or political organization, freedom of utterance, freedom of publication, will only succeed temporarily, if at all.

"The workers create not only capital, not only their own necessities, but supply millions of non-producers with both the necessities and comforts of life while the workers themselves for the most part, live a life of constant self-denial, insecurity and of employment and submit to innumerable indignities as well.

"We acknowledge that those who own our jobs for the most part own us, and regulate our lives, habits and conduct from the cradle to the grave. This is an intolerable condition of affairs, which makes it the duty of every working man and woman to take an absorbing interest in the politics of their own kind, to the end that industrial freedom shall come.

Urges Workers To Action.

"The Metal Trades Council calls upon the workers everywhere to become consistently active, politically in a way that will compel the discontinuance of illegal and violent acts by replacing the present Government with a working class administration. We are of the opinion that this can be done in the near future by the workers whose ascendency to power will make necessary the writing of a new constitution that will not only recognize the workers' right to economic freedom but also make them joint participants in the ownership of Canadian industries by all the people. Nothing else would be thoroughly fair; nothing else would satisfy; nothing else is possible.

"This change must come if we are to have industrial peace in place of industrial war, and realize that democracy, so often talked and written about, during the great war.

"We extend greetings to all useful citizens invite all others to become such and suggest immediate preparation for municipal, provincial and federal elections and urge on the fight. Labor knows no defeat."

"GUIDE" DEFENDS MGR. J. SOLOMON

SAYS BELLEVILLE ROOTERS SHOULD BE BROADER IN THEIR VIEWS.

The rooting of the Belleville fans in the game here against Peterboro and the insulting remarks made to the manager of the team is probably a sample of what was handed the Peterboro team when they visited Belleville. Belleville rooters should be broader in their views and see some good points in other teams, except their own. Their roasting of Jake Solomon of Peterboro showed very poor taste. Jake in our opinion is one of the best baseball managers in the business and has more baseball dope stored away in his head than any manager in the Central League. We hope Belleville's experience in the Central League this year will broaden out their ideas.—Port Hope Guide.

MANY RUMORS OF CABINET CHANGES

SIR GEORGE FOSTER IS REPORTED AS LIKELY TO RETIRE.

Ottawa, July 11.—Sir Robert Borden expects to leave for a holiday at the end of the week. On his return, the work of Cabinet reorganization will begin; and, it is said, the reorganization will be thorough. When the Union Government was formed in 1917, the general understanding was that the Cabinet would be on a 50-50 basis, but the formation of a definite Unionist party has changed the situation somewhat in this regard and there is wide speculation what the outcome of the reorganization will be.

Cabinet "Made" Every Day

The air is full of rumors. Gossip makes and unmakes a Cabinet every day. The retirement of Sir Thomas White was not unexpected and would, no doubt have come before had it not been for the urgent representations of the Prime Minister. That of Mr. Carvell is regarded as almost inevitable, although the chairman of the Board of Commerce was not taken very seriously. In Mr. Carvell was himself the first most strenuously to deny it. During the session, Mr. Carvell practically intimated his intention to retire from the Government. Indeed, it was noted that Mr. Carvell was one of the absentees from the Government caucus a few weeks ago when the Unionist party came into being. There is little doubt also that Sir George Foster will retire from the Department of Trade and Commerce. Sir George has spent many years in the public service, and will possibly take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy a well earned rest.

The suggestion is made that the department should be placed in the hands of an accepted business man who would carry out a forward policy in regard to Canadian trade.

Two Ministers Mentioned.

Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, and Hon. Martin Burrell, Secretary of the State, the possibility of whose retirement has often been indicated before, are again mentioned in this regard. Hon. N. W. Rowell may take charge of the Department of Public Health. In the House, Mr. Rowell had charge of the bill creating the Department. The work of organization is already under way.

Numerous appointments, judicial and otherwise, remain to be filled. Provision has been made for direct Canadian representation at Washington, in continuance of the Canadian War Trade Mission there. The appointment of a Canadian representative has still to be made. There also remains the Board of Commerce created as a sequel to the cost of living inquiry, to administer the Combines and Fair Prices Act, 1919. The board is to consist of three commissioners, holding office for 10 years and devoting their whole time to the duties of the office. The name of Mr. R. A. Pringle, K. C., who acted as counsel for the Cost of Living Committee, has been widely suggested as chief commissioner. It is, however, regarded as certain that Mr. Pringle would decline to accept the position even were it offered to him.

The act passed to incorporate the Canadian National Railway Co., may also entail changes in the present directorate over which Mr. D. B. Hanna presides. The company will have control of all Government lines.

WALKED TO HIS DEATH

Cobalt Miner Forgot About Impending Blast.

Cobalt, July 11.—F. A. McDonald, the victim of the fatal blasting accident at the Foster property, met his death through absentmindedness, according to the verdict of the coroner's jury. The evidence adduced was to the effect that the man who fired the hole in No. 3 slope, where the accident occurred, gave ample warning, and that McDonald himself knew that blasting was in progress there.

Haircuts in Chicago were raised to 50 cents.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign you have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

FLIVVER DAMAGED LOCOMOTIVE ON RAILWAY IN NEW JERSEY.

New York, July 11.—Andrew Gavbajka of Passaic, N. J., bumped into a Central Railroad of New Jersey locomotive with his automobile. The crash bent one of the auto's mudguards. Andrew was in the act of filing a claim for $3.10 for damages when he received a bill from the railroad for $24.68 damages the locomotive sustained.

"Well, I might have known it," said Gavbajka philosophically. "My blooming car is a flivver."

BARBERS STILL ON STRIKE

The striking journeymen have removed union cards from all the shops of the city except nine and in advertisements in the local papers publish the names of union shops.

"BIGGEST FOOL IN PETERBORO" EVANGELIST KENNEDY'S TOPIC

Defines Him as Man Who Refuses to Accept the Plan of Salvation While Recognizing the Need—Music by the Salvation Songsters

"The Biggest Fool in Peterborough," according to Evangelist H. D. Kennedy, is the person who admits that he believes in God, that he understands the method of salvation outlined in the Bible, that he is a sinner and that he needs Christ but refuses to accept the pardon for sin that is offered without money and without price. Such persons turn their [illegible] on all that is good and show that they prefer to continue in sin. They are worse than infidels in as much as an infidel does not believe the Bible.

Speaking from the text, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul" (Mark 8:36). Mr. Kennedy dealt at some length last night with the subject of covetousness and the love of earthly fame and honor. More is said in the Scriptures against the sin of covetousness than all other sins together. Covetousness is the first step in stealing. If allowed to continue in the disposition it develops into all manner of sin because the love of money is the root of all evil. Mr. Kennedy said that when Christ was on earth He did not judge men according to their rank, wealth and influence, but by what they were. He spent much of His time among the poor and lowly.

The speaker showed that wealth does not necessarily mean happiness and mentioned well-known men of great wealth who, in spite of all their money, are unable to overcome bodily ailments. He showed that Solomon, the wisest man that ever lived, admitted that all worldly things are nothing but vanity, that Napoleon became the greatest general that ever lived but died on St. Helena, that Alexander the Great conquered the then known world only to weep because there were no more worlds to conquer. The chase after pleasure can never bring peace or permanent profit.

Some people think that when they get money it is their chance to lord it over [illegible] in better homes, dressing better, driving a more expensive car and in other similar ways. The true Christian will lay his wealth out before the Lord and ask for divine guidance as to how it shall be spent. The best way to judge men is not by how much they are worth but by the use they make of the money they have. The advice to get all you can, save all you can and spend all you can, if properly interpreted is wise. Money is not tainted, but the men who mishandle money are.

It is as natural for a man to want happiness as it is for a fish to want water. Yet peace and happiness can never permanently enter into hearts apart from Christ. The thing that stands between any person and God is that thing whatever it may be that they are not willing to give up for God. It is that thing, which is stealing the soul of the person who cleaves to it. What will it profit such a person if they gain what they desire but lose their soul. Mr. Kenneny said that scarcely any person would consent to having their right arm chopped off, even to receive a large sum of money, yet every day men and women sell their souls for things which they value less than they do their arms. In closing the speaker showed the great value that Christ set on a soul in that He was willing to give His life in order that our souls might be redeemed. He pressed home the Scriptural question, "How shall ye escape if ye neglect so great salvation," and "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" As has been the case every night now for some [illegible] week or more conversions were recorded at the close of the meeting.

Among the ministers present last evening were Rev. Messrs. Pogue, Chapman, Galt, Thomas and Webb, as well as Adjunt Buntin of the Salvation Army. The feature of the singing last evening was several chor-

THEATRICAL

ALMOST MARRIED, AT OPERA HOUSE

AN IRRESISTIBLE PICTURE COMEDY WHICH DRAWS CAPACITY HOUSES.

The brilliant motion picture comedy "Almost Married" attracted a capacity house at the Grand last night, when every seat was sold. This irresistible high-class production is a marvel of the screen art, in which an interest-holding story is faithfully pictured, as indeed are all presentations at Peterborough's premier amusement house. Miss May Allison, the heroine, is an American [illegible] screen comedienne of exceptional histrionic talent, and pictures in which she features are easily followed as to their text.

Here follows a summary of one of the best comedy pictures ever presented in this city:

Adrienne Le Blanc, daughter of Papa Le Blanc, meets Carrington O'Connell, with whom she falls in love and to whom she subsequently becomes affianced. Subsequently, however, Mammy Morrison intervenes between the lovers and persuades Adrienne, the heroine, whom she thinks has histrionic talent, to take up stage life in America, where she fails to make a success in New York theatres. Finally, Adrienne, under persuasion from Morrison, falls for the all-night cabarets, in which she wins fame and the admiration of the male sex. Here O'Connell, Adrienne's lover, and his father appear on the scene and many funny incidents occur. To make Carrington jealous, his father and Adrienne make pretense at marrying, and the son, discovering the plot, plays the same game with a friend's wife, but the friend cannot see the joke, and trouble ensues. Of course, the ending is happy, and Adrienne and her lover come together in matrimony. The elder O'Connell, however, cannot help feeling a tinge of regret that, as he says, he was almost married but his son stole his wife.

"Almost Married" is replete with tense situations and keeps the audience keyed up to a high note of expectancy throughout all its six acts. It may be seen at the Grand tonight and tomorrow. Don't miss it.

Chris Graham, being an expert catcher and pitcher was set at the job. Presently the brown edible was flying all over the place, sailing through the air and being caught more or less expertly in caps, hats and in the hands. If not caught then chased in the tall grass until run down and stepped on. Many were thus broken and perfectly extinct as a viand. But it was all in the game.

Baseball a Corker

The baseball match was a corker as long as it lasted. No one won, and it wasn't intended that they should. There were only four rounds and the referee stopped the match to take to the boat on the return trip.

Bargain Day Prizes

On the way home prizes were presented. Opening the bag disclosed that it must have been bargain day at Woolworth's. Prizes were numerous but not costly. The assortment was a lesson in purchasing economy. Clearly the appropriation was not exceeded.

A Few Arrests

Presently, for the entertainment of the gathering on the boat a police court was organized, under the auspices of Bro. Thompson. Men were arrested and brought before the court on heinous allegations. Chris Graham was the double-barreled deputy dictator, and arrester, and played no favorites. Others assisted. In fact the police force was overmanned. Men were fined for shaving on Sunday and for not shaving at all. Another was mulcted a dollar for being late at his meals. Two were severely fined for evading attendance at the Hunter street revival services. One whose wife had presented him with a daughter, was severely fined because it was not twins. And so the fun went on, the court, d'ye understand, being wholly a court of expediency and not one of law. Presentation of the prizes was a hilarious few minutes. Following is a list of the alleged winners.

BOSTON FANS ARE SORE AT GREAT RED SOX BALL TEAM

Series of Defeats Have Embittered Patrons of Sport in Hub City and They Now Put Team in Willard Class.

Boston, July 11 Can the present ownership of the Boston Red Sox stand the gaff of Dempsey wallops being handed the team by fans of that former prosperous baseball centre? Will these officials toss a towel in token of defeat and quit the Hub?

These same Red Sox are today champions of the world in name only. They, like Willard at Toledo, have tottered under a rain of blows from a husky young adversary. The world's series of 1918 gave the world a champion club just as the fistic encounter at Toledo handed the pugilistic game a real title holder.

If the Red Sox keep on tumbling they won't draw cooties in the Hub, for the fans down that way are exceedingly wrathful over recent maneuvers that have deprived them of a pennant contender.

Athletics Due Here Tonight.

The subject of the Red Sox' plight is pertinent because the Philadelphia Athletics will be here for a series of games with the White Sox. Connie Mack will bring Amos Strunk, a player he formerly owned and later traded to the Boston American League team.

Mack swapped Roth and Shannon for two players said to be highly dissatisfied with conditions on the Red Sox. Barrow, eager to be rid of some of the trouble makers and to get Ruth, a slugger, to take the place of Duffy Lewis, was a party to the deal.

Jack Barry, averse to receiving the usual Philadelphia stipend, has refused to report to Manager Mack. So, from this angle, the swap looks like bad business for the Shibes and McGillicuddy. But don't worry about Mack. He'll find a way out.

The White Sox have a chance to get Barry in trade from Philadelphia and President Comiskey would do well to nab him. Jack is a wonderful ball player and would come in handy in the hard grind of the Sox to keep up with the fast procession in the Johnson circuit. An injury to Eddie Collins or Weaver would make Jack look pretty sweet in a Sox uniform.

Larder Needs Replenishing.

It's a cinch Mack will not keep a valuable player like Barry on his retired list. The Shibe-Mack larder needs replenishing and the sly Connie knows full well he can get his price for the versatile and talented Barry.

The presence of Back here only emphasizes the plight of the Red Sox. Fans are always for a club and its officials when they win but when chronic winners like the Red Sox go to pieces in a fortnight, they want to know why. The present head of the Red Sox has paid enough for ball players but the complaint over his regime seems to be over his failure to retain popular stars. Fans are often fickle. They panned Barry brown recently and now they will lambast the club's president for letting him go.

It is not the release of Barry or Strunk, however, that has soured the Boston fans on the club and caused the slump in attendance at Fenway park. It is the wholesale slaughter of bright stars at the American League bargain counter.

Blame Barrow for Fiasco.

It may be a second guess due to the poor showing of the club, it may be due to the wonderful improvement in other clubs, notably the New York Yankees, Detroit Tigers and the St. Louis Browns; and then it may be due to the bad condition of the Boston pitching staff. But one can't talk these things to Boston fans. They believe Barrow has broken up two world champion clubs and that, in doing so, he has made second division aggregation of the Red Sox.

Following is the team the fans and most of the scribes of the Hub believe Barrow should have to be in the race and it will be recalled he owned them all: Hooper, rf.; Barry, 2b.; Strunk, cf.; Lewis, lf.; Gardner, 3b.; McInnis, 1b.; Scott, ss. and the batteries.

Fans of the Hub believe this team, had it been retained, would be out in the lead. They evidently think Ruth's proper place in on the slab. Perhaps they are right.

An Opportunity To Earn A Diamond Ring

A NUMBER OF YOUNG LADIES DESIRED TO ENTER POPULARITY—CONTEST FOR GOOD PRIZES.

The Central Exhibition Board has arranged for the appearance here of the largest and finest summer carnival on the continent during the week of July 21st to July 26th, inclusive. It is now playing in Montreal after a week in Ottawa, where they pleased the Ottawa people immensely.

In connection with the appearance of the organization in a city, is conducted a Popularity Contest for young ladies, for three valuable prizes as follows:

1.—Diamond ring.
3.—Choice of three Laviolins.

Those desirous of entering the contest are requested to mail in their names and addresses to Mr. J. A. Hall, secretary of the Fair Board. Send in your name tonight.

FOOT WORK IN TENNIS

Eastern Critic Says Even Leading Players are Deficient

The younger lawn tennis players do not always recognize the value of proper footwork. This has been noticeable in many of the recent tournaments, and is especially prominent in the matches of the Brooklyn championship, which was held on courts of the Terrace Club of Flatbush, says a New York critic.

It is not alone the youngsters who fail to understand that the powerful blow of the racquet is not to be obtained unless the feet are planted so that the blow may be delivered. Harold A Throckmorton misses many of his spectacular shots because of his bad form in footing. Criticism as to poor footing has been frequently made against R. Norris Williams, to the former national champion.

James Burns, the professional at the Rockaway Hunting Club and who held the post as squash professional at the Harvard Club last winter, ~~believes~~ that footwork is of paramount importance. He states that it is impossible for the player to tie his feet in a corkscrew knot and then expect to properly stroke the ball with pace and accuracy.

JESS WILLARD MOST HATED OF ALL FIGHT CHAMPIONS

Man Who Has Just Lost Title Was Never Popular With the Admirers of the Art.

No two world's heavyweight champions have been alike, either in style of fighting or in personality.

Jim Corbett, first of the champions under Marquis of Queensberry rules, was a scientific, clever boxer, not a particularly hard hitter. In manner he was polite, polished and suave, so much so that, he gained the sobriquet of "Gentleman Jim," of which he was extremely proud, and which he strove to live up to. He was the most admired of all the champions.

Bob Fitzsimmons, while not a finished boxer like Corbett, had an awkwardly clever way of avoiding punishment. He was an extremely hard hitter and generally was willing to take a punch in order to sway one for it. He usually beat his adversary to the blow. He knew where and how to hit effectively. Personally—he was eccentric. He was the most astounding of the champions and was liked by the public.

Jim Jeffries gained the title mostly through brute strength. He introduced the crouch, and his methods were to wear down his opponent by means of his vastly superior vitality and physique, and then crush over a ponderous knockout with his clublike blows. He was surly and crabbed generally but was a popular champion.

Jackson was a natural boxer, in whom the instinct of self-perservation was abnormally developed. He was extraordinary skilful defensive boxer, but possessed a punch that compared favorably with that of any of his predecessors. Personally, he was a jolly, good-natured fellow, but was too self-indulgent. He was despised because of his color and his general lack of morality.

Jess Willard is by way of being something of an "accidental" champion. He came at a time when there was a dearth of good heavyweights; caught Johnson out of condition and on the wane, and won solely because of the great size and natural strength He possesses a terrific punch, but does not seem to have it under control. In other words, he has not shown that he knows how to hit. Personally, he is self-crabbed and irritable. He hated the championship and all that went with it except the money, and he hates the fans who are prone to regard a champion as something of a god.

And the fans hate him. He was the most unpopular of all the champions.

Rickard's Profit Is About $100,000

ON BIG FIGHT AT TOLEDO — SELLS ARENA FOR $25,000.

Toledo, O., July 11.—Exactly 19,650 persons paid their way into the Bayview Park Arena on July 4 to see the heavyweight championship bout between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey.

Official figures as to attendance were announced by Frank B. Flournoy, Tex Rickard's associate in the venture.

The receipts after the Government tax of $41,189.94 had been deducted were $410,732.16.

The 7 per cent. charity fund for the City of Toledo was slightly under $30,000. There were 292 policemen in the stadium, 75 firemen, 600 ushers, 90 ticket takers, 20 ticket sellers and 454 press representatives.

The principal expenses of the promoters were as follows: Willard, $100,000. Dempsey, $27,500; arena construction, $150,000; City of Toledo charity fund, $30,000. Total, $307,500.

Other charges probably will make the cost approximately $325,000, leaving the promoters' profits somewhat below $100,000, Mr. Flournoy said.

The arena was constructed to seat 97,000. Flournoy announced that it would be sold to the American House Wrecking Company, of Chicago, for $25,000, being disposed of to the highest bidder.

There is nearly 2,000,000 feet of lumber in the plant. Work of tearing it down will begin at once, it was said.

JEFFRIES NOW STAGE DRIVER

James L. Jeffries, one time world's champion pugilist, was recently granted a permit by the Los Angeles board of public utilities to operate a freight and passenger stage line between Burbank and vicinity and Los Angeles. Mr. Jeffries intends to act as chauffeur when occasion requires, and he will file an application the first of next week for a chauffeur's permit, he stated. It was suggested to him at yesterday's meeting of the board that for the necessary photograph which must be attached to the permit and filed in the board's office to pose in his fighting ring togs.

All Relations With Majors Broken Off

BIG LEAGUES WILL NOT BE ALLOWED TO DRAFT ANY PLAYERS.

Chicago, July 11. All relations between the major and minor baseball leagues were definitely broken off at a meeting of the committee representing the National Association of Minor Leagues. The committee adopted resolutions ratifying the action taken at the joint meeting with the major leagues in New York last January, when the national agreement was abrogated.

The minor leagues will operate independently of the major leagues and will attempt to settle all disputes within their own organization instead of appealing to the National Commission for final decision or review of any case.

The action of the minor league committee means that the major leagues will not be permitted to draft players this fall. Contracts and territorial rights, however, will be respected.

Trusts a Fixture.

Dr. Bohn declared that the trust system was here to stay. Small competitors would have to go by the board. With the trusts' system of producing no small manufacturer could ever hope to compete. The trusts would be managed by an industrial council composed of an equal number of members chosen from the ranks of capital and labor. The lecturer went on record as being a strong supporter of the shorter working day, and said that in the coal mines of England the miners were now working seven hours a day but when the production once more became sufficient to the demand they would then only work six hours. This alone made Britain a world leader in industrial conditions.

The British National Industrial Council was formed to make industrial laws for Britain to solve the labor problem and they were succeeding admirably. The speaker declared that after about twelve months strikes would be unknown in Great Britain.

French Devoted Democrats.

Dr. Bohn paid a tribute to the undying devotion of the French people to the cause of democracy and said that the rest of the world should be untiring in their efforts to assist this stricken nation. He declared that chaos reigned supreme from the Rhine to Kamchatka, all the countries in this vast territory being in the throes of revolution. He also stated that in his opinion they would work out their own destinies just as soon as the force of the present eruption had spent itself.

The Chosen of God.

He declared that the English-speaking people were now Gods chosen race or the redemption of mankind; that the whole world was now dependent upon us for everything which they might require. But instead of foisting material upon the world, which is not needed we should rather only supply them with just what they require in this great reconstruction period.

Next Worlds War.

Dr. Bohn declared that the next world war, if there ever was another, would be between the white and colored races and would be so terrible that the late war would look like a Sunday school picnic beside it. It would probably be fought in the air altogether, and the nation with a little start would completely annihilate its opponents. However, it was up to us to see that this never does occur. The colored races have been badly treated by the whites in the past, but now we were beginning to realize that these people were a part of the great brotherhood of man and were deserving of some consideration.

He declared the hydro-electricity would revolutionize the industrial world. All the great water power of the world would be harnessed and used as motive power for the great industries, thus materially reducing the first cost of manufacture. The hydro-electric system is the greatest boon to humanity in the history of the world's industry.

The League of Nations.

Dr. Bohn said that the covenant of the League of Nations would solve all labor problems of the future. National labor meetings would be held yearly in every country to discuss local problems. These will then come before the international meeting for discussion. In this way all labor difficulties will be met and settled without strikes or lock-outs. He declared that the covenant of the League of Nations had resulted from the efforts of the champions of labor, and would be backed up by all right-thinking labor men.

Musical Program.

FRANCHISE ACT SHOULD REMAIN

SO THINK MAJORITY OF RETURNED VOLUNTEER CITIZENS.

Toronto, July 11. Great war veterans all along the line have expressed themselves as aggrieved at the action of the government in cancelling the war times election act. Many responsible officials have expressed the opinion that the lessons of the Winnipeg riots must have been wholly lost upon office seeking members of the federal house. Apparently they say, the vote of the hostile alien and his ignorant women folk in the west, combined with the anti-conscription element in the east, are of more value to these politicians than the votes of the loyalists, who sacrificed their all for the Dominion.

FOUR NURSES RECEIVE THEIR DIPLOMAS AT ST. JOSEPH'S

A very interesting event took place at St. Joseph's Hospital last evening when four young lady graduates of that institution were presented with diplomas. The graduating exercises were held on the beautiful lawn which lends itself admirably for such an occasion.

A large number were present to witness this important event in the lives of the young nurses. Among those present were friends from Lindsay, North Bay and other points. A very pleasing musical program was rendered, which was much enjoyed by all. The four young lady graduates: Miss Julia Murphy, Lindsay; Miss Margaret LeClaire, North Bay; Miss Elizabeth A. Hanlen, Coppercliffe; Miss Kathleen Hickey, Peterborough, occupied front seats in the gathering and looked very pretty in their uniforms. Each carried large bouquets of pink roses, daisies and ferns.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Rev. Dean McColl of Ashburnham, Father P. McGuire, City; Father Ferguson, Warkworth; Father Guiry, city; Father M. J. O'Brien city; and Father J. O'Leary, Lindsay, attended the exercises. Dr. J. V. Gallivan acted as chairman and Dr. F. C. Neal was also present.

Bishop O'Brien, upon presenting each of the graduates with a diploma expressed in brief, but fitting, terms the sentiments of all present. Dwelling upon the dignity of the medical profession, His Lordship impressed upon the young nurses the importance of their calling and pointed out the vast field of opportunity for good that lay before them. He spoke of the conscientious fulfilment of duty wherever their profession may take them, whether it be to the beautiful home or the humble dwelling. Theirs it was to spend themselves in alleviating the sufferings of humanity, to keep before them the white light of an ideal and to be loyal to that ideal even at the cost of personal sacrifice.

Dean McColl spoke briefly, couching in clear and terse language, sentiments of pleasure on the occasion, and also lending a word of advice to the young lady graduates.

Dr. Neal voiced the sentiments of the doctors, in a few well chosen sentences, which were well received by the gathering.

The pleasing event closed by all singing "God Save the King."

The following was the musical program:

Graduation march—Misses M. MacPherson and M. Donoghue.

Instrumental duett—Misses F. Giroux and L. Hill.

SPARKS FROM KENNEDY'S ANVIL

Every man must live forever either in rapture or in woe. This fact was revealed when our Lord told the story of the rich man and Lazarus.

Man's soul was made for God and can never find rest until it finds rest in Him.

It's not what a man has or knows that counts. It's what he is and does.

If you had a dozen lives to live you might experiment on this one—but you have only one, so be wise.

Whatever keeps you from Christ that is the price you sell your soul for.

Men should be valued not by their income, but by the output. Not by what they get, but by what they give.

Man was made and put into this world to be God's steward and he would fain be its owner.

Every time you make a dollar more than your neighbors, you are that much more responsible to God and humanity than before.

It's not a sin to have money. It depends on how you got it what you do with it.

Money will make a man a miser, a sensualist or a success.

Some endeavor to purchase peace for their souls with money—that cannot be done.

Peace in the soul can only be gained by a man's right relationship toward God, through Christ and his just conduct toward men.

Some spend half their lives trying to get other people's money and the other half in trying to keep other people from getting theirs.

The door of heaven that today may be used in letting you in, one day may be used in shutting you out.

Leaving eternity out of the question, does it pay to live in sin in this world. Sin is what harms us.

There is nothing in heaven the sinner likes.

DIRIGIBLE IS NEAR IRISH COAST

CHURCH CHARGES JAPANESE WITH ABUSING AMERICANS

Presbyterians Alleged That Missionaries and Converts in That Country Have Been Brutally Treated and That Many Have Been Put to Death.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, July 12.—Grave charges against the Japanese of cruelties and indignities inflicted on Korean Christians and imprisoned American missionaries are made today in a report of the special American investigators, which was published from the headquarters of the Presbyterian Church in America here. This investigation followed news receipted here of the arrest of American missionaries on charges of aiding in plotting against the Japan rule in Korea.

The report of the investigators tells of Korean Christians being driven by Japanese gendarmie into churches at point of the bayonet there to be tortured and finally burned to death when the churches were set afire. Respectable women, reports say, were subject to shameful indignities and in one part of the country were not safe in their homes and fled to the hills. Men suspected of revolutionary ideas were subjected to cruelty and in many cases fatal methods of examination. The atrocities were largely confined to the northern province.

DRAWS DISMAL PICTURE OF CONDITIONS IN WEST

Mr. A. Stewart Hanna, Formerly of Review Staff, Writes of His Observations in Wheat Growing Provinces

Mr. A. Stewart Hanna, who was for nearly a year a member of the local staff of The Review and who resigned recently to go West where he has property interests, writes to this paper a dismal picture of conditions among the grain growers of Saskatchewan and Alberta. Mr. Hanna says:

"From personal observation during my trip and from the reports of others who are continually going over the country, I believe that this year the Northwest is facing the most terrible situation in its history. Severe drought, hot winds, gophers, cutworms, hail and other adverse conditions have brought about a failure of the wheat crop which is almost beyond one's power to grasp.

"It is the most depressing thing imaginable to pass through a country day by day which resembles the Sahara desert. The wheat is heading out at 3 inches; it is turning brown; it is buried in sand, and whole patches have been left bare owing to the work of wind, cut-worms and gophers.

"In the Prince Albert district a strip of about 80 miles in length and 40 to 50 in width, east of [illegible], will yield an excellent crop if it is not hailed. The Peace River district, if favorable circumstances continue, will also make good returns and there are again isolated examples where a farmer may thresh half a crop, but, speaking generally, this year will record a failure of the wheat, oats and flax crops in Saskatchewan and Alberta. Manitoba will thresh a light crop, but still she will beat her sister provinces. This year's failure will be much worse than that of last year and will bear more heavily upon the grain growers. A light crop in 17, failure in 18 and 19; that's the story of the past three years in the west.

"This winter will see real hardships. Familiar as you are with the important bearing of agricultural success or failure upon the industrial life of even an older country like Ontario, you may have some idea of the effect in the West, which depends so directly upon its crops. There will be no progress this year, no money and no business. Returned soldiers cannot get work. There will be little employment in the harvest fields; railroaders will be laid off, elevator men and so on. Had the West had a good crop this year she would have boomed. As it is, she must sleep on until the Lord's good time."

The resolution attacked the big packers, alleging the control of food products.

SHALL WOMEN GO INTO PULPIT?

QUESTION RAISES HOT DEBATE IN CHURCH MEETING IN LONDON

London, July 12.—Excitement attended a debate in a public meeting held recently in Church House, the headquarters of the Church of England, over whether women should be admitted to be priesthood. The principal debaters were Miss Maude Royden, a leader of the movement here for women clergy, and the Rev. A. G. Magee, a staunch opponent of the scheme.

Clergymen joined with laymen and women in hissing, booing and cheering, according to the side they took.

"To admit women to the priesthood," the Rev. Mr. Magee declared, "would be a revolution, not an evolution. They cannot have a revolution of that character until the whole Church has set its seal upon it and God has approved of it."

Hissing and cries of "Shame," greeted his discussion of the moral relationship likely to rise between men and women in the Church if the latter were admitted. "You cannot get away from the sex question," he said. "We are made as we are, and that fact remains."

Amid applause from his friends he said he believed the granting of the priesthood to woman "would make her false to her Master and false to her sex."

"Women," argued Miss Royden, "desire women as priests, and their admission to the priesthood would make it much easier for women to get help from the Church."

After quoting the New Testament to show that the commission of the priesthood was given to men and women alike in the "Upper Room" at Jerusalem, she continued:

"The head of the Church of England has not always been a man. Queen Elizabeth, Queen Anne and Queen Victoria were all supreme head sof the Church."

"No! No." shouted many voices.

"I am sorry if you don't like it," Miss Royden told the protesting element, "but it is so."

She went on to affirm that the fundamental difference between men and women were not a bar to women's entry into the priesthood. "Women," she concluded "desire to conform more nearly to the ideal laid down by Christ. He laid down nothing and suggested nothing that divided men and women in the vocation of priesthood." No vote was taken on the subject.

CALL QUEBEC TO NEW CABINET

PREMIER BORDEN IS ANXIOUS TO HAVE THAT PROVINCE REPRESENTED.

Ottawa, July 12.—While the actual swearing in of new cabinet ministers may not take place until the return of Sir Robert Borden from a brief holiday, yet his plans for reconstruction of his cabinet are nearly completed.

It can be stated with authority that there are likely to be some big surprises if present plans go through. Sir Thomas White is insisting that his resignation be accepted. The Prime Minister has not yet taken action, and if the finance minister does not change his mind within the next few days there will be no alternative but to accept it.

Adequate Remuneration

There is a strong demand voiced by political leaders of both parties that at the coming session of Parliament provision be made for more adequate remuneration for ministers and others holding responsible positions in the public service. It is pointed out that there are at least a dozen firms in Canada at the present time, whose managing directors receive at least $50,000 per year, and in one instance —in the case of a Nova Scotia concern—a recent salary contract for a general manager called for an annual salary of $100,000.

With private enterprises paying such salaries, it is argued that the comparatively small remuneration given cabinet ministers and other public servants in high executive positions will in the future fail to either hold or attract men of brains and capacity to the national service.

Quebec Representation

The reorganization of the cabinet may see representation from Quebec. It is known that Sir Robert Borden would like to see the Unionist party—a party which aims at national unity throughout Canada—represented by strong Quebec ministers.

There are no indications as to the plans on foot, but the old rumor is revived that Sir Lomer Gouin is likely to enter the Cabinet. Certainly with the Government holding no Quebec French-Canadian seats, representation is impossible without the co-operation of a wing of the Quebec Liberals.

LINDSAY IS FAIRLY WET

CONSIDERABLE AMOUNT OF LIQUOR GOING INTO SCUGOG TOWN

According to a Lindsay exchange that considerable liquor has been shipped into Lindsay of late is the opinion of the authorities. Every effort is being made to find out those who are engaged in the traffic but so far without success. The law will swoop down with a vengeance on the guilty ones ere long, when a stiff fine of imprisonment will be the result.

Peterborough can tell the same story, with the addition, however, that our authorities are swooping down on the guilty ones and are getting rich.

HUGHES ORDERS STEAMERS FOR AUSTRALIA'S TRADE

London, July 12.—The Times say it learns that before leaving for Australia, Hon. Wm. Hughes, Premier of Australia, contracted with Vickers, Limited, for three large cargo steamers for the Commonwealth Government. The free capacity of the ships is to be 900,000 cubic feet of which 400,000 cubic feet is to be insulated.

DIRIGIBLE NEAR COAST OF IRELAND

WAS REPORTED 360 MILES TO THE WEST EARLY THIS MORNING.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 12.—The British dirigible R-34, on her return flight from the United States, was approximately 360 miles west of the Irish coast at 11 a.m. (Greenwich Meridian time) today, according to a message received by the wireless press.

Will Hold Office Two Years Longer

NO ELECTION FOR DOMINION IT IS ANNOUNCED UNTIL 1921.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, July 12.—The Mail and Empire special from Ottawa says there will be no general election in Canada till 1921. Hon. Frank Cochrane will be appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario next fall, according to the same story.

THIS IS THE MAN!

(By Paterfamilias)

The man who is now threatening to stand between this city and the building of the Hunter street bridge is J. W. Kearns.

The ratepayers of this city, at the public polls voted $260,000 for a high level bridge over the river—one capable of connecting east and west city by street cars, and thus promoting the expansion of a greater Peterborough; and now this man steps in between them and their expressed instructions to their representatives on the Council Board.

This man, in threatening injunction either on his own part or to further the ends of others, arrogates to himself a superior knowledge in bridge building than one of the cleverest engineers in Ontario, Mr. Frank Barber. He says, so to speak, that the work cannot be done within the city's appropriation.

(It is hinted in some quarters that some local legal construction on the situation, ignores the $55,000 in grants toward the bridge as a factor in deciding the amount council is justified in spending to keep within the law so far as possible injunctions are concerned.)

This is the man who evidently intends delaying further progress in the bridge some time. For should Judge Huycke grant his application for injunction proceedings, evidence will have to be taken in Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and that consumes time, not to say expense.

This is the man who, if he goes ahead, will prevent the Russell-Townsend Co., from signing the bridge contract, now in Toronto. For should they do so they will be held a party to the action.

This is the man who stands between Peterborough's small army of unemployed and the work which was to have been offered them next week when the building of the bridge was scheduled for a start.

And who are the others? Of course, in such injunction cases the others are the public. But in this instance a little bird whispers that the others are "We Us & Co." who, report said, a short time ago, were to organize into a contracting firm and bid for the bridge contract. Rumor also declared that Mr. J. [illegible] Bagley was to be secretary or [illegible] for this organization.

HALF AN INCH OF RAIN KILLS FOREST FIRES

Cobalt, July 12.—Heavy rain fell throughout the district of Temiskaming for some hours last night and all immediate danger from bush fires is over, according to reports received here. The official figures show a half inch of rain fell in Haileybury.

FIRST DEATH IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

VERMONT STATE CHANGES ITS METHOD OF EXECUTING CRIMINALS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Windsor, Vt., July 12.—George F. Warner was electrocuted at the State prison here this morning for the murder of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Wiggins, at Andover five years ago. It was the first use of electricity in capital punishment in the State, previous executions having been by hanging. Two shocks of about two thousand volts each were administered, the first being given just after the prisoner had said, "Gentlemen, I am innocent of this crime; I do not know how it happened. Good-bye, all."

ANOTHER HITCH IN THE TREATY

NOW CLAIMED IT MUST BE RATIFIED BY GERMAN STATES.

Ratification of the treaty of peace by the German National Assembly at Weimar may be held not to be sufficient, according to the Petit Parisien. The new German constitution provides that in cases where territory is ceded, the ratification of treaties by states which lose territory is necessary in addition to approval by the Central Government. Consequently independent action by Bavaria, for the Sarre basin, and Prussia for territory restored to Poland, may be required.

It may be said, the newspaper says, that the new constitution had been only partially accepted when the treaty was ratified, but it adds:

"It is imperative to avoid giving German legal experts a pretext for treaty."

LAST CELEBRATION AT COBOURG TOWN

IF ORANGEMEN CANNOT FIND ENOUGH TO EAT THIS TIME

The 8:10 G. T. R. train to Port Hope and an 8:30 special from Lindsay to Cobourg were crowded with several hundred happy celebrators, including Orange lodges, 'Prentice Boys, True Blues, and Vimy Ridge Lodge (women) of Peterborough; also a fair sprinkling of members of the society from Nassau, Downer's Corners, Lakefield, Brownton, Warsaw, Lindsay and intermediate points.

There seemed a lack of old-time enthusiasm this morning, and certainly the crowd which left and went through Peterborough was smaller than heretofore on the 12th of July. This was due, no doubt, to the fact that Cobourg has lost favor with Peterborough as a demonstration point, for the last time this district celebrated there men, women and children could not find enough to eat. They returned to this city real hungry and annoyed, and it is reported that today is the last celebration at Cobourg so far as Peterborough and adjacent points are concerned.

WINNIPEG RATE 23

Winnipeg, July 12.—Winnipeg's tax rate for 1919-20 will be 23 mills on the dollar. The tax rate last year was 20 mills.

The tag day for St. Joseph's Hospital Chatham brought $1,423.

THE NEXT WORLD WAR.

DR. FRANK BOHN, Chautauqua lecturer, is an American who has travelled extensively in Europe to study different races and conditions of men, but he probably is not as familiar with any of those across the Atlantic as with his own people at home. He predicts that the next world's war, if ever there is such another calamity, will be between the white and the colored races, the latter rising up to avenge the wrongs under which they have suffered since the beginning. The colored people, the doctor says, have been badly treated in the past, but now the whites are beginning to realise that the others are a part of the great brotherhood of man and as such are deserving of some consideration.

Dr. Bohn knows. He is familiar, no doubt, with conditions in the Southern States, where the gap between the whites and the blacks is wider today than it ever was, and where that fact presents one of the gravest of all grave American problems. The emancipated negro in a sense is worse off than he was in the days of slavery. No negro was ever lynched in those days, when an able-bodied man of his color would bring at least $1000 at public auction or private sale. The negro then was protected by the property interest of his owner. He was assured of shelter, of food to maintain his strength, and of medical treatment to preserve his health and prolong his working days. He did not vote in the days of slavery, and all other rights of citizenship were denied him, but he is no better off today in this regard.

If the slave was mentally and morally inferior to the whites, emancipation has not elevated him in this respect, kept down as he is under the heel of his former taskmaster. The descendants of the Southern slaves are growing more and more apart from the whites. They hold the latter responsible for the servitude of their ancestors and for their own condition, which today is little if any better. The hatchet with which war has constantly been waged between the different colors has never been nor is it likely to be buried. The whites of the South are living on the edge of a volcano, likely to break out at any time, and are under the constant menace of danger to their lives and property. The United States, great and cosmopolitan as the nation is, has such problems on its hands as confront no other power on earth.

Such a war as Dr. Bohn predicts, however, can never be carried on by a people that lack leadership and organization. But there are other forms of strife than that which, carried on by the trained armies of Europe and America, convulsed the world and filled the earth with graves for the past four years. The brotherhood of man is an ideal, but it is an ideal still far from attainment. The negro is not the only man of color whose mind may be plotting mischief against the Caucasian, and his allies in such a cause are not deficient in leadership and organization which is lacking among the ten million blacks in America. Unfortunately Dr. Bohn may be nearer the truth in his dismal forecast than the self-satisfied white races imagine.

PREACHER AND AUTHOR.

Evangelist Kennedy, who is conducting the revival services in the big tent on Hunter street, is not only a fluent and interesting speaker with a rare command of the English language, but is an accomplished writer as well, dual gifts which are seldom found among the attainments of any one man. Some of Mr. Kennedy's writings have been published in the leading religous periodicals in the United States and in Canada. One of his best is a little volume called "Misunderstood," in which he shows an intimate and sympathetic knowledge of human nature. The book deals with those members of a family or a community who are misunderstood by their associates, the dreamers and the idealists, who may bear the cross without attaining the crown of earthly glory. As in all his works, a vein of religious sentiment runs through this book, and the relation is brought down to the case of the Nazarene, who was the most misunderstod mortal who ever appeared among men.

"Misunderstood," which has run through three editions, attracted the favorable comment of the late Bishop Robert McIntyre of the M. E. Church, the famous American author and orator, who says of it: "'Misunderstood' is a dainty and refreshing volume. There is a deep insight, clear thinking and honied food for time and for eternity. It would make a beautiful gift or a delightful travelling companion."

A FLAW IN THE SYSTEM.

HON. FRANK G. BALE, in his address at the Chautauqua gathering the other night, laid his finger on one of the most glaring and deplorable defects in the educational system of Canada, a defect which, it would appear, is not peculiar to this country, but is noted in the American system as well. The educationists, Mr. Bale said, make no attempt to discover the heaven-born gifts possessed by every pupil, but seem to proceed on the assumption that all are born with equal intellectual endowments. And the supreme and final test is the written examination.

The defect of which Mr. Bale complains has embittered the school career of many a pupil regarded deficient in one department, no matter how brilliant may be his attainments in another. An additional source of trouble, too, is that the teacher who is an expert in one branch of learning is apt to show a lack of sympathy for or to regard as a dunce the boy or girl who is unable to work up the same degree of enthusiasm as himself. Because a pupil is deficient in mathematics or is unable to master the intricacies of some other subject, he is denied promotion. No recognition is made of his attainments or natural gifts in other respects.

In our educational system this defect is eventually remedied, but the remedy is applied too late in the academic career to be of real benefit. When the student reaches the university he is permitted to select a specialty and to drop all other subjects, but this is allowed him only after he has been handicapped by the departments for which he has no gifts and in which, for that reason, he is unable to work up any interest.

The boy who is a mathematical dunce at school, who finds it impossible to master the vagaries of English orthography, or to fix historical dates in his mind, does not always make a dismal failure of life later on, although his teacher may fear and predict such a fate. Some of the greatest mechanical geniuses that the world has ever seen have been regarded as mental defectives in their school life. The records are filled with such examples. Nature may not be lavish of her gifts, but Nature seldom withholds all endowments from any mortal. To discover that hidden talent and to develop it should be the highest aim of all educationists.

In the business world later on it is different. The wise employer of labor looks for the specialist among those on his pay roll, and when he finds the man with the peculiar gift, makes use of him to the advantage of both. The defect which Mr. Bale deplores is being corrected in later day methods. In the technical schools it is the heaven-given talent that is sought out and developed. When the same method is employed in the day schools, results will be more encouraging and there will be less of hardship in the life of many a boy or girl whose teachers fail to understand the plans of the Creator and who may insist upon teaching art and music to pupils whose natural endowments in these cultural regards have been overlooked, but who may possess gifts of as high an order, if such gifts can be discovered and developed.

PRAISE FOR SIR THOMAS.

PROBABLY NO PUBLIC MAN ever retired from office in Canada and received so high a measure of praise from all politicians and newspapers as that which has been accorded Sir Thomas White since he announced his intention of giving up his position as Finance Minister. Of all the Liberal journals that so gracefully acknowledge the value of his services, none are more generous in their tributes than the Toronto Star, which speaks of his work as follows:

"There may be much difference of opinion, and there is, about some of the policies which the retiring Minister adopted, but the country cannot fail to appreciate the fact that he is about the first public man we have had in a place of authority in Federal politics who did not seem to be overawed by the big financiers and the powerful railway interests. He knew these men and their affairs, and when they threw alarming shadows on the wall he knew how it was done, and they knew that he knew. We have mentioned the railway interests, and Sir Thomas White has been accused of favoring the railway and financial interests in his plan for purchasing the C. N. R. and nationalizing the railways. But he disregarded and resisted bigger interests than any he is accused of favoring. He taxed excess profits and swollen incomes, as, without him, might never have been done. He furnished the courage which this policy called for in a country where it has been too much the practice to consult with powerful interests and influences, and interfere with them in no way without their consent and approval. The grave question that arises in connection with his retirement is as to whether he will have a successor either qualified or inclined to exert as strong a hand.

"When he entered the Government Sir Thomas White was a business man and a good deal of a Liberal in his ideas. The holding of office did not make him a Tory. He taxed excess profits and big incomes, he declared himself in favor of public ownership and the nationalization of the railways. He knows how wealth is made, where it comes from and where it goes, and he showed the country new ways of finding revenue where money is—getting it in pounds out of the vaults of the few who own it, rather than in pennies out of the pockets and tills of those who but temporarily have the use of it. He has shown the way. And it should not be lost again."

Left His Religion In The Country

He moved up to the city
When he'd made his little pile.
Built a house and had a garden
Dressed his girls in city style.
He read the city papers
And he ate the city food,
His wife joined half a dozen clubs,
His boy became a dude,
But he left his religion in the country

He took a dab in politics,
The city kind, of course,
He bought a high-power motor
It was faster than a horse,
He had a box at opera and a lot of gilt-edged stock
Built a bank right in the centre of the City's finest block.
But he left his religion in the country.

The church just round the corner
Was of other brand than his,
So he visited the movies
Or spent Sunday at his biz
He knocked the city preachers,
And he laughed at Sunday laws,
While his boys went to the mischief,
And his girls were lost.
Because he left his religion in the country

And when he took his journey
To the place where all men stand,
He walked up to the Golden Gate
As though he owned the land,
"I know you are from the country,"
Said Saint Peter, with a sigh,
"And I'm sorry I must tell you,
This is once you can't get by,
For you've left your religion in the country."

PROFITEERING AND BOLSHEVISM

(By W. J. Hartford.)

Labor unrest—food profiteering—Bolshevism are the three conditions confronting America today and the means of settling this state of affairs that is undermining our progress and menacing the welfare of our industries and our home life is yet to be discovered. One way of arriving at a means of adjusting such conditions is suggested herewith: that is the encouragement of the industrial Welfare idea as applied by the National Cash Register Company at Dayton, Ohio; the Burrough's Adding Machine Company, of Detroit, Mich.; the Ohmer Fare Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio; the Jeffrey Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, Ohio, and the Ford Motor Company, of Detroit.

The writer has just completed an inspection of the Industrial Welfare work in operation at these plants and find the employes, thousands in number, completely satisfied and happy, with no taint of bolshevism and no labor unrest, in each of the above named factories every care and consideration is given to the physical welfare of the employes, who appreciate fully the efforts being made in their behalf to better the workingman's condition and affording them every possible measure of assistance to combat the high cost of living by giving them a fair living wage commensurate with the increased cost of everything at present day prices, as well as supplying them with every known facility to improve their minds from an educational as well as a physical standpoint, and the system of Industrial Welfare adopted by them should be introduced into all large manufacturing where large numbers of employes are at work.

The National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio, is one of the pioneers in this movement, and the excellent condition of health enjoyed by their employes is a fitting testimonial of the efficiency of properly applied welfare work that should be emulated by every large employer of labor. Efficiency can only be attained by clean, sanitary and healthful surroundings and an atmosphere of refinement can easily be created in any industrial stablishment if the effort be made in that direction and properly adminstered. Gymnasiums, swimming pools, shower baths, community dining halls, meeting places, recreation fields, dancing and music, libraries, rest rooms, dental clinics, nurses and doctors and plenty of recreational exercises, as well as lectures on every known subject, motion pictures, and other forms of entertainment, are encouraged, and the employe is made to feel that he is a part and parcel of the institution, the result being that labor unrest is unknown and bolshevism impossible in plants that will adopt the sytem of Industrial Welfare. In many of the large corporations, profit-sharing is adopted, taking the place of bonuses and other forms of recognition of efficiency.

The high cost of food is also considered, and agriculture is encouraged, young boys and girls are allotted portions of land and prizes are awarded to the ones who produce the best results in farming, the product is sold to the families of the employes at a much lower price than in the markets, and the competition among the young farmers to win the prizes stimulate them to harder efforts, the result being lower cost of vegetables.

This system is in successful operation by the National Cash Register Co., of Dayton, Ohio, and has the personal supervision of Mr. John H. Patterson, its president, who has donated the land for that purpose. The young farmers have a regularly organized corporation and the farming is conducted on a business basis, the profits being shared by the boys and girls who operate the farms, thus giving them a financial reason to stimulate their production aside from the pleasure it gives them to produce.

This system is also in operation at the plants of the Jeffrey Manufacturing Co., of Columbus, and the Ford Company at Detroit, and has been found very successful in every instance. It not only keeps the young from evil companions and ways but provides a way for them to earn money in a useful and productive way. In such institutions unrest and bolshevism are unknown and impossible, therefore it should be adopted and encouraged by all employers. Another popular innovation is the suggestions bureau, every employe having the privilege of making any suggestion or complaint in open meeting which is attended by the officials of the corporation and receives their immediate attention and every suggestion is verbally answered on the spot by a responsible officer of the corporation. The high cost of living is also minimized by supplying meals to employes at cost which is appreciated by them, judging by the appearance of the spacious dining halls during the lunch hour. Plenty of light and air is allowed by the modern construction of plants, the entire structures having window space covering the sides of the buildings.

The General Electric Company of Schenectady, N. Y., on June 23rd reduced the working hours from fifty to forty-eight per week, the wages to remain unchanged, the men on an hourly basis were increased 4 per cent. By the readjustment a longer noon-hour recess is made for welfare work, dancing and athletics. Thus will efficiency be gained.

TO-DAY'S STORY

On one occasion, when addressing a city audience, Sir Clifford Sifton pointed out to his hearers their dependence upon the country, not only for the necessaries of life and many of its luxuries, but for their men and women too. He claimed that few men had risen to prominence in public life, in the professions, in commercial life, who were more than three generations removed from the soil. The cities are continuously drawing fresh blood from the country, and were it not for these drafts from the country population, the populations of our cities would "run out," as they say on the farm of a grain that has been sown year after year from the crop of the preceding season. The young men and women reared in farm and village homes form to a large extent the rejuvenating element of urban populations.

A case in point is that of the man whom the lawyers of the Province of Quebec have recently elected Batonnier, that is, chief officer, or president of their Association, which is the highest honor in the gift of the profession. The new Batonnier is the Hon. George G. Foster K.C., member of the Senate of Canada.

He practices his profession in Montreal; in the Senate he represents the district of Alma in the Province of Quebec; but the old family home is in Knowlton, the capital of Brome County, in the south-eastern part of the Province.

Here Mr. Foster was born in 1860, his father being the late Samuel Foster, also a member of the bar, for a number of years Sheriff of the District of Bedford, later the head of one of the district courts, retiring from the Bench to devote himself to the work of extending the railway facilities of the province.

His son, George, received his education at the Knowlton Academy and McGill University, from which he graduated in the Law Faculty in 1881, and was admitted to the Bar in the following year. He is now the head of the Bar Association.

His summer home is at Knowlton. He has always kept in close touch with the people of Brome County. At the outbreak of the late war he realized at once the vital importance of an adequate food supply for Great Britain and France, and he was one of the first to urge the Canadian farmers to increase their crop areas. To encourage this expansion he gave several substantial prizes to the farmers of the Eastern Townships, for the largest crop acreage and for the highest production per acre. These contests had far-reaching effects.

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says we cannot expect absolute perfection in this world and she hates to see her father so angry over missing his train when he missed it by only a minute or two.

It is said that George Washington never went fishing in his life. This may account for his truthfulness.

He slept beneath the shadowy moon.
He loafed beneath the glowing sun;
He lived a life of going to do—
But he died with nothing done.

Tailors and dressmakers should have a kindly feeling toward the serpent which induced Eve to engage in the manufacture of fig leaf garments.

AN INDICATION OF AGE

The ducking and peering which some women do in order to put off wearing bi-focal lenses by continuing to wear their old single vision lenses is as much an indication of age as the bi-focals which they dread.

As a matter of fact some bi-focals are so made that it is almost impossible to detect that they are two vision lenses.

We would be glad to show them to you.

Getting His Status.

"What did Mr. Cummings say to you last night, Clara, when he was trying to button your glove?" queried the anxious mother.

"Why," replied the daughter, "he said that my firm making gloves as hard to button as mine ought to quit the business."

"Well, my dear," continued the a.m., "take my advice and don't waste any more time in that direction."

All Present.

Mr. Isaac Joffski was being married to the girl of his heart, and his friends stood around and admired his manly bearing at the altar.

The ceremony was half-way through when Isaac went pale, and turned away.

"I must be going now," he exclaimed.

"Hush, Ikey," whispered his prospective father-in-law. "You mustn't think of it now."

"Vell, vell," said the old man, "vat the need to bother? It will be all right. All your friendths are there."

TWO FAMOUS STARS HERE NEXT WEEK

KITTY GORDON AND MADGE KENNEDY AT GRAND, MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY.

To keep up the policy that the management of the Grand have established of "nothing but first-class pictures," the patrons will be delighted to hear that two of America's greatest stage and picture stars have been booked for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Kitty Gordon in "Mandarin's Gold," and Madge Kennedy in "A Perfect Lady." Miss Kennedy will be remembered here in this big stage success by Channing Pollack as one of the greatest stars that has ever been seen in Peterborough.

In addition to this double feature program, a special comedy and travelogue will be shown, with suitable music by the Grand orchestra, under the leadership of J. Howarth. Seats for evening performances can be booked in advance and will be held until 8 p.m. before the evening of performance.

Admiral Kolchak.

News comes slowly out of Russia, but what there is of it seems to show that the next Russian name prominent in the thought of the world will be that of Admiral Alexander Vassilievitch Kolchak, head of the Omsk Government. Admiral Kolchak after the abdication of the Tsar, supported the Provisional Government of Prince Lvoff, and was nearly lost when that Government was overthrown by the revolution. Kolchak was then at Sebastopol, where the sailors of the Russian fleet mutinied in response to the eloquence and promises of Kerensky, and the admiral was arrested on his own flagship. Refusing to surrender his sword, he threw it into the sea, and indignantly withdrew to his cabin. A guard was posted outside the door, and the fate of the imprisoned officer became a serious question. The sailor soviet hesitated, but was finally persuaded by the Bolshevist leaders that Kolchak should be executed. The decision was reversed by the personal appeal of Rear Admiral J. H. Glennon of the United States Navy, who was in Russia as one of the members of the Elihu Root embassy, and arrived at Sebastopol just in time to prevent the execution. Kolchak was permitted to return with the American officer to Petrograd, and shortly afterward became the head of the anti-Bolshevist movement when another provisional government was set up at Omsk.

SOME CHICAGO WOMEN WHO CLAIM RIGHT TO SMOKE

But Judge Declares Such a Feminine Habit is a Sign of Moral Degeneracy.

Chicago, July 12.—That blue haze hanging over the city today was not the ordinary I. C. smoke pall. It was the vapor rising from the heated arguments of judges, club women, artists, and society women over the question, "If an Indiana judge in a divorce trial says a man can smoke morning, noon and night—why can't a woman?"

Oh yes, some of that blue smoke haze was the outcome of heavy firing by indignant feminine cigarette smokers, who drew forth Turkish and army favorite brands of the "pills" and just showed "the old women of both sexes," as one modern feminist said, the joys of the cigarette.

Divorce Trial Starts Dispute.

It started this way: In a divorce trial in Noblesville, Ind., Judge Cloe declared a husband may smoke all he desires, regardless of the wishes of his wife. And then the trouble started.

"Why it's an excellent habit cigarette smoking," exclaimed Indiana Gyberson, artist, in her studio at 3 East Ontario street. "It helps my thinking. In painting there are many psychological difficulties. Now a woman painter can't sit down and start embroidering when she's perplexed, can she? So I smoke cigarettes to smooth away the perplexities."

"Same Right as a Man."

"I think a girl has as much right to smoke as a man," said Geraldine Udell, at the Radical book shop. She voiced a sentiment commonly expressed by social workers, wealthy society women and even church club members."

"It makes me sick—but I smoke," confessed Saida Bank, Chicago artist. "Why not? Why shouldn't women smoke? It's a matter of taste. In my set it's not looked down upon. I do it because all the others do."

That women have a right to smoke cigarettes if they want to was the contention of Mrs. W. H. Winslow, president of the Chicago Women's Club. But she said the club had more important things to consider than cigarettes. Neola Northam, a Smith college student, said it was "unladylike."

Judges Condemn It.

"It's a sign of moral degeneracy for women to smoke," declared Judge David M. Brothers in the Circuit Court. "I have tried six thousand divorce cases and usually when wives are accused of cigarette smoking these women are members of the social '400' or social scum, I'd call them."

"No lady will smoke cigarettes," said Judge Sheridan E. Fry of the Court of Domestic Relations. And Judge Hugo Pam gallantly placed the question up to the women.

At the Blackstone and Stratford hotels women are allowed to smoke; also in many Michigan avenue tea shops. But the South Shore Country Club frowns on the habit.

EVANGELIST KENNEDY SPEAKS ON CARD PLAYING AND DANCING

Believes That Such Pastimes Have No Place in the Life of a Christian—May Continue Services Next Week.

Some straight from the shoulder hits were handed out by Evangelist H. D. Kennedy last evening to those church members who, while professing to be Christians nevertheless live after the manner of the world.

"A woman once said to me," said Mr. Kennedy, "that she could take Christ with her to the theatre. I replied to her that she had no business taking Christ with her to the theatre. She should first be satisfied that Christ was taking her there. It is not the business of Christians to take Christ with them but to go only where Christ leads them. It is all right for the world to have the Church in it, but it is ruinous for the church to have the worldly spirit in it."

Condemn Card Playing

Unlike many ministers of today who apply the soft pedal when it comes to questions of dancing, card playing and theatre going as practised by church members, Mr. Kennedy told those present just what he thought of these practices. "I never saw a card playing, dance loving, theatre-going Christian who could lead anyone to Christ and who any of us would call in for spiritual comfort and consolation, were we dying," said Mr. Kennedy, "yet Christians are supposed to be filled with the spirit and to be examples to the world about them of the saving power of Christ. There is no Christian on earth who can continue to be filled with the spirit while making it a practice to attend the theatre or indulge in other worldly amusements."

Mr. Kennedy also talked plainly to those professing Christians who set bad examples to those who have a right to look to them for more consistent conduct. The father who continues to smoke a pipe cannot very well find fault with his boy if he finds him smoking cigarettes. A mother who plays whist and encourages card playing in the home, sometimes on the plea that it will encourage her boy to stay at home, need not be surprised if she finds later that her boy has been looking for bigger game and is found playing among experts, for money. Mr. Kennedy said that at a meeting of some 3,500 gamblers in the United States it was found that 75 per cent of them had learned to play cards in the home. He related the case of a Sunday School teacher who used to encourage her class of 12 boys to visit her home on Saturday evenings to study the Bible. Later, she commenced to amuse them by teaching them to play cards. The final result was that a large percentage of that class turned out to be gamblers to the dismay and remorse of the teacher. "Seven-tenths of all gambling, said Mr. Kennedy, "is done with cards."

Contrast of Characters

Mr. Kennedy based his remarks on the contrasted careers of Abraham and Lot. He showed that Abraham was a man who walked in godly ways while Lot was a believer who walked in the way of the world. Abraham went out from his home and kindred to follow the path God chose for him. Lot chose dwelling in the city of Sodom. Because he lived after the way of the world his children followed his example and he had but little influence with them. When the warning reached him that the city was to be destroyed he endeavored to have his sons-in-law flee with him from it. The Bible record says that "He seemed as one that mocked unto his son-in-law." They refused to accompany him and were destroyed in the judgment of that city.

Lot was spoken of as a just man. A just man is one who lives within the law and whom the law cannot catch. He goes so far and no farther and may be selfish in the extreme. Christians should be more than just, they should be loving and kind and faithful in their service to God.

Mr. Kennedy said that he had as much right to play cards, dance, smoke and go to the theatre as any man but when he asked people what they would think of him as an evangelist if they knew that he indulged in such practices, they invariably told him that they would not have much use for him. "The Bible, he said, "does not establish one standard of Christian conduct for an evangelist and another standard for professing Christians. All are expected live up to the one standard, as set forth in the scriptures. "You cannot," he said, "be a spirit filled Christian and play with the world at the same time." One bit of advice handed out by Mr. Kennedy was that a Protestant boy or girl should never marry a Catholic boy or girl. Such a practice was sure to lead to confusion and ultimate trouble. Marriage is one of the most sacred of relationships and any lack of true unity of religious convictions in a married couple leads to trouble. "Mothers," said Mr. Kennedy, "wake up." When you stand before God in the judgment the first question he asks you may be, 'what did you do with the boys and girls He gave you to lead to Christ.' "

Basing his remarks on the 6th chapter of Galatians where the works of the spirit are contrasted with the works of the flesh, Mr. Kennedy asked if anyone could believe that we could read the Scriptures that the fruits of the spirit are card-playing, dancing, theatre-going and other worldly pleasures. If the lives of such people were fully surrendered to Christ they would not be looking for the harm in things but they would be anxious to do things because of the good in them. Speaking about dancing, Mr. Kennedy said, that the chief harm that lay in it was due to the mingling of the sexes. Men do not like to dance with men or women with women. Very few dancing men care to marry a girl whom they know is a dancer, as they have a feeling that such a girl has been made common by the associations of the dance. Peo-

FANCY PRICES ON LOCAL MARKET

CHICKENS $1.75 EACH, EGGS 50c DOZEN, BUTTER 55c TO 60c LB.

The local market was poor this morning, and at that, offerings were in excess of buying. Citizens were shocked at prices asked, and many preferred dealing at local stores.

For an insignificant chicken $1.75 was asked, and red and black garden raspberries were priced at 30c the box. Butter at 55c to 60c, and eggs at 50c the dozen all but called a strike of buyers.

MINERAL OIL

For Chronic Constipation

By buying this product from us you can get the highest in quality that can be procured at an ESPECIALLY LOW PRICE. There are many thin oils on the market that are not suitable for internal use; other oils have irritating qualities which render them also unsuitable. The one we are selling is guaranteed thick and entirely pure.

It is recognized that a good grade of Mineral Oil is one of the best remedies for CHRONIC CONSTIPATION that is being used. It acts mechanically and does not irritate the intestinal tract, nor does the dose have to be continually increased, as is the case with ordinary purgatives.

It is much better and cheaper than Castor Oil as a laxative for children, since Castor Oil has two effects, the first of which is purgative, and the second or after effect, which is Constipating.

Facts About Alcohol.

Is Closely Related to Starch and Sugar

THIS paper is going to be mighty careful not to teach folks how to make alcoholic drinks for themselves. It does not sympathize with old John Barleycorn, and will offer him no help. But a few interesting things may nevertheless be said on a subject which just now engages much popular attention.

Alcohol is made from two things, starch and sugar, which are much the same thing chemically. In fact, the sweetness that arrives in a fruit when it ripens is due to the conversion of its starch into sugar. The sugar of the sugar maple tree, of the sugar cane and of the sugar beet was originally starch.

Take starch or sugar in any form, add a lot of water, with some ordinary yeast, and fermentation follows. The yeast is composed of minute living plants, which, feeding upon the material, convert it into alcohol and carbonic acid gas. The latter bubbles up and passes off into the air.

When the bubbling has ceased, the process has come to an end, and you have a fluid containing a certain percentage of alcohol. Resort may then be had to distillation for the purpose of separating the alcohol from the fluid. Distillation does not make alcohol; it is the fermentation that does that — as for instance, when whisky is made from corn or other cereal grain.

Whisky can be made from any kind of starchy material—potatoes, for example. In the stilling process the stuff (previously fermented) is subjected to heat, and the resulting vapor (carrying with it the highly volatile alcohol) is condensed by exposure to cold. The product is alcohol mixed with more or less water.

You cannot make pure alcohol in [illegible]. The product of the still contains not only water but also other chemic ingredients, which are removed by refining methods in the industrial laboratory. You have then the "grain alcohol" that you buy from the apothecary—or used to be able to buy—which is about 90 per cent. pure. That is to say, it is 90 per cent. alcohol and 10 per cent. water.

The prohibition law, by the way, is likely to interfere very seriously with the sale of colognes, which are perfumed alcohol. In the manufacture of these agreeable preparations the first step is to place fresh flowers in contact with refined fats, which, having a special affinity for perfumes, absorb the odor of the blossoms. Then the fat is steeped in alcohol, which, possessing an even greater affinity for such odors, takes them up. The result is what we call a cologne.

People have been known to drink cologne in preference to any other alcoholic refreshment. It is a highly esthetic beverage — a bit decadent, one might say, but stimulating enough to be satisfying. Before long, it is likely, cologne will be replaced in the boudoir by dry (appropriate word!) perfumed powders.

In fruit juices the fermentable matter is, of course, sugar. When water and yeast are added, fermentation starts, and alcohol is evolved. The "wines" put up by the old-fashioned housewife were the result of this simple process.

A process has recently been developed for making "grain alcohol" out of sawdust. It is not what is commonly known as "wood alcohol," which is a poison, but stuff chemically indistinguishable from grain distillate. There seems, indeed, to be scarce anything of a vegetable nature out of which alcohol cannot be made.

FOR A GREATER PETERBORO

Here are a few pointers for the public spirited citizen who is so industriously boosting the city to-day:

The enlistment in the overseas forces from Peterborough is the second highest in Canada in proportion to population.

Peterborough is situated in almost exactly the centre of the population of Canada, one-half being east and the other half west of the city.

Peterborough has direct railway connection with all parts of the Dominion and is on the direct all-rail and rail and water routes to the Northwest.

The Trent waterway will this year give water communication with Lake Ontario and in a short time with the Georgian Bay.

Hydro-electric power is delivered to the factories at a rate as cheap as any and cheaper than in almost every other municipality. Actual results show than ten-hour power has been delivered at the rate of $13.44 per h. p. per year.

The net debt of Peterborough is the second lowest per head of population of all the cities of Ontario, the lowest being $11.74 lower than in Peterborough and the highest $423.18 higher.

The taxes collected for municipal purposes is the third lowest of the cities of Ontario, the lowest being 61 cents lower than here and the highest $31.34 higher.

The combined municipal and school rate in Peterborough is the sixth lowest in Ontario, the lowest being 11.85 lower and the highest $33.76 higher.

Educational facilities in Peterborough are unsurpassed.

The summer resorts, easily accessible from Peterborough, are among the most attractive and beautiful in the world.

SOME POSSIBILITIES

A national highway from Holland's Landing, which means Toronto, to Ottawa, by way of Peterborough, thus placing this city on two national highways.

A radial railway to Lake Ontario which will bring to Peterborough a large number of people who have not now railway facilities and will connect the city with the railways running along the front.

An electric railway to the north, connecting Peterborough with the territory to the north and giving quick communication with the summer resorts.

Upon the completion of the Canada Central Railway, to be constructed from Montreal to the Georgian Bay, north of Stoney Lake, the continuance of the electric railway to connect with it will place Peterborough on another great railway.

Naval Medals For Canadians Ready

NEW BADGE OF ALL WHO SERVED IN IMPERIAL SERVICE.

Ottawa, July 12.—Canadians who served in the Imperial Naval Service during the war will receive a war badge, provided that they fulfil the conditions for the award of this badge to members of the Canadian Naval Service. The Department of the Naval Service announces that new regulations have been issued authorizing the issue of Class A Naval War Badge to ex-members of the Imperial Navy who were residents of Canada prior to August 4, 1914. The conditions are that officers and men must have served at sea in any part of the world or any battle front, or on shore in the British Isles, during the war, and for reasons other than old age, wounds or physical infirmity, have been honorably retired or discharged. They must not be entitled to receive a war badge from the Imperial Government.

The new badge is of white metal, and bears the words: "Canada" and "scervices rendered." It is issued through the secretary of the Naval Department at Ottawa, and will be ready for issue shortly.

Small Locomotives.

A Sheffield, England, firm has converted its war airplane factory into a plant for the manufacture of small scale model locomotives and steam engines, which were formerly imported into Great Britain from Germany to the extent of over $4,000,000 annually.

WEAK MOTHERS REGAIN HEALTH

No mother should allow nervous weakness to get the upper hand of her. If she does worry will mar her work in the home and torment her in body and mind. Day after day spent amid the same surroundings is enough to cause fretfulness and depression. But there are other causes as every mother knows, that end to make her nerves run down. A change would benefit her jaded system, and rest might improve her blood so as to give the nerves a better tone. But rest and change are often impossible, and it is then that all worn out women should take a short treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which make new blood, rich with the elements on which the nerves thrive. In this way these pills restore regular health, increased energy new ambition and steady nerve. There is a lesson for other women in the case of Mrs. Harry P. Snider, Wilton, Ont., who says:—"Five years ago my twin babies were born, and I was left very weak and very miserable, hardly fit to do anything. The doctor gave me medicine, but it did not help me. Then I tried another doctor, but with no better results. One day I went home to my mother, telling her how miserable I felt, and that the doctor's medicine had not done me any good. Mother asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as I was glad to try anything that might help me, I got three boxes when I went back home. By the time these were used there was no doubt they were helping me, and I got three more boxes. But I did not need them all, for by the time the fifth box was used, I was entirely cured, and never felt better in my life. Now when I hear people talk about feeling weak or miserable, I always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and tell what they did for me, and in similar cases I shall continue to recommend them."

At the first sign that the blood is out of order take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and note the speedy improvement they make in the appetite, health and spirits. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SOUTH CITY BATHING OPENED TODAY; T. A. COOPER IN CHARGE

Expense Incurred so Far $1,467.90—Committee's Appropriation $1,500---A Boon For South City.

The public bathing house at the end of Lake street, was opened this morning with Comrade T. A. Cooper, a member of the G. W. V. A., in charge.

This fills a crying need for south city and days this week, before the bathing house was finished, not less than 150 at a given time have been bathing at this sport.

This bathing house has been built under the supervision of a special bathing house committee of the City Council, with Ald. McIntyre as chairman.

The Cost

The Committee's appropriation for a bathing spot, dressing house and caretaker was $1500. The cost incurred will be as follows:

Huffman's contract	$1135.00
Steps	15.40
Extras (seats, screens and and racks	29.50
Levelling ground	40.00
Closets	98.00
Caretaker	140.00
Architect	10.00
	$1467.90

Our of the appropriation of $1500 the committee have spent $30 for a guard fence at the bathing spot in West Nichols Park (Inverlea), but this amount should come out of some other fund.

The committee have decided to furnish a spring plank at the Lake street bathing place and also a life buoy. They will also ask that the Trent Canal dredge be permitted to dump sand now being dredged from the lake into holes at the new bathing spot and thus create a nice level beach.

$70 a Month

Ald. Taylor moved, second by Ald. Gainey, that T. R. Cooper be pointed caretaker of the new bathing house at the end of Lake street for two months, or longer if necessary, his salary to be $70 a month. Also that a life buoy be purchased and that the matter of rules governing the use of this bathing house be drawn up by Chairman Ald. McIntyre and the Caretaker.—Carried.

Committee decided that a fee of 10c for use of the lockers be charged. A method for assuring return of the keys from a certain class of people judged careless in such matters will be to charge a quarter for a locker and give back 15c when the key is returned.

Mr. Cooper had charge of West Nicholls Park last summer and gave unqualified satisfaction. It is understood that he can't very well look after things inside the bathing house and be responsible for accidents. Also that the school little ones will be in care of the Playgrounds Supervisor when bathing.

Rival Noises.

The old pensioner who blew the bellows for the organ had a most exasperating failing, says the Detroit Free Press. Inspite of frequent admonitions, he would continue blowing after the music had stopped, thereby producing most undesirable sounds.

One day the organist could stand it no longer. The congregation had been set tittering by the old man's forgetfulness, and during the sermon the organist seized the opportunity to write him a note on the matter and handed it to a choir boy to deliver.

Misunderstanding the whispered directions the lad handed the note straight up to the vicar, who astoundedly read the following:

"Will you stop when I tell you to? People come here to listen to my music, not to your horrible noise."

Dodds: "It's too bad about poor old Jackson and his girl. Neither of them is good enough for the other."

Nodds: "What on earth makes you say that?"

Dodds: "Well, you see, I've been talking the matter over with both families."

Maxwell: advanced by fine engineering

FIVE decided improvements have been made in the Maxwell. One makes it look better. Another makes the electrical unit far more efficient. A third makes the engine run sweeter, steadier, and gives it advanced economy. A fourth adds a comfort in seating. A fifth produces increased durability in the top.

You get a Maxwell now with the famous Hot Spot and Ram's-horn and you find a rare delight in more power and more mileage at the old-time cost.

But it isn't a new model Maxwell. For this car is merely the chassis of five years ago with all the advances made in fine engineering.

This is the original chassis Model of which 300,000 have been built to date--300,000 all alike basically, but each one better than the previous one.

Thus you get a sound, safe, extremely reliable car, refined to a degree, and at the same time you get the new improvements. The price is $1395 f.o.b. Windsor.

TEST CASE FOR PRIVY COUNCIL

MANITOBA WILL NOT RECOGNIZE THE MENNONITE INSTITUTIONS AS SCHOOLS.

Winnipeg, July 12.—The Mennonite school case, which is to decide whether Mennonites will be allowed to retain their present system of education, including the teaching of German, is to be taken to the Privy Council of the House of Lords.

The test case will begin next Wednesday morning. Both sides have collected a mass of evidence, and no matter what the decision of the local court is, the question will be taken to the final court of appeal of the British Empire.

The Crown will present evidence to show that in Menonite schools the only books in use are a Lutheran Bible, printed in German, and some patent medicine almanacs in the same language.

There are nine cases to come up for hearing Wednesday, each being a charge against a parent for failing to send his children to school. The province takes the ground that the institutions at which certain Mennonite children are taught do not come under classification of schools, according to the Act.

WILL PROSECUTE THE IMPORTERS

TEST CASES TO BE TAKEN IF PEACE CELEBRATION IS WET EVENT.

Toronto, July 12.—If any attempt is made to import liquor into the province we shall certainly prosecute to test the matter."

This was the matter given yesterday by J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Ontario License board, when he was informed that with Saturday, July 19, set apart as the day for the celebration of peace many people were already contemplating getting stocks of liquor from Montreal and elsewhere.

The bone dry order-in-council is popularly supposed, following the action of the senate to expire "when peace is declared." This phase of the situation has infused considerable hope in those who are anxious to return to their old whiskey love and thus flaunt the provisions of the Ontario Temperance act. They saw visions of the old days when they would be able to once more "carry a drop on their hip" or in other ways. Are these hopes now to be dashed? According to Mr. Flavelle they certainly will be and, he is the man in authority.

"Peace" is Elastic

The term "peace" is a very elastic one these days. It is true Germany has ratified the treaty, but there are such other pebbles on the war beach as Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria, who have yet to sign up. Thus while there may be peace on paper with the Teutons the other nations referred to will likely be in the way for some time before a general peace can be proclaimed.

Will the people of Ontario, or the whiskey section thereof, therefore run any risk in sending out of the province for their favorite brands? Wait and see.

PRINTERS CAUSE STIR IN LABOR

WILL NOT SIT IN COUNCIL THAT FAVORS BIG UNION.

Saskatoon, Sask., July 12.—The Typographical Union of Saskatoon caused a stir in the ranks of the Trades and Labor Council when at the meeting of the Council a letter was read from the typos demanding that the officials state clearly their stand with regard to the One Big Union. The letter further stated that the members of the union who were recently elected to office on the Council would be forbidden to occupy their positions if the Council favored the One Big Union scheme. The matter caused considerable discussion, the officials absolutely refused to make any statement. The installation of officers had to be postponed owing to the action of the Typographical Union.

NO BREAD FOR TORONTO

There are grave possibilities that on Monday morning Torontonians will be without bread for two reasons; firstly because of the teamsters' strike which will embarrass transportation of bread from outside sources and secondly because of the strike in Toronto if called. Thomas Watt, business manager for the Bread Drivers' Union, has done everything possible to avert trouble but is not very hopeful.

AMERICANS AID THE DRY FORCES

ARRIVE IN LONDON TO HELP ON THE PROHIBITION MOVEMENT.

London, July 12.—American prohibition workers have arrived in London. The vanguard is led by William E. Johnson, who says he first made Oklahoma dry, then Kansas, and afterwards largely the United States.

In London, Ont.

Professor J. H. Bowman, one of the leaders of the temperance movement in London, announced that the "drys' of the city are well supplied with money and thoroughly organized, are preparing for the campaign to precede the prohibition referendum.

Their confident expectation is that John Barleycorn is to be given a permanent quietus.

It is proposed here to develop an organization which will make possible a personal canvass of every voter in the city. Every man will be asked to state his position, and a definite record of those who at present favor a relaxation of the Ontario Temperance Act will be obtained.

ALBERTA STILL LOOKS FOR RAIN

EVEN IF IT COMES NOW YEAR'S CROP IS LOST.

Winnipeg, July 12. — A telegram received at noon from Calgary to the Canadian Council of Agriculture in session here states that no rain is yet in sight. This means that the general situation, bad enough at the beginning of the week, is more serious now in Southern Alberta and Southwestern Saskatchewan. Even if rain comes at once the grain crop cannot be saved. If it does not come soon the feed situation will be as grave as the grain situation is now. As matters stand at present hundreds of thousands of cattle are without grass for present feed, and without prospect of dry feed for the winter.

Bolshevists are Busy in Montreal

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, July 12. — Bolshevik agents are at work in this city and through the medium of the industrial workers of the world are carrying on a campaign to gain support among the returned soldiers. The I. W. W.'s have formed an industrial council of affiliated organizations acting on the principles of radical Socialism, and are endeavoring to secure the allegiance of all leagues which may be formed by war veterans.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, billious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

The price of ice has been raised in London.

PORTLAND MAN HAS GAINED 18 POUNDS

A. M. ERSKINE WAS RELIEVED OF RHEUMATISM—OTHER TREATMENTS HAD FAILED

"I have not only been completely relieved of a bad case of rheumatism by taking the Tanlac treatment, but have also gained eighteen pounds in weight, so you may know by that, what I think of the medicine," said A. M. Erskine, of 6130 84th street, Southeast Portland, Ore., to a Tanlac representative recently. Mr. Erskine is employed by the Northwest Steel and Shipbuilding Co.

"I began to suffer with rheumatism about ten months ago," continued Mr. Erskine, "I was in Vancouver at the time, helping to build the Standerfer Shipbuilding Plant, and I first noticed it in my left knee. The pain felt more like neuralgia than anything else, but it kept getting worse all the time and finally shifted from my knee to my hip, and at times I would have it in my back and in the muscles of my leg and then in the muscles of the calf of my leg. That part of my leg seemed to be troubled the most and the muscles just felt all the time like the skin had been torn and like a hot mustard plaster had been put on the spot. At times, I also suffered with sharp, shooting pains that would run up and down my leg and I just couldn't walk any distance without my leg giving out entirely. When this would happen I would just have to stop and rest and sometimes the pain would be so awfully bad it looked like it would cut off my breath. Sometimes about the only way I could get any rest at night would be to use hot applications and I suffered such agony for eight months and got in such bad shape that I fell off in weight from 145 to 130 pounds and, while I kept at work I was certainly in a bad way and would feel all fagged out when I would get home in the evenings. I took different treatments and medicines but I might just as well have taken so much drinking water for all the relief I got.

"I had been reading so much about Tanlac and what it was doing for others, that I decided to try it and I hadn't been taking the Tanlac treatment long until I commenced to feel beter, so I kept it up and the treatment relieved me of my rheumatism entirely. I not only got rid of the rheumatism but got back all the weight I had lost and never have that wornout, draggy feeling that used to trouble me. I am certainly glad to give this statement for the sake of others that are suffering with rhematism, because I know what Tanlac had done in my case."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in field by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

THE EAST AND WEST BROUGHT CLOSER TOGETHER.

Western Canada and the Pacific Coast have now been brought within much quicker reach of the East by "The Trans-Canada Limited," the new popular all-sleeping-car train operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway from Toronto and Montreal to Vancouver. It makes the fastest time betwen terminals of any transcontinental train in America. Leaving Toronto at 7:15 p.m. daily, Fort William is reached in 26 hours, Winnipeg in 39, Regina in 50, Calgary in 64, and Vancouver in 90. By this means a business day is saved—a great convenience to the large number of business men who travel between Eastern and Western Canada. Leaving Toronto on the evening of Monday, for instance, it is possible to spend a full business day in Winnipeg and be back in Toronto by Friday afternoon. Tourists to the famous resorts of the Canadian Pacific at Banff, Lake Louise, Glacier, Vancouver and Victoria will also find this train particularly convenient. It consists of standard sleeping cars, dining car, and compartment observation car, and sleeping car passengers only are carried.

Further particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

U.S. Congress is expected to repeal taxes on soft drinks, ice cream, moving pictures and other minor luxuries.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

(In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general. All phases of store management—buying, accounting, advertising and retail salesmanship—will be dealt with, not theoretically, but by descriptions of methods actually in use by successful merchants.)

WHAT SALARY SHOULD MERCHANT PAY HIMSELF?

Should a retail merchant pay himself a salary, and, if so, on what basis?

The answers to this question which was recently put to fourteen representative retailers, indicate a great diversity of opinion on this subject among store proprietors.

They indicate, too, a diversity of opinion as to what constitutes profit and what constitutes expense in the matter of payments to the proprietor. Nor do the answers show any two of the fourteen merchants in complete agreement on all of the points brought up by an analysis of their replies.

Nine of them, however, definitely state their opinion that the proprietor should draw a fixed salary. One merchant states that he "figures on" one, but actually draws in varying amounts.

Four of the proprietors say they regard their salaries and their profits as two distinct and independent things.

Some feel that the surplus over the proprietor's salary (which they determine on various grounds) should be regarded as investment profit. Another turns the process around, holding that the merchant should first invest, or reinvest, that portion of his net profits as he deems wise, and that the surplus over this should be his salary.

Several retailers think a merchant is worth as much salary to himself as he could earn from some one else. Other opinions are: That he is worth more to himself than to another; that he should draw less than he could earn outside, in fact, as little as he can live on, as a regular salary; and that he is worth what it would cost him to hire some one to take his place.

Others think his salary should be based on the gross business the store does; on the net earning; or on the earnings modified by the style in which he is accustomed to live.

Here is the substance of some of the individual replies:

E. L. Gardiner, president E. L. Gardiner Company, Midland, Mich.—"The merchant whose business has grown beyond his personal touch is worth not a cent more than his associates who are responsible for profits and losses. This refers to salary, not profits."

Tom W. MacDonald, Denver, Colo., men's wear.—"On the average a merchant should draw as salary five per cent. of his gross business. He should live on a scale that is worthy of his business."

A. C. Huff, Bethlehem, Pa., music store.—"A young man should allow himself just enough salary to keep up a good appearance and maintain respect. An older man, enjoying the fruits of his past labor, need not limit himself to a fixed salary."

C. J. Veigel, Philadelphia, druggist.—"He should draw as large a salary as he could earn working for some one else. The first thing is to secure a livelihood. Anything over that is simply earnings on investment."

Frank C. Kenyon, Philadelphia, hardware. "He should pay himself a salary commensurate with his ability and what he should earn in the outside world."

W. E. Thornton, Des Moines, victualer.—"His salary should be sufficient only to cover his bare expenses, the untouched portion of his earnings from trade being left for investments."

J. L. Mines, president American Home Furnishers, Philadelphia.—"If he is worth $40 a week working for others, he is worth $50 a week to himself. This, however, involves working harder than he would for others."

William J. Holland, Chicago, restaurant.—"No merchant should fail to charge himself a fixed amount as salary in proportion to the volume of his business and the scale on which he is accustomed to live."

William T. Bryan, Washington, shoe retailer.—"He should pay himself sufficient to live on. Possibly 20 per cent. of his net earnings, if they are large, would be sufficient to live on. The balance should be invested."

Charles Pomerantz, Philadelphia, delicatessen. "He should pay himself as much as he could earn from some one else."

J. A. Porter, St. Louis, grocer.—"He should draw a fixed salary and at the end of the year use the surplus for reinvestment or whatever purpose he sees fit."

C. Richard Watson, general manager J. B. Shannon Hardware Company, Philadelphia.—"His salary should be based on what he could earn from some one else on the volume of his business and its prosperity. Indiscriminate with-drawals of cash tend to cripple a store's resources."

Ellwood Chapman, manager Stephen F. Whitman & Son's Retail store, Philadelphia. "The old-fashioned plan is the best. The merchant should base his salary on what he made last year, after subtracting for reinvestments and a reasonable emergency margin."

Marshall & Bush, New York, haberdashers. — "If a merchant were not giving his own time to his business he would have to hire some one to take his place. Thus he should pay himself the salary he would have to pay to an efficient substitute."

ALROTH'S "FIVE POINTS" OF WINDOW TRIMMING

Carl W. Alroth, of the Union Company, Columbus, O., is said to have won more prizes for competitive window displays than any other man in the world.

"There are five distinct points," he said recently, "which must be emphasized in trimming a window that will sell goods: Artistry, originality, advertising value, display and selling interest.

"These five must be combined in all successful displays. One must predominate. All should be equalized in order to secure a well-balanced window—one that will really sell goods.

"From everyday experience I have kept tab on the results of display and I have had the greatest degree of success from clean, well-trimmed, fairly 'stocky' windows—not crowded, but high class, with well-balanced color schemes that are attractive and catch the eye. Always include a catchy show card to attract attention and a good strong color contrast to show off the merchandise, dark against light and vice versa.

"In showing an advertised line of merchandise it is always well to display the advertising, for this costs the manufacturer a lot of money and took brains to produce. Show this in an artistic, well-balanced manner, not trying to see how much of it can be used, but rather how it can be utilized in an educational way in order to teach the public what the goods are and give them an adequate idea of their intrinsic merit.

"It should also be remembered that the decoration of windows is an art and should have the attention of an artist. A really high-grade window trimmer can produce more customers by dressing real selling window displays, can create more pleasurable comment about the store than any other man in the establishment, for the displays of today are one of the main factors in building up a successful store.

"High-class windows reflect a corresponding interior, and unclean, poorly decorated windows give the public a corresponding impression of the inside of the store. Hence a display should never be allowed to get soiled or stale, no matter how good it is. Pull it out and build it over again, if necessary, and in the meantime put something else on view so as to keep the space constantly interesting to the public."

SPECIALIST SAID HE MUST OPERATE

She Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES" Instead, And Is Now in Perfect Health.

MME. F. GAREAU

153 Papineau Ave., Montreal.

"For three years, I suffered great pain in the lower part of my body, with swelling or bloating. I saw a specialist, who carefully examined me and gave me several tonics to take, which did not help me. Then he told me I must undergo an operation. This, I refused to permit.

I heard about 'Fruit-a-tives' and the wonderful results it was giving because this medicine is made from fruit juices, so decided to try it.

The first box gave great relief; and I continued the treatment, taking six boxes more. Now, my health is excellent — I am free of pain and swelling and I give 'Fruit-a-tives' my warmest thanks".

One of the earliest [illegible] in England was called "Noah's Flood," and I recently came [illegible] an interesting [illegible] from an old manuscript. Noah and his wife were [illegible] the principal players and got the largest salary. In the [illegible] Trinity House Books there is a record of the fees paid to actors in this play, from which I extract the following:

"Item payd to Nicholas Helpby for wrytg the play, 5d.; Item payd to Noye and his wyff, 18d.; Item payd for drink to Noe, 2d."

That was early in the fifteenth century. In 1447 the salary of Robert Brown, who represented God, was sixpence, but this was increased in 1487 to tenpence. In 1469 the wages of Noah and his wife went up to twenty-one pence; in 1470 to twenty-three pence. In 1520 Noah was paid two shillings and his wife eighteen pence. But the original sevenpence paid to the playwright covered all rights—London, provincial, American, colonial, amateur and cinema.

Cienfuegos.

Cienfuegos is the second city in size in Cuba, having a population of about 48,000, whereas the inhabitants of the municipal district number more than 98,000. It is situated on one of the best land-locked harbors in the world, with a coast line of 45 miles.

The River Rhone.

French plans for making the Rhone river navigable from Switzerland to Marseilles contemplate the use of locks, from which could be produced hydro-electric power that would largely pay for the investment.

Savage Australia.

It is estimated that there are nearly 20,000 aboriginal Australians living in a wild [illegible] areas of that continent.

Animals That Swim.

Nearly all animals are said to be better swimmers than man, and to take to the water naturally. The rhinoceros and hippopotamus are wonderful swimmers and divers, while the Indian elephant crosses great rivers with heavy loads. The elk keeps its head above water and crosses directly from bank to bank to avoid turning. The reindeer, on the other hand, turns as often as it likes, keeping its head only a little above the surface. But of all swimmers, of all climes, the best, though not the swiftest, is the polar bear, which passes half its time in the water, swimming and diving.

FOLLY OF YOUTH FINDS HIM OUT AFTER MANY LONG YEARS

Early Life of Senator New Laid Bare by Crime Committed by His Illegitimate Son in California.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 12. — Harry S. New has been a figure in public life in Indiana for twenty-five years. All that time he carried with him a secret of his youth. When he was a candidate for U. S. senator four years ago political opponents tried to make capital of rumors of an early scandal, but Indiana voters refused to believe, and conferred on New the highest honor in their power—election to the U. S. senate.

Homicide—the result of another ill advised love affair—was necessary to prove to Indiana the truth of the stories of the illicit love story of thirty years ago. Indiana now believes that the younger Harry S. New, now being held in Los Angeles, Cal., for the murder of his sweetheart, Freda Lesser, is the illegitimate son of Senator New. Even now Indiana has little comment to make.

Friends Stand by New.

New's friends are standing by him. They say he has not shirked and will not shirk his duty.

"He has done all he can in the past for his son and will do so in the future, too,' they say.

It was during his days as a "cub" reporter on the old Indianapolis Journal, of which he later became the proprietor, that New met Mrs. Lulu Burger, mother of the man held for murder. She was Miss Lilly May Scudder then, and had come to Indianapolis from her father's farm, a pretty girl, scarcely sixteen. The young reporter fell in love with her, a case of love at first sight. They decided to live together.

There may have been some talk of marriage, but despite Mrs. Burger's assertion that they went through a marriage ceremony, life-long friends of New declare that the union was never legalized. No papers bearing out Mrs. Burger's statement have been found here.

Two Children Born.

The young couple lived together several years. On March 12, 1888, Harry S., Jr., was born, and three years later another son, but before the second child was born New had met Miss Catherine McLean, an actress, had proposed to her and been accepted. They were united in marriage in 1891.

A year after New's marriage Miss Scudder instituted proceedings against him. The case was tried before a justice of the peace and New settled a sum of some $8000 or $9000 on the young woman, acknowledging the fathership of her two sons.

The younger son died a year later when he fell down a stone stairway in his mother's yard.

Premonition of Death.

Since the marriage New has lived an exemplary life. "He has tried to atone for the one mistake in his life," a former business associate said. "New desired to give his son an education, but the boy's mother resisted. She said she had a premonition that the boy would die young.

"'Something tells me that he will not live long, and I don't want to have him waste the few years of his life in school,' she told her friends. And after a year or so at Culver Military College young Harry went west, where he became a cowboy and expert horseman.

Then he returned to Indianapolis and worked in a restaurant for a while. He served with the National Guard at the border in 1916, receiving an honorable discharge because of physical defects. After working as an elevator starter in an office building here he went to California with his mother.

Called Spy's Daughter.

During her visit to her sister, Miss Martha Scudder, who lives here, last week, Mrs. Burger told about the love affair between the young man and the girl he shot. Mrs. Burger said she had tried in vain to separate the two. Mrs. Burger was married three times, but divorced all of her husbands.

RED HOT JULY DAYS HARD ON THE BABY

July—the month of oppressive heat: red hot days and sweltering nights, is extremely hard on little ones. Diarrhoea, dysentry, colic and cholera infantum carry off thousands of precious little lives every summer. The mother must be constantly on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they come on suddenly to fight them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during the hot summer as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach, and an occasional dose given to the well child will prevent summer complaint, or if the trouble does come suddenly will banish it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cts. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Distinction.

No one at this date would want to labor the point as to the possibility or impossibility of the German viewpoint, but some instances, as they arise, are worth recording. A short time ago, declared a special correspondent of the London Times, a case came before a military tribunal of the army of occupation in which a German was charged with breaking one of the regulations. The solicitor for the German calmly arose and announced that the military authorities had no right to submit German civilians to trial by military law. "Why?" exclaimed a member of the tribunal. "Had not the Germans military tribunals in Belgium and France?" "Yes," agreed the German. "That is true, but then we were dealing with conquered countries in conquered territories, and you are here only as the outcome of the armistice."

Strange Creatures at South Pole

A CORRESPONDENT of the London Times calls attention to the strange set of birds and beasts to be found on the islands and polar continent of the Antarctic zone. On Macquarie Island the temperature is about 40 degrees and blizzards are a common occurrence in the short summer. Yet, according to this writer, mammals and birds come up from the sea to rest and breed on the barren rocks:

"First, there are several kinds of earless seals, the members of their tribe most changed from the terrestrial ancestor, all with hind limbs permanently fixed backward and serving with the tail as a rudder. These most often come ashore by breaking a hole through the icefloes that fringe the shores, a door of return that they have to keep open from the frost. They have been seen furiously biting round the edges, crimsoning the water with their blood, and one of the Antarctic expeditions came on a belated victim dead, frozen head downward in its final struggle to return. Notable among the seals are the spotted sea leopards, the only formidable carnivores of the region and the chief enemies of the penguins. The sea elephants are true seals, and the small females do not differ much in appearance from the seals of northern waters, but the gigantic males are conspicuous because of the inflation of the nasal region into a pendulous, trunklike proboscis.

"The males come ashore first, landing on a smooth beach, where they await the arrival of the females, each striving to collect and to defend against aggression the largest possible harem. The sea bears, or fur seals, under whose coat of coarse long hair lies the soft fur that is their disastrous possession, are examples of the eared seals. In these the hind legs are turned forward and are used in floundering along the ground in a series of awkward leaps.

"Among the birds first place must be given to the penguins, surely the oddest and most engaging of feathered creatures. The gigantic emperor, the gorgeous king and royal, the gentoo, said to be the only penguin palatable even to a hungry whaler, and a number of smaller species are all equally attractive by reason of the sleek beauty of their vividly patterned plumage, by their quaint gait and still more by their power of expressing the familiar human emotions of anger, fear, affection, curiosity, anxiety, solicitude, spite, envy and surprise.

"Penguins have given up the struggle with the southern gales, and turning their wings into fin-shaped flippers use them only in swimming and in gestures. The gulls, skuas, cormorants, petrels and albatrosses, of which the remaining bird population is composed, are superb in the air, but use their long, and narrow wings almost entirely as floats, holding them rigidly like the wings of a monoplane."

These birds have conquered the weather to the extent not only of surviving themselves, but of rearing their young under almost impossible conditions. Two characteristics, however, make them the victims of man. They are fearless to the extent of letting human beings come close to them, examine their nests and pass through their rookeries. For their protection against the cold they are equipped with a thick coating of blubber, from which valuable oil can be made. The result is that—

"everywhere their numbers are being reduced, and in many regions they are being completely destroyed.

"Drastic international regulation is required not only to preserve for future generations these remarkable branches of the tree of life, but even if the only object be to maintain a commercial asset. The preservation of animal and plant life in every part of the world might well be one of the [illegible] of the new league of nations, but an immediate and useful step is well within the range of possibility. In a recent address to the Zoological Society of London, Sir Douglas Mawson, the well-known Antarctic explorer, said that Macquarie Island, a dependency of Tasmania, still abounds in most types of subantarctic life, and is an ideal spot to be retained as a national reserve for the propagation of sea elephants and penguins. It lies some 900 miles southeast from Hobart and is about twenty miles long by three wide, but is still an attraction to the seals and birds which flock to it from the millions of square miles of ocean in which it lies.

"But even for Macquarie protection is urgent. Within five years after the discovery of the island the fur seal was almost exterminated, the king penguins have dwindled to a single rookery, and as a result of the leasing of the island to exploiters at a nominal rent in the years before the war nearly 300,000 royal penguins and 600 sea elephants were killed annually for their blubber. Penguins are now nominally protected, but as their eggs are good to eat the fact that the adults are no longer boiled down is doing little to save the birds. The Commonwealth Government would be doing a service to the world were it to take up this matter at once."

Garage as Storehouse.

One of the largest Red Cross storehouses in Paris was formerly a storage garage. When the Red Cross took possession of the building it called on the owners of cars to remove their property. Forty per cent. of the owners had been killed in the war.

Toronto Will Not Get Henley Regatta

WILL BE HELD IN THE OLD CANAL COURSE AT ST. CATHARINES.

The Regatta Committee of the Canadian Henley, after a visit to St. Catharines, have decided to hold the regatta on the old course on the canal at Port Dalhousie on the dates announced, July 25 and 26.

There was some strong talk of using a course laid in the ship canal between Ashbridge's Bay and Toronto Bay, but the St. Catharines authorities put up such an emphatic protest that the C.A.A.O. officers changed their minds. The old course has been swept of weeds, re-buoyed, and the grand stand repaired.

WINCHESTER WINS

London, July 12.—Morris Blood won the Albert match at Bisley yesterday for the fourth time. The Ashburton shield for public school teams, 200 and 500 yards, was won by Winchester, who led all through. This was Winchester's sixth win. Charterhouse was a point behind.

TRIMMING OF HIS WRESTLING LIFE

ADMINISTERED TO SHIMKUS BY JEAN HERTUBISE LAST NIGHT.

Jean Hertubise, Peterborough's champion wrestler of whom local sports are pardonally proud, followed Joe Shimkus of Belleville and last night again won out in a wrestling bout, administering to Shimkus, it is claimed the trimming of his life.

Shimkus follows the big Beacon Shows, and at each town where they exhibit he challenges any comer to a wrestling bout for $10. At Peterborough Shimkus ran up aginst a snag in Hertubise, against whom he proved no match.

Hertubise's exploit in Belleville won the hearts of Belleville sports, whose unqualified disfavor for some reason or other Shimkus has earned.

3 Football Teams In Connaught Final

BRITISH COLUMBIA AND ALBERTA ASSOCIATIONS IN AFFILIATION.

Craig Campbell, of Montreal, president of the Dominion Football Association, has wired Secretary Ed. Spencer, of Toronto that both the British Columbia and Alberta Football Associations had been admitted to affiliation and suggested that the finals of the Connaught Cup Serier, representative of the Dominion championship, at Montreal on Aug. 11, be between three teams. He would have British Columbia and Alberta meet in an elimination game. New Ontario meet Manitoba, and Ontario meet Quebec, and the winning teams go east to Montreal, which he believes would be satisfactory to all, as it would save unnecessary travel for some of the teams. Another suggestion at that B. C. and Alberta play off; Winnipeg and New Ontario also declare a winner and the two successful teams meet representatives of Ontario and Quebec in two semi-finals and a final at Montreal. Which suggestion will be adopted will not be known until the Western Provinces have been consulted.

BELLEVILLE AT LINDSAY ON WED.

In the game at Belleville the Greys (Lindsay) lost out by a score of 5 to 0, but they have every hope of reversing the story.

The game will be a twilight one, the house of the commencement being 6.15 o'clock.

It is expected that Alex. K. of Peterboro, will handle the game.

Peterboro Bowlers Bring Home Spoils

SUCCESSFUL IN ANNUAL TOURNAMENT AT COBOURG THIS WEEK.

The rinks of Peterborough bowlers went to Cobourg on Wednesday last and took part in their annual tournament, which was in every way a splendid success.

Jack Mayneord's rink for the second year in succession brought home some of the spoils, being successful in winning their way to the finals of the primary competition by defeating Virmilyea of Belleville, Pratt of Peterborough, Davidson of Cobourg and Rosevear of Port Hope, before being defeated by Whattam of Oshawa.

The personnel of the successful rink was P. Barclay, Dr. J. A. Allen, J. A. McKone and J. W. Mayneord, skip. The prizes were very nice mantle clocks.

Quite A Surprise In Tennis Tourney

BENNETT DEFEATS HOLMES IN DOUBLES OF SEMI-FINAL.

A distinct surprise in the Canadian Tennis Tournament developed yesterday at the Toronto Tennis Club courts when Holmes and Bennett, the Winnipeg players, downed Fred and Frank Anderson, of New York, in the men's open doubles. The Anderson's, both of whom are in the singles semi-finals this afternoon, were favorites for this double game.

They won the first set 6 to 4, but the Western pair settled down and won the remaining two sets 6 to 2 and 6 to 4.

It was a hard-hitting contest, with very few rallies. Every shot was an effort to kill the ball. Bennett's fine drives were remarked while Holmes did exceptionally good work at the nets, continually cross-courting the ball. Bennett and Holmes now meet Kashro and Taylor in the final.

DECIDE TO RUN OWN BUSINESS

MINOR BALL LEAGUES TO BE INDEPENDENT OF BIG LEAGUES.

Chicago, July 12.—All relations between the major and minor baseball leagues were definitely broken off at a meeting of a committee representing the National Association of Minor Leagues. The committee adopted resolutions ratifying the action taken at the joint meeting with the major leagues in New York last January when the National Agreement was abrogated.

The minor leagues will operate independently of the major leagues and will attempt to settle all disputes within their own organization instead of appealing to the National Commission for final decision or review of any case.

The action of the minor league committee means that the major leagues will not be permitted to draft players this fall. Contracts and territorial rights, however, will be respected.

OPEN AIR BOXING SHOW AT TORONTO

GRAND ARMY CARD FOR CONTESTS AT ISLAND, JULY 18.

Toronto, July 12.—The Grand Army boxing card for their open air show at the Island Stadium Friday, July 18, has been completed. Bobby Eber, of Hamilton, who refused to meet Fighting Dick Atkins, of Syracuse, at anything less than 118 pounds ringside, has been dropped, and Atkins will meet Tonawanda Jimmie Goodrich at 122 pounds. Jim Stockley, the Highlander veteran heavyweight, will meet Soldier Jones, an eastern heavyweight, at 10 rounds, and Frankie Bull takes on George Pelletier, a Montreal lightweight. Atkins, Jones and Peletier are unknown here. Atkins has defeated Patsy Johnston. Jones has victories over Spike Sullivan, and George Brennan to his credit at Quebec city, while Pelletier's claim' to fame has not yet arrived.

No Politics For General Currie

Ottawa, July 12.—Demobilizing her Generals has become an interesting problem for Ottawa to solve. There were many hero-worshippers who wanted Gen. Currie to get into politics and a Cabinet position at the same time. Gen. Currie promptly let it be known that he had no such aspirations. Much military linen would have to be washed in public if military reputations, no matter how justly obtained, were made the sport of party politics. Now comes from London confirmation of the report long current here that Gen. Currie had been offered the post of Inspector-General of the Canadian Forces by Sir Edward Kemp, who is now in London.

PRISON OF LOUIS RIEL AT REGINA TO BE TORN DOWN

Famous Landmark in Saskatchewan Will Be Demolished to Make Room For Mounted Police Barracks.

Extensive new buildings are to be erected on the R.N.W.M.P. square at the headquarters of the famous force in Regina. While Commissioner Perry announced that the buildings would go up in the near future and would entail a large expenditure, he stated that he was not in a position to give many details.

Reil's Cell to Go.

The new buildings, he said, would be placed on the south side of the square. Officers' quarters and a large barracks will be erected. This will entail the tearing down and removal of the last of the old wooden buildings, including the historic guardroom where Louis Reil expiated his crimes on November 16, 1885. The guardroom was the first frame building erected on the ground. The other original buildings were made in Quebec in 1882, sent here in sections, and then put together by men on the force at the rate of one each day.

Senior officers interviewed expressed regret at the passing of the old buildings while delighted with the prospect of the new ones. There is a possibility that the old guard-room building will be removed to another spot and preserved in its present form. One of the officers interviewed stood on the scaffold when Riel with all the Stoicism of his race met his death by hanging. Another has a piece of the rope and a card, written by the rebellion leader just before the hour of execution.

Riel's Execution.

From memory one of the officers recalled those on the scaffold. They were: Sheriff Chapleau, Deputy-Sheriff Gibson, Inspector J. A. McGibbon (now assistant commissioner) Hangman Henderson, Father Andre of Duck Lake, Father McWilliams and Riel himself. Telling of the actual hanging, the officer said there were two trap doors, and that Riel stood more on one than the other when the trap was sprung. The result was that when he fell his feet struck Dr. Dukes, the medical officer, who was standing below, in the face. Standing near Dr. Dukes were Dr. Cotton, the coroner, and the jurymen.

The hangman, Henderson, had been taken prisoner by Riel at the first rebellion in 1870 at Fort Garry. Two years after the hanging Henderson was lost in the dead of winter between Regina and Wood Mountain. After several unsuccessful attempts by other parties a party led by Inspector McGibbon found him on the prairie badly frozen but still alive. He was brought to the city on a flat sledge.

FARMERS OF WEST REFUSE REQUEST

TO TAKE PART IN BIG LIBERAL CONVENTION AT OTTAWA.

Winnipeg, July 12.—At yesterday's session of the Canadian Council of Agriculture the secretary was instructed to send a courteous reply to the organizers of the National Liberal Convention to be held next month at Ottawa, declining the invitation extended to the organized farmers of Canada to attend that convention. Arrangements were made to forward to the convention a copy of the farmers' platform, accompanied by a memorandum, stating the reasons why, in the opinion of the council, the crystalization of that platform into legislation is essential to the well-being of Canada.

To Enter Political Field.

The present probabilities are that the council, through which the various provincial farm organizations are federated, will not take any part in the next Dominion elections. It is equally certain that the various provincial organizations will take such part. All Dominion constituencies in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan are already being organized for the purpose of placing candidates in the field. A start in the same direction is being made in Manitoba and Ontario and in all cases the appeal to the electors will be made on the main planks of the farmers' platform already adopted, with tariff reduction in the forefront.

A resolution was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted calling for the cancellation of exemption from taxation on income derived from war bonds.

UNWILLING TO WORK

Aliens Refuse Offers From Employers at Welland.

Welland, July 12.—Foreigners here have developed a decided disinclination for worrk, and it is the general belief thatt he spirit of Bolshevism is responsible. Many contractors in the vicinity have been offering high wages for laborers, and on one occasion a contractor interviewed seventy-five foreigners who were loafing, offering them work, but they turned down the offer, and told him they did not wish to work. It is said that more than one thousand foreigners are loafing in Welland.

TRIBUTE TO WHITE.

Regret Is Expressed in England Over His Resignation.

London, July 12.—The report of the resignation of Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, has been cabled. It has been received with considerable regret, although little surprise is expressed. Three years ago, when Sir Thomas White paid a visit to England, Reginald McKenna, who was Chancellor of the Exchequer at the time, paid a high tribute to his financial leadership in the Dominion, under which, said Mr. McKenna, Canada had become a lender instead of a borrower in the country.

Fritz Wilhelm, Horse Doctor.

Compilers of year books and reference books have been sorely tried by the kaleidoscopic changes of the past twelve months, says the Living Age. The editors of the "Almanach de Gotha" for 1919, however, must be given a place apart among the victims of unstable circumstances. Their difficulties are but mildly expressed in their apologetic statement that "The dismemberment of Austria and the transformation of 23 German states into as many republics interrupted our labors as we were going to press."

Now the least of these difficulties has been the choice of designations for the fallen potentates, which should not offend foreign susceptibilities. Thus in the French edition, "Ci-devant" has been found a blessed phrase, and Gallic prejudices are further considered in the case of the all-highest and his first-begotten by laying stress on their subsidiary qualifications.

The ex-Kaiser is referred to as doctor of law, medicine, and science, and only in conclusion as grand admiral and field marshal; while the ex-Crown Prince is given a claim to distinction as a veterinary surgeon. After all, things might have been worse. Frederick William Victor August Ernest of Prussia might, for instance, have been awarded a diploma for household removals.

Peter Roberts, 71 years old, one of Chatham's respected citizens, died on Sunday.

John Pollock was given three months in the London jail for ill-treating his wife.

The Preston Furniture Co., will give its employes ten hours pay for nine hours work.

The Labor Temple was raided by the R.N.W.M.P. at Saskatoon and a number of documents seized.

E. S. Ekstron, recently discharged from the army, died in London as a result of drinking bay rum.

"SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE" ATTRACTION AT CHAUTAUQUA

Big Tent at Central Park Filled to Capacity Last Night---Fisk Jubilee Singers Closing Card---Lyceum Course This Winter.

Last night the big Chautauqua tent in Central Park was filled to its capacity, the attraction being that splendid play, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Mr. Percy Vivian, who was the manager of the Ben Greet players on the circuit last year, not only managed last night's production but played the leading role as well.

The story of the play is to the effect that an author of many blood and thunder novels makes a bet with a friend that he can write a book of ten thousand words within twenty-four hours. The wager is on, and the author is sent to a summer hotel on the top of Baldpate mountain, being provided with the only key to the place in existence. On his arrival at Baldpate he is met by the old caretaker and his wife, who tell him several stories about the hotel, and, after making him comfortable, leave him to his work.

The story he writes is produced in character on the stage and is a truly remarkable one. He writes of ghosts, murder, grating politicians, hermits, and love, and the way the story is told is very thrilling. Enough to say that he acomplishes the task set for him and wins his wager, much to the delight of the audience.

Program Next Winter.

During the evening the announcement was made that a Chautauqua course would be held in Peterborough next summer, the ladies of the Women's Institute being in charge of all arrangements. A winter Ly-ceum will be held here some time during the coming winter, as well, and a number of the world's best lecturers will then be heard, as well as many good entertainers. Already a concert company from the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, has been engaged, and this will give an idea of the class of entertainment to be expected.

This afternoon and evening the Fisk Jubilee Singers will be heard in old negro melodies. Signaller Tom Skeyhill, an Australian, will lecture on "Fighting the Turks at the Dardanelles."

May Continue Meetings.

At the close of the address the usual appeal was made for converts and again there was a considerable response from those present. More were converted last evening than on any night of the week, excepting last Sunday. The meetings are to continue until next Wednesday night. If, in the meantime, there should be a very marked increase in the attendance and in the number of conversions it is possible that the meetings will be continued longer. Tonight, Mr. Kennedy will speak on "The Judge Before the Prisoner" and tomorrow night on "The Handwriting on the Wall." Last evening a trio, consisting of Messrs. Prest, Anderton and Farr, of St. James' Church choir, assisted in leading in the singing.

Ministers present last evening were Messrs. Galt, Pogue, Webb, Thomas and Cruickshanks.

Mr. Kennedy has been giving his services without any assurance of any special financial consideration. A special collection on his behalf will be taken up tomorrow when those who feel that they have been benefited by the meetings will be invited to contribute. Special envelopes have been distributed among those desiring them and an invitation has been extended to any who care to do so to enclose notes in the envelopes commenting on the campaign in any way their desire.

Presented Purse To Their Pastor

HASTINGS METHODISTS BID FAREWELL TO REV. I. SNELL.

Hastings, July 12. A large number of the Methodist Church, gathered together in the basement on Monday evening and presented Rev. I. Snell with a purse and the following address.

"Dear Mr. Snell.—The time has come when as a congregation, we must say good-bye to you as a pastor and it is with mingled sorrow and gladness that we have assembled to bid you farewell. We dislike to think of losing you as our pastor and friend, the thought of which is grievous unto us.

During the four years of your pastorate here, we have come not only to appreciate the value of your work among us, but to love you as a man, so that it is with heavy hearts that we separate from you.

On the other hand we are glad that we have been privileged to have had you, as our pastor, glad to have had you in our midst, glad to have come in touch with you from day to day. In a quiet, unassuminf, inoffensive way you have preached to us the gospel, and the light of the Christ life has been so reflected by you that it has diffused itself among us, permeating our minds and hearts, so that we believe that through you, we have been drawn nearer unto Him. Our only regret is that we have not supported you as we might have done. No one in Hastings be they of our denomination or otherwise, be they Protestant or Catholic, but holds you in the highest respect, and as a congregation we feel that we were never more united than now. Your good influence will continue to live and rest assured that you will never be forgotten.

We beg of you therefore, to accept this gift, from the congregation, as a token of our esteem, and we wish for both you and Mrs. Snell the highest material prosperity and the blessing of God, in your field of labor.

In behalf of the congregation.

BOY SCOUT NOTES

The Boy Scouts of Sam's Own troop, Nos. 1 and 2, will meet at the corner of Reid and Charlotte streets on Sunday morning at 10.30 for church parade. St. Andrew's Boy Scouts will meet at their own headquarters at 10.30 of the same morning for parade with the Sam's Own.

The St. George Memorial Church, Oshawa, when built will cost about $95,000.

Tears are of no avail with Christ when you are walking in forbidden paths.

The Bible says "your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit." Do you really think the Holy Spirit would live in a body that goes to a prayer meeting one night and to a dance the next night.

If you want to keep the devil out of your heart keep it filled with the word of God.

To train a boy up in the way he should go, you must go that yourself.

In many homes the Bible would be a good place to hide money—what about yours?

Anything you love more than Christ is an idol.

You cannot associate with dogs without getting fleas.

There is a vast territory unexplored by some church members, between their home and the prayer meeting.

Every Christian should not only keep Christ's commandments, but do the things that are pleasing in His sight.

CAT-O'-NINE FOR CRIMINAL BOYS

TWO BOYS WHO BROKE INTO STORES ALSO ASSESSED $30 DAMAGES.

The two juvenile culprits who broke into three stores week before last were introduced to the cat-o'-nine tails this morning in the police station, in the presence of their parents.

The oldest boy, aged 9 years, is a widow's son, the youngest, aged 6 years, has both parents living. The mother of the one and the father of the other witnessed the lashing. The elder boy was administered 10 and the youngest 5 lashes.

Besides this punishment ordered by Magistrate Dumble, the elder culprit's mother must pay compensation to the extent of $12 and the younger lad's father $18. In default of payment within ten days the boys must go to the County jail for ten days.

The Crime.

These school boys of tender years broke into R. Fair's store the first Thursday half-holiday this summer, and effecting a successful get-away, returned again the following Sunday afternoon. The same Sabbath day they effected an entrance to W. Joak's and the Peterborough Floral Co.'s stores.

Horrible Wickedness.

Magistrate Dumble, in passing judgment, characterized the crime as horrible wickedness. To break a valuable plate-glass window as at the rear end of Robert Fair's store, to break through and steal was appalling in boys of tender age, he said, and one could hardly expect worse of hardened criminals.

Joseph Wearing was present representing the Children's Aid Society.

G. N. Gordon for the defence.

WHAT CATHOLICS DID IN CONFLICT

OVER ELEVEN MILLION OF THAT FAITH FELL IN BATTLE.

Toronto, July 14.— In a special peace sermon given yesterday at St. Michael's Cathedral, Rev. Dr. Walters stated that of the eighteen millions of soldiers who sacrificed their lives in the great war, there were 11½ millions who belonged to the Catholic faith. The speaker also pointed out that Bohemia, Austria Italy, Poland, France, Belgium and Hungary, the countries which suffered by devastation and loss of property were also Catholic. A solemn Te Deum was chanted at the close of the service.

Burglar Is Shot By Professor

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Philadelphia, July 14.—A masked burglar was shot and killed by Prof. Benjamin Franklin Shappelle, of the University of Pennsylvania, in the Alpha Chirho Fraternity House here today, after he had threatened death to Prof. Shappelle and others living in the fraternity building. Receiving a bullet below the heart, the burglar leaped from a second storey window to the yard, reeled across the street, and died as two policemen reached his side.

R. R. HALL WILL NOT START INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS

Clients in This Case Decide to Let Matters Take Their Course—Mr. Hall Warns Mayor and Aldermen That They May Be Held to Account Later For Their Mistakes.

"The large taxpayers of Peterborough who retained me to take proceedings to quash any bylaw that authorised the construction of this bridge on a cost-plus plan or on a basis that exceeded $260,000.00 voted by the ratepayers as the total cost, have decided to take no action to force the Council to accede to their demands," said Mr. R. R. Hall to The Review today.

"Several weeks have elapsed since the facts were drawn to the attention of the ratepayers, and owing to indifference or lack of interest on the part of the general taxpayers, my clients have decided to take no action.

"They consider that the bridge could be constructed for over $100,000.00 less than it will ultimately cost, and that if the ratepayers who are the real sufferers are prepared to take this loss with full knowledge, then this small fractional minority are content to pay their share of the extravagant and unnecessary arch and monument to be erected to the memory and folly of the Mayor and Council of 1919.

BOARD OF TRADE INDIFFERENT.

"The Board of Trade was requested to call a meeting to discuss the Hunter street bridge question, but its executive officers decided not to do so. Many of its members may not know this but such is the fact. To save $100,000.00 to the city may be too small an item to consider in these days of extravagance and waste.

"The facts are very simple. The ratepayers of Peterborough authorized the Mayor and Council to erect a bridge over the river at Hunter street at a cost $260,000.00. The Dominion Government made a contribution of $50,000.00 as a part of this expenditure in relief of the city and the Railway Board made a further contribution of $5,000.00 in further relief, and, as a result, the total cost to the city would not exceed $205,000.00.

"The total cost of the bridge includes not only the actual outlay in constructing the bridge, but also the land damages, engineers' fees, etc., as well.

ACTING AS AUTOCRATS.

"The Mayor and Council are not authorized to act as autocrats and to do their own sweet will, in utter disregard of the trust that is reposed in them. They have to act in accordance with law. They must not usurp their powers. They must not exceed their powers as trustees. They must not commit a breach of trust. They must not unlawfully expend the ratepayers' money beyond the scope of their authority.

"If they exceed their authority, then I am of the opinion that they will be held responsible for their breach of trust. This responsibility is not general condemination, but it means that every cent that they possess can be levied upon by the sheriff to make good the loss that the city may sustain if the total cost exceed $260,000.00 or with the grants $205,000.00.

IS NO LAUGHING MATTER.

"It is not necessary that any ratepayer should now intervene to protect the ratepayers from a breach of trust. They may go on and complete their breach of trust and when the work is done an action may be brought against any and all members of the Council who have acquiesed in this breach of trust and hold them personally responsible.

"They may laugh and jeer as some of them have done, but by so doing, they are only courting individual loss to themselves that they so richly deserve.

"My own advice is to let the Mayor and Council proceed with their own illegal acts and take the personal consequence of their own folly, and like other deliquents pay for their own mistakes."

CANADIAN ENGINEERING CO'Y DENY STATEMENT OF ALDERMEN

That Whoever Landed Contract For New Bridge Would Employ Superintendent From Russell-Townsend Co.—This Former Firm Have Capable Engineers of Their Own

His Worship Mayor Duncan received this morning the following letter from the Canadian Engineering and Constructing Co., which speaks for itself:

"We noted with considerable interest, that the contract for the Hunter street bridge has finally been awarded to the Russell-Townsend Co., and while we take this occasion to congratulate the city of Peterborough and the contracting company on the event, there are one or two statements made in Council which we think it only fair to ourselves to have corrected.

"One of the aldermen stated that the services of the Russell-Townsend Co. would be required in the event of any other contractor than themselves being successful in landing the contract. For ourselves, we must emphatically state that this is not so. We have three engineers in our firm all of whom are graduates of the university and members of the Engineering Institute of Canada. In addition to that fact, had we been awarded the contract, the superintendent in charge would have been Mr. Coates, who built the Rocky River bridge, one of the largest concrete bridges in existence.

"We feel that the time and money spent by this firm in an endeavor to bring the contract within the city's appropriation and the valued suggestions, admitted to be such by the consulting engineer, should be sufficient warrant for confidence in this concern on the part of the city.

"We have a very high regard for the Russell-Townsend Co., and we feel that they will give eminent satisfaction to the city of Peterborough At the same time it should be remembered that this firm tendered on the work last December, and were prepared then, as they have been ever since, to carry the contract through to a successful conclusion. Our record on difficult engineering work would bear the most stringent investigation both as to our ability to construct and design.

"In conclusion, we desire to congratulate you on your final choice, and to wish you every success in your undertaking."

MATCH IN POCKET CAUSED THE FIRE

TO WHICH DEPARTMENT WAS CALLED EARLY THIS MORNING.

The fire department received a call to a fire at 2.15 o'clock this morning to the residence of Mr. Walter Libby, 477 Parnell street. The cause of the fire is given as spontaneous combustion. Mr. Libby, as was his usual custom, had hung his working clothes which were saturated with oil and grease, in the woodshed against the gable end of the brick wall. It seems there were matches in the vest pocket, which set fire to the garments.

Very little damage was done, only the roof inside being slightly burned and the fire was extinguished with three gallons of chemicals.

ROWELL HITS OUT AT NEW LEADER

SAYS HARTLEY DEWART IS THE RISING HOPE OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Ottawa, July 14.—Hon. N. W. Rowell, President of the Privy Council in the Unionist Government and former Leader of the Liberal Party in Ontario, has issued a declaration of war against Mr. H. Hartley Dewart, his successor in the Provincial Leadership. Mr. Rowell writes a letter to Mr. W. J. B. Davidson, one of the leading Liberals of Port Hope, which he makes public, with the announcement that it is "in answer to inquiries from his constituents in Durham county with reference to his views on the recent Liberal Convention to be held in Ottawa in August."

Mr. Rowell makes it clear that he proposes to maintain and to carry into the Provincial arena the differences which divided Federal Liberalism on the war issue of compulsory military service. "The illiberal and intolerant attitude of one section of the party, apparently largely represented at the convention, toward Mr. Proudfoot and other Liberal-Unionists shows that co-operation at the present time is impossible in Provincial politics."

Mr. Rowell first arraigns Mr. Dewart on the count of the latter's opposition "to the formation of the National or Union Government for the vigorous prosecution of the war and the support of the men overseas." He charges that the new Liberal Leader "in co-operation with Mr. Murphy, led all the diverse elements in our population in Ontario hostile to Union Government and Canada's war policy, and put forth his utmost efforts to defeat both."

Mr. Rowell then turns to the prohibition issue, and alleges that Mr Dewart is looked upon by those opposed to temperance as the "rising hope" of the organized liquor traffic and declares it "inconceivable" that tens of thousands of Liberals can ever follow him.

In conclusion Mr. Rowell makes a plea for continued support of the Union Government by Liberal-Unionists

Says It's a Libel.

Toronto, July 14.—The Globe got in touch with Mr. H. H. Dewart last night by long-distance telephone at his summer home at Uxbridge and asked him if he had anything to say concerning Mr. Rowell's statement.

"The Globe should require no statement from me," said Mr. Dewart. "The Globe knows that it is absolutely untrue. The Globe should be the first to defend me. I would expect The Globe to say that the statements were absolutely untrue. Every man in Canada knows that what he says is a libel."

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 14.—Photographs taken in the United States and brought to England by the dirigible R34 and to London by airplane from Pulham, are published by the morning papers. This is looked on as the first step toward the fulfilment of the prediction by Lord Northcliffe that a quick interchange of New York and London newspapers and photographs by aerial post was a possibility of the near future. The photographs include President Wilson's arrival in New York, a view of the R-34 taken from an American airship as the British dirigible first approached Mineola and a snapshot of the first knockdown in the Willard-Dempsey fight.

The newspapers also published photographs showing a four-day-old newspaper being delivered at Buckingham Palace.

MARSHALL JOFFRE IN PLACE OF HONOR IN PEACE PARADE

Allied Troops in Paris Celebrate the Signing of Peace Treaty—Girls From Emancipated Provinces of France Place Wreaths in Honor of Those Who Died to Set Them Free.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 14.—There was a triumphal march of Allied troops through Paris at 8 o'clock this morning. The weather was brilliant, being more like October than midsummer. A thousand wounded soldiers with crutches or in wheel chairs, and clad for the most part in civilian clothes, led the parade being preceded by a drum corps. Guns began firing at minute intervals as they placed wreaths at the foot of the cenotaph at the arc de triomphe this morning. The empty casket placed there in memory of the Allied dead was also decorated by other wreaths, these being placed by Premier Clemenceau, a French soldier, a French sailor, an Alsatian girl and a girl from Lorraine.

Marshal Joffre passed under the arc de triomphe at 8:45 o'clock. He led the line. Behind him came Marshal Foch. A storm of applause arose from the vast throng as the two marshals passed the president's stand and moved down the brilliant avenue.

During the parade the roof of a house on the Boulevard St. Martin collapsed. Eighteen persons were injured.

THREE YEAR OLD CHILD FALLS INTO CISTERN AND IS DROWNED

Police Allege Flooring Covering Cistern to be Nearly Rotten—Freddie Whatman Thought to Have Broken Through.

Little Freddick Leonard Whatman, three year-old son of Mr and Mrs. Russell Whatman, 177 London St., was found drowned in a soft water cistern in a shed at the rear of the house, between 12 and 1 o'clock Saturday noon.

At 12:30 a hurry call for the pulmotor was phoned into the firehall, and Asst. Chief Johnston and a couple of other firemen quickly responded.

They found the little one lying on the floor of the shed and worked with him for some time in an effort at resuscitation, but to no avail.

The Mother's Story.

The mother, naturally, is prostrated with grief. She, knowing the flooring in the shed which covers both a well and a soft water cistern to be rotten and dangerous, had always kept the door from the house thereto fastened to keep her children out. Saturday morning, however, she alleges that a visitor called on her by way of the rear entrance, passing through the shed and leaving the door giving access to a rear room unfastened. At this time the little victim was playing in the rear room with an elder sister, who unfortunately left the little tot alone for a few minutes. On her return the child could not be found, and she and her mother searched high and low for him. Finally they noticed a hole in the flooring above the cistern, and, concluding the missing child had fallen through, raised an alarm. The police were 'phoned, who, before hastening to the scene, 'phoned the firehall for the pulmotor.

The assistant fire chief and his assistants found the little one on the floor of the shed, and resorted to every known means to restore animation. Dr. Moir, who was called in, pronounced the child to have been dead half an hour, although the mother says but a half hour elapsed between the time he was missed and the discovery of the body.

Mr Russell Whatman, the victim's father, was out of the city at work when the accident occurred.

Nearly Rotten Floor.

Sergt. Blade and Constable Lawrence, in their report of the accident, say the cistern and well in the shed at the rear of 177 London street is covered by a flooring very nearly rotten and quite shaky, and they conclude that the boy broke through to his death.

Mrs. Whatman, the distracted mother, said she had asked the owners of the property to repair the flooring but no attention had been paid to her request. The property is owned by what is known as the Bird Estate and one of its living representatives, Mrs Duston, is alleged to have visited her tenant, Mrs. Whatman, Saturday morning, by the rear entrance, leaving access from the house to the shed door.

The police characterize this well and cistern in question as a standing menace to the children in the neighborhood.

A family in the next house to that in which this tragedy occurred also complain of the flooring over a well in their shed being in almost as bad condition as that in No. 177.

Funeral Today.

The remains of little Freddie Whatman were interred in Little Lake Cemetery this afternoon. Rev. Canon Davidson of St. John's Church officiated.

Deceased is survived by his mother and father and sisters Irene, Lulu and Gladys, aged 8, 5 and 2 years, respectively.

INJUNCTION IS HANGING FIRE

Mr. J. Guise-Bagley has, as yet, taken no further legal steps forward in behalf of J. W. Kearns and others, restraining the city from building the Hunter street bridge.

Can it be that a miserable security for $10,000 stands in the way?

PETERBORO MAN REACHES HALIFAX

S. J. DENNE, ONE OF THE OFFICERS ON BOARD CARMANIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, July 14.—The steamships Carmania and Minnekahda which arrived on Saturday, landed troops and left for New York within a few hours. The returning officers on the Carmania include S. J. Denne of Peterborough.

Arrivals at Quebec.

Quebec, July 14.—The steamship Tunisian arrived this morning bringing troops. The Corsican, with 1,200 soldiers and dependents, is expected here today. The Empress of Britain sailed for St. John's this afternoon to take over the passengers on the Grampian, disabled by the ice last week. It will arrive there probably on Thursday.

F. J. DUFFY HAS NARROW ESCAPE

YOUNG MAN WHO STOLE CASH AND CAR LET GO ON SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

Frank J Duffy, the young American convicted of decamping in Fontaine's motor car from the exhibition grounds, a week ago Saturday last with $75.27, the receipts of Shimkus, the wrestler, with Beacon Shows came up for sentence this morning.

Joseph Wearing, prisoner's lawyer, pleaded that he be allowed free on suspended sentence, the manager of Beacon's Shows, guaranteeing to return Duffy to the United States of which he is a citizen

County Crown Attorney Hatton was also inclined to that view, on the ground that American amusement aggregations are under bond to return their employes to the States if engaged there.

Chief Thompson assured his worship that he was in receipt of a phone message from the manager of the shows, saying were Duffy allowed out on suspended sentence, he would come for him personally and return him across the border.

These Beacon Shows leave Belleville tonight for the United States.

Suspended Sentence.

Magistrate Dumble, in freeing the prisoner on suspended sentence, said he did so, not out of sympathy, or because he deserved it, but because he is an American citizen whom Peterborough does not desire to board free for six months. He saddled the responsibility for his leniency on County Crown Attorney Hatton and the chief.

A Returned Soldier.

The prisoner, who is an American returned soldier, served eighteen months overseas. His discharge papers give him a record of "Very Good." His civilian record up to now has been quite clean.

The money stolen and the car were recovered.

CONGRESS FAILS TO CARRY BILL OVER VETO OF PRESIDENT WILSON.

MET HIS DEATH IN BUCKHORN LAKE

Saturday evening Verdar Harris, son of Mr. Levi Harris, met his death by drowning while fishing in Buckhorn Lake.

Not returning in the evening, his parents grew anxious and waited up through the whole night long. At early morning, the victim's father, obtaining other help, went in search of his son. They found his canoe about a mile distant close to the shore, half full of water, which led them to conclude he had been drowned.

The neighbours from all sides turned out and dragged the lake all day, and about six o'clock Sunday evening Mr. Sam Wood, one of the party, discovered the young man's body close to shore.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, JULY 14, 1919

J. F. STRICKLAND THE CHOICE.

THERE HAVE BEEN a number of local aspirants for the position of chief enumerator in West Peterborough to prepare the list of those entitled to vote when the temperance referendum is submitted to the people next Fall. These candidates include not only veterans of the war, but laymen as well. The department at Toronto have asked the Liberal-Conservative Association to make a selection, and when the members of that association meet in special session tonight the members should have no difficulty in the matter of choice.

Mr J. F. Strickland, a real veteran of the war, has been selected for the position by the members of the G. W. V. A., and that action should be decisive. If the position is to go to an ex-soldier, as everybody appears to believe it should, then none are in a position to agree upon a selection as are the veterans themselves, whose decision in such a matter should be final. Mr. Strickland is one of the rising young men in the community, a man whose appointment to such a responsible position must give general satisfaction. He has the equipment to begin with, and in addition to this a record of military service that meant actual sacrifice both as to the service itself and what was given up by a young man in his position and with such a future before him at the time he enlisted.

THE FARMERS' MARKET.

THE CITIZENS of Peterborough, as represented by the most wideawake Board of Trade the city has ever possessed, aspire to bring city and county closer together, recognizing that the interests of both are identical. One of the objects in view is to create in this city a better market place in which the farmer can do business.

One aspect of this question has been frequently discussed in these columns for the past three years. The public market on which the farmer offers his produce for sale is inadequate. It provides no shelter for the farmers' wagons, and on wet days seller and purchaser are alike exposed to the elements. A threatening sky in the early morning is often sufficient to induce the farmer to change his plans on market day and to remain at home.

Every farmer who brings a load of produce to the city market is an asset to the householders. He is the same to the merchant whose store he will patronize before his return home. The more farmers who can be induced to come to Peterborough, regardless of weather conditions, the fewer farmers there will be likely to send their money to the department stores in outside cities.

Let the citizens take some action in this matter, as it is one of serious concern to all classes. Evangelist Kennedy, in his sermon in the big tent on Hunter street last night preached some good practical religion when he admonished his hearers not only to pay their debts, but to spend their money at home, reminding them that by so doing they would increase the value of their own property.

UNDISCIPLINED CHILDREN.

ROUSED BY persistent stories of dissipation on the part of very young people, the Chatham [illegible] declares with emphasis that parental authority has declined, and that many boys and girls never learn the meaning of the word restraint. This calls from the Toronto Times the following: Our confrere looks backwards, longingly, perhaps, to the age of the birch rod, when the juvenile offender was properly tanned, and kept by force from the Babylonish garment and the wedge of gold. He records the decline of harsh methods at home and at school and is grumpily suspicious of moral suasion, despite the arguments in favor of it.

Solomon's warning not to spare the rod is mentioned in passing. But despite the wisdom of the famous Judean king, a good many people are inclined to the belief that his success as a parent was not so brilliant as to make him an authority on child-study. Rehoboam became a bully and a patron of heathenism, however much he was "lammed" in his royal youth.

The Puritan notion that all recreation was evil continually ruled the homes of many pioneers in this country. The second generation of parents, that of perhaps thirty years ago, eased the burden of childhood, but still exercised a more or less erratic severity. This generation is beginning to understand that boys and girls are not little animals to be taught tricks by the whip, but human beings intensely imitative, whose lives and conduct will be modelled closely upon the manners and character of the parents. The black sheep, in the old days, was usually a high-spirited lad who felt the injustice of a hard and unexplained authority and threw it off, either by open defiance or by running away from home.

It is said that looseness of conduct and a lack of reverence for authority are found in modern youths and maidens. We believe the conclusion too sweeping. But if not, the responsibility is upon loose and irreverent parents. Of late years the whole population has been grumbling over authority and its exercise. Little attention is given in modern homes to ethical teaching and the business of self-discipline. Materialism and greed, fashion and vulgar show, have been too prominent. The object in life has been to keep up with the Joneses rather than to live righteously and godly in this present world. Selfishness has been raised into a religion by some parents, who wonder why Willie lies kicking on the hearthrug because he cannot be allowed to pull his sister's hair.

To train up a child in the way he should go presupposes that the trainers will go themselves. They need not imagine that they will fool the child by merely pretending to go. The judgment of a six-year-old on the conduct of his elders is singularly acute, logical and clear, and has small relation to the utterances of those elders. A mother may assure her child that it is wicked to lie, but if she tells the ticket seller falsely that the child is of half-fare age, the counsel will be obscured by the action.

We believe that the whole population is undisciplined and inclined to run amuck. Despite that condition of affairs, we scarcely think that a general indictment lies against all young people. You cannot cure a man of selfishness and folly by assault and battery. Neither is a rattan cane a sufficient remedy for lack of self-control in boys and girls.

THE DENISONIAN METHOD.

COL. DENISON, who for forty years and more has been police magistrate in Toronto, the dean of the profession in Ontario, is publishing in the Canadian Magazine a series of reminiscences which gives the public a glimpse behind the curtain and an excellent idea of how the magisterial machinery has been operated in that city all these years. It seems that magistrates in Ontario work on the same general principle, possibly for the reason that the precedent set up by Col. Denison in Toronto has been followed by the cadis in other parts of the Province. The same idea seems to run through all police court procedure, the idea that a policeman, in his capacity of complaining witness, cannot possibly be mistaken, and in the very nature of things must under all circumstances tell the truth, a consideration which is too often denied the man unfortunate enough to find himself in the dock. Col. Denison makes no secret of, but seems rather to plume himself on, the fact that during his administration he has paid little regard to statutory enactments, but has been a law unto himself. One example of his rulings may be here cited by way of illustration. In the magazine article he says:

> "On several occasions I have had disputes about horse trades. A man not knowing much about horses would buy a horse from a trader who would say the horse was sound, and a good worker, and afterwards the purchaser would find that the horse was unsound and not able to work. He would complain that he had been defrauded. He would get a summons, and the case would come before me, charging the trader with defrauding him by false pretences out of the price of the horse, say $100. The facts would come out before me and evidence of veterinary surgeons would prove that the horse was worthless. I would then say to the trader, 'What have you to say?'
>
> "He would say, 'The horse is all right.' I would say, 'You are sure of that?' 'Yes.'
>
> "'Is it worth $100?'
>
> "'Yes.'
>
> "'Are you sure?'
>
> "'Yes.'
>
> "'Then there is no difficulty: you take your horse back, and give the complainant the $100.'
>
> "The man would object. I would remand the case for a few days and say, 'If you don't do that, then I will know you intended to cheat him from the beginning, and I will know what to do.'
>
> "This scheme generally put things right and no one was wronged."

How does it come that a dealer in horses is so often the object of suspicion, a suspicion that as a rule does not attach itself to the man who merely sells dry-goods or cows? How does it come, too, that so many magistrates called upon to pass judgment on horse transactions never seem to take into account that the horse that gives satisfactory service under one management fails utterly in equine economy when transferred to the care of some man who understands neither how to feed or to handle his new property?

Col. Denison's method of adjudicating such cases has one outstanding recommendation. It can at least be depended upon to secure speedy results.

BLIND PEOPLE SEE NIAGARA

(The author of this article is himself a blind man, but has so far overcome his misfortune that he is able to act as a correspondent and to furnish adequate reports of events.)

(By Annesley Burrows.)

Toronto, Ont., July 10.—One hundred blind people doubled up and writhing in spasms of sea sickness, while on their way from Toronto to "see" Niagara Falls was the spectacle which closed the international convention of blind folk in Toronto.

The delegates came rolling down from the university residence in "rubber neck" wagons after their last tilt with the bacon and eggs at Burwash hall. They crowded on the steamer Chippewa in buoyant mood. It was to be the big day of their lives. They were going to "see" one of the great wonders of the world—in so far as blind people can sense the great things which they approach. Few of them had ever visited the cataract. Many of them had never crossed any water broader than than the Mississippi or the Ohio, and then safely settled in the upholstered seat of a railway coach. The roll and pitch of a steamboat as it slanted across the white capped billows of the great lakes was an unguessed and unlooked-for sensation.

No such heterogeneous party had crossed Lake Ontario since LaSalle's soldiers and the feathered and painted red men of Quebec had paddled their canoes and bateaux through the blue waves on their great journey to the Gulf of Mexico.

Contrasts in Blind Tourists.

The southern blind aristocrat from the first families of Virginia, whose eight cylinder motor car blocked the alley of the pier smoked his imported cigarette and "gazed" at the distant verdure of Toronto islands. A few feet away was the stunted figure of a blind broommaker and the shabby, frail little wife whose seeing eyes were his greatest comfort. There were dignified looking librarians with smoothly tailored coats and shining hair seated beside girls whose clothes were such as blind factory girls are able to buy. There were alert, well clad piano tuners and canvassers chatting with rough looking workingmen. And each was blissfully unconscious of the appearance of the others.

All went merrily until the steamer passed through the western gap of Toronto harbor and the first big roller smashed midships. "Oh," squealed a brown-haired typist from southern Ohio, "the ship has struck a rock."

Then the Chippewa met the full force of the gale and pitched and rolled frightfully.

The blind excursionists grew pale. Something was happening under their belts. A heavy woman in an immaculate white silk waist rose and lurched toward the railing. Within five minutes every blind person aboard had found the railing. They reached it with surprising accuracy. Every woman's head sought the shoulder of the person next to her and no introductions were asked for or sought. A steward staggered along the heavy deck looked at the crowd and swore it was "the worst he ever saw."

"Sighted" Persons Describe It.

It was not until the Chippewa was well inside the Niagara river that the blind "sight-seers" began to sit up. They landed at Lewiston, groped their way into trollery cars and began the journey up the Great Gorge. In each car some "sighted" person described the panorama as the car rattled by the smooth circling waters of the lower rivers, the white swirl of the shallows, the seething cauldron of the whirlpool and the mad, tumultous surge of the rapids.

The blind people leaned forward with tense eagerness, listening to every word, but momentarily their heads turned to the vast wall of stone, verdure clad, reaching up as it seemed to the sky above. That touched them more than the water did. They could actually feel its immensity in the same way that blind people sense objects on the street as they pass them. It was solid, tangible. They could understand that.

Crossing to the Canadian side the blind people sat down to lunch on the terrace of the refectory. The picture of wood and sky was an exquisite one. Away to the east the American wall of the Gorge rose up out of the seething basin of Niagara, grey and green with rock and verture. Far away to the north the winding river, many colored in the glancing sun, dissapeared as though it had shot through [illegible] corridors in the walls of green. And then to the south where the tumbling [illegible] the Horseshoe falls, the veil of white mist shot with delicate shades of pink, and above all the multitudinous roar which seemed almost to shake the structure beneath the feet of the [illegible]eners.

Feel Detonation of Waters.

After lunch the blind people wandered down to Table Rock, going close to the edge as they dared and peering downward as though they could see the white surging pillows beneath them. Not all of them sensed the wonder of the scene. Some faces were as stolid and indifferent as those of many a "sighted" tourist who stops his motor car to watch the squirting of a faucet in his own bathroom. But here and there among them were delicate, sensitive eyes which bore the marks of understanding, blind eyes that shone and lips that quivered at the detonation of the waters.

The blind man from Virginia stood with his head on the door of his panting motor. "I have visited more than 400 of the greatest buildings of Europe," he said. "I have visualized them; I can describe them. But I cannot describe Niagara. It is the greatest of all."

"Oh," breathed the white faced blind girl in rusty brown as she drew her hand across her wet eyes, "It is beautiful, beautiful!"

WIT AND WISDOM

One on Hubby.

"Look here," he began, angrily, "how dare you tell my wife what time I came home this morning after I told you not to."

The Irish girl eyed him steadily. "Shure, and Oi didn't!" she replied calmly. "She asked me phwat toime yez came in, an' Oi only tould her that Oi was too busy getting the breakfast ready to look at the clock."

Early Diplomacy.

"I hope you didn't ask for a second piece of cake when you were over at Johnny Smith's to tea?" said his mother.

"No, mother, I didn't," said Charlie. "I just asked Mrs. Smith for the recipe, so that you could make some like it, and she gave me another piece without my asking for it."

Might Have Been Worse.

"After all," said the football referee to himself, as the police escorted him to the railway station, "I've not done so badly. It's true they've torn nearly all my clothes off and most of my hair out, and that I'm pretty nearly all bruises. But I've got my return ticket."

Her "Coming" Out.

Mrs. De Smyth—Now, I want you to save me an extra supply of flowers next week. My daughter Alice is coming out, you know.

Proprietor of Flower Stand—Yes, mum, I'll save the very best, poor thing. Whatever was she put in for?"

Susceptible.

Lord Beaconsfield's skill in picking up stray votes was well known. An illustration of it is given in a book by Henry W. Lucy.

At the time that the Imperial Titles Bill was pending there was a certain pompous little Irishman, Dr. O'Leary, who seemed manageable and was desirable. One evening in the lobby Disraeli laid a hand familiarly on his shoulder.

"Dear Dr. O'Leary, the resemblance is most striking," he said. "I really thought I saw again my old friend Tom Moore."

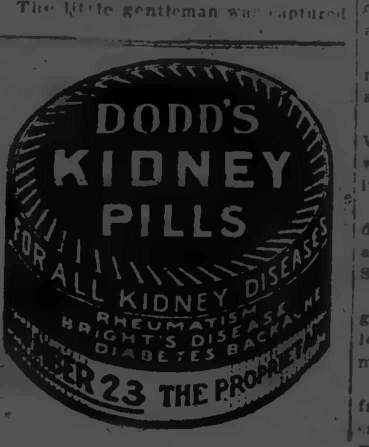
The little gentleman was captured.

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says she's studied the whole question very carefully and she doesn't believe the peace treaty is based on the Sixteen Points at all.

United States Consular is to be located at London.

Col. C. W. Peck, V.C., M.P., addressing the Moncton Canadian Club said that General Sir A. Currie was one of the greatest generals in the war.



TO-DAY'S STORY

"It is much more usual for people to swear than to sing hymns in their sleep," writes a Canadian army doctor from Constantinople. "Sometimes the emotion is the opposite of hatred. At midnight a subaltern, who would never have dreamed of putting the matter so crudely in his waking moment, shouted, 'Sister, I'll be damned if I go to sleep unless you hold my hand.'"

The writer lay for a month in a crowded ward, and he says that 60 per cent of the patients talked in their sleep. The type of patient ranged from the phlegmatic, reserved person to the mercurial and excitable. "A quiet and reserved type of Scotsman, by no means 'pious,' startled me at 1:30 a.m. by singing, in a stentorian voice that awakened everybody but himself, a complete verse of 'Abide with Me.' The melody and words were perfect."

THE EAST AND WEST BROUGHT CLOSER TOGETHER.

Western Canada and the Pacific Coast have now been brought within much quicker reach of the East by "The Trans-Canada Limited," the new popular all-sleeping-car train operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway from Toronto and Montreal to Vancouver. It makes the fastest time betwen terminals of any transcontinental train in America. Leaving Toronto at 7:15 p.m. daily, Fort William is reached in 26 hours, Winnipeg in 39, Regina in 50, Calgary in 64, and Vancouver in 90. By this means a business day is saved—a great convenience to the large number of business men who travel between Eastern and Western Canada. Leaving Toronto on the evening of Monday, for instance, it is possible to spend a full business day in Winnipeg and be back in Toronto by Friday afternoon. Tourists to the famous resorts of the Canadian Pacific at Banff, Lake Louise, Glacier, Vancouver and Victoria will also find this train particularly convenient. It consists of standard sleeping cars, dining car, and compartment observation car, and sleeping car passengers only are carried.

FISK JUBILEE SINGERS AND POET ORATORS CLOSE CHAUTAUQUA ENTERTAINMENT

The closing attraction for Chautauqua week Saturday night were the Fisk Jubilee Singers and a lecture on "Fighting the Turks in the Dardanelles," by Sig. Tom Skeyhill, the famous soldier poet and orator from Australia, who brought a message of fraternal greeting from Canada's big sister dominion in the Antipodes. There was a capacity audience at the evening entertainment.

The Fisk Jubilee Singers, sent out by the university of the same name for colored people, have been before the public for years, and their plantation melodies have demonstrated the natural musical gifts of the race. The singers are as popular today as they were at the beginning of the venture, and the performance of the quartete Saturday night was a rare treat for local lovers of music.

Signaller Skeyhill deserves all the advance notices which he received as an orator. He has been through some of the most stirring incidents of the war, and has the gift for a graphic recital of the various scenes that he witnessed. The poet-orator lost his sight by the explosion of a German shell, but after two years of blindness his vision was restored.

The Chautauqua entertainment next year will be under the management of the Local Council of Women, who will also repeat during the coming winter the excellent program which they put on last season when some of the leading speakers and singers now before the public were brought to this city.

AN INDICATION OF AGE

The ducking and peering which some women do in order to put off wearing bi-focal lenses by continuing to wear their old single vision lenses is as much an indication of age as the bi-focals which they dread.

As a matter of fact some bi-focals are so made that it is almost impossible to detect that they are two vision lenses.

We would be glad to show them to you.

HOW TO GET RID OF ANTS.

Professor Gives Rules for Eradication of Small Pests.

Prof. Conrad E. Tharaldson, of the zoology department at Northwestern University, announced two sure fire methods for destroying ants, which have been infesting the north shore towns.

"Ants can smell," he said. "We have proved this by many laboratory experiments. Therefore housewives must cover up all cakes, sugar, syrup and bread.

"Powdered cinnamon—a harmless remedy—sprinkled plentifully about the kitchen and pantry will drive away the red ants.

"If you will watch for the cracks in the floor and walls where the ants enter the house, and sprinkle these cracks with kerosene, the ants will speedily hunt other quarters. When ants come into a house they establish nests in the walls and floors. These nests must be hunted out and destroyed with kerosene.

"While the red ant plague is rather severe this summer, I think the annoyance they cause has made their abundance overestimated."

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD L. HOUSE
(Copyright)

(In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of [illegible] interest to merchants, their sales-people and business men and women in general. All phases of store management, buying, accounting, advertising and retail salesmanship will be dealt with, not theoretically, but by descriptions of methods actually in use by successful merchants.)

"POOR ADVERTISING?" "NOT WHEN IT PAYS"

Some critics in the advertising profession say that the advertising of Frederick W. Jefferay, a Denver clothier, is all wrong, and perhaps they know.

Jefferay himself says it [illegible] business and he ought to know.

He had a "shirt tail," as he called it, store in 1893; and he went broke that year, which was the thing to do in order to be in fashion. It took him ten years to "mend the shirt." And the "poor" advertising that breaks all the rules, traditions and regulations has been a factor—a big one—in producing [illegible] gain for 1919 over 1918 of between $40,000 and $50,000, if the present rate holds out.

"Any man who dares to be original in his methods and different, is a crank and a detriment to business in general according to the opinion of some," said Mr. Jefferay.

Business His Hobby.

"Be known. If not favorably known, just plain known. That's my motto. It's a real pleasure to do things my own way. A friend said he didn't see how I kept so pleasant. I told him that a man ought to make his daily life a pleasure and whatever he was engaged in his hobby. It's up to us to get our pleasure today. That means get it out of our business.

"It's a lot of fun writing these ads and it must be fun to read them. We run about twelve squares an evening and hardly mention merchandise. It is just tacked on as an afterthought—just a few words. I recall one ad that dealt with some local affair and had added to the bottom the line:

Give us your collar button business.

"You'd be surprised to have observed the number of men who mentioned their 'collar button business' as they were buying large items over the counter. It seemed to have made a hit with them—that little, modest unhoggish request.

"Yes, the advertising experts call my efforts outlaw methods—yet they ask me to speak before their assemblies."

What Car Shall I Buy?

One evening when the various automobile men of the city sat down to read their evening papers they read something which caused them to get the scissors and clip it out to take to the office for attention the next morning. It was a Jefferay advertisement. No one ever misses reading them, even if they carry as much text as a full page from a drygoods store. This one let it be known to the world that one Jefferay was in the market for a car and did not know which one to buy. Can you imagine it? Any man bearing his breast to the attack of those twenty-four-hour shift automobile salesmen! The next forenoon [illegible] cute little automobile agents sat down to their desks chuckling, perfectos in mouths, fingers roaming through their hair (those who had hair), and said: "By golly, I'll just go that feller, Jefferay, one better and get a lot of advertising for that good little Buick" (or Ford, or Overland, or Packard, or Chevrolet, or Cadillac or whatever the car might be, for they all fell for it.)

The newspapers received a page of advertising that did not have to be solicited.

"Great stuff! said each agent.

"Great stuff, indeed!" said Jefferay, for he was the subject of each advertisement that overflowed the page. Thus another thousand or two learned who Jefferay is. Over a page of publicity from a short single-column advertisement. They'll tell you about it if you mention it in Denver.

"The main idea behind our advertising," said Mr. Jefferay, "is to let [illegible] see that we are not always in print for the benefit of the store. We show them that we go beyond that. We make a fight once in a while for the good of the people. We put thousands in a fight against a telephone company. For a time it crippled business for some, but the people came back with a vengeance. Our advertisements, people tell us, are the liveliest editorials in town. We have even been ruled out of papers. When Billy Sunday was here preaching hell-fire we took the opposite side. We thought he was too radical and put our thoughts into the little single column ad series. Seven weeks of that and our sales increased 85 per cent. That was in 1915 and the sales have [illegible] right along ever since."

When Jefferay was over on Curtis street the city tore up the pavement and apparently forgot all about it. Jefferay didn't—for it made of his frontage a no man's land. So he began to use that as a theme, referring to the street as "Sheep Alley." After all the criticisms and derisive remarks about efficiency that this series inspired the authorities built an overhead passageway for the convenience of pedestrians.

When Jefferay put in silk hosiery he popularized it with advertisements that were daring—if not a bit over the border line. He mentioned them as Christmas gifts. A favorite slogan, just a bit beyond the border line of propriety, was quoted so many times by the buyers that Jefferay knew that the advertisements paid. The sales for the two weeks before Christmas on hosiery hit $7000.

Yes, Jefferay's ads are distinctly unusual, and they pull just as unusually.

MISS PRAIRIE FLOWER GETS THE OLD BILLS

Miami, Okla., may not be precisely a metropolitan centre, but Miami merchants don't believe that that's any reason for not being progressive. In fact, one of their stunts—a plan for collecting from habitual dead-beats—has proven more successful than any high-priced series of collection letters ever compiled by a "city agency."

Not many months ago a Miami retailer had an application from the highly educated daughter of an old Indian friend for a position of some sort. The merchant in question happened to have on his books an [illegible] dozen bills which appeared to be practically impossible of collection. So after he had outlined his somewhat startling plan to a number of [illegible] leagues, the young woman—known as Prairie Flower—was sent for and received her instructions.

First, dressed in "civilized" attire she called upon the members of the Won't Pay Club, and suggested that they meet their obligations. As was expected, most of them declined to do so or put her off with "I'll attend to that very shortly."

Her second call was made in full tribal regalia—an Indian robe that made the coat of Joseph look like a shrinking violet. Naturally she attracted more attention than a fire engine, and it did not take more than two or three calls before all of Miami knew that Prairie Flower was paging a delinquent debtor and crowds followed her, much to the embarrassment of the man who owed the bill.

Now, if she has to call a second time (dressed for the warpath) it very often happens that little Annie or Joe races up the street to meet her with a breathless: "Mamma says wait a minute and she'll be right out." And she is.

Prairie Flower is the trump card in the Miami collection system. The merchants do not have to play her very often, but when they do, she never fails to take the trick.

COINS NEW PHRASE FOR "POPULAR PRICE"

An attractive substitute for the trite phrase "popular priced," is used by the Belvidere oyster and fish restaurant in Cleveland. They say it this way:

"Our service is up-to-date, but—
Our prices are old-fashioned."

WANTED—TWO FEET

In the window with a display of new styles of shoes the O'Brien-Kiley shoe store, St. Joseph, Mo., placed a pair of slippers made up in size 1½. This card caught the eyes of the women: These slippers will be given free to the local Cinderella whose feet they fit.

They were on the job for several weeks, and, while they caused much talk, they were unclaimed.

Bills amounting to $2,226 were found sewn up in the lining of the coat of Switszar Bogarski, an Austrian, who dropped dead in Regina.

BREAKING THE LIMIT

An Engineer's Ride For Life and Lives

By JARED L. FULLER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co

Pug Donaldson, who had been the roundhouse foreman so long that he thought he owned the entire system, gave out his opinion of Lannigan at the end of the latter's first week on the M. and S. P. And this was it:

"That Grandfather Longlegs never'll get to hold down a passenger lever on this road, whatever he's done back east. It ain't in him."

Then the old man chalked up the limit on the side of his little smoke discolored office, spat with emphasis and—well, that closed the subject as far as Pug was concerned.

I reckon if Lannigan hadn't begun by blowing about his eastern record he'd made more of a hit with us.

He was a tall, awkwardly built man, with a shock of sandy hair and a smooth, humorous face. His legs and arms were remarkably long and thin, and old Donaldson's sobriquet stuck to him. "Daddy Longlegs" seemed to fit.

Lannigan got a freight, and the worst bunch of scrap iron on the road, which, in moments of enthusiasm, Pug called an engine. If there was any man handicapped in the race to break the limit it was the new man from the land of tenderfeet.

The system of advancement followed by the M. and S. P. did not include length of service or "pull." Just one thing counted—the ability of a driver to get speed out of his machine over the worst track the law ever allowed man to lay.

The country was new when the M. and S. P. was surveyed and laid down. It had been a race between the M. and S. P. and another corporation to see which should reach the terminating town where connection could be made with the Pacific road first.

We won, but at a cost which crippled the road financially for years, and the renewing of the first roadbed was a slow and laborious job.

We ran one fast passenger—the Limited. The through mail cars were attached to that train too.

It was a continual fight all through the year to keep that one train alone up to the schedule called for by the contract with the government.

If any man on any other train showed the ability to get speed out of his engine he was watched, and if he "broke the limit" he stood a good chance of displacing the driver then running the mail train.

The M. and S. P. in those days was a "farmers' railroad." Most of the way stations were merely huts and water tanks in forest clearings, tapping a certain section of farming country stretching westward of the line.

Lannigan had been with us since the winter before. He was a good driver, but not brilliant. Anybody but a prejudiced old fool like Donaldson would have recognized his good points, but you never could stir the roundhouse foreman when he'd once made up his mind.

Lannigan had learned the road and his engine. If he followed another train he was on its heels all the time and got himself well cursed for it.

Some of us began to see that there really was more to the eastern man than we had believed.

That fall was dry, the sun and wind all day and every day drying the sap out of the trees and brush and burning the leaves brown before the frost could make them pretty.

By and by the inevitable happened. Fires began to light up the heavens nightly, and by day streaks of blue smoke hid the tops of the higher hills.

Reports reached us from all directions of families burned out and settlements threatened, but for a week the conflagrations kept away from the line of the road.

Then suddenly one Sunday morning a flood of fire swooped down the mountain side and crossed the tracks some miles south of Yardsley.

The Limited came through somewhat scorched, and the next day traffic on the road between Lattell and the junction was cut off altogether.

This shut off several settlements as well as Yardsley, except by telegraph. The wires were still working, and our operators stuck to their posts like the brave fellows they were.

Pretty near every living soul in a hundred square miles of territory lit out for less dangerous ground. But Yardsley was caught napping, and its 300 people were practically hemmed in by the fiercest forest fire the state had ever experienced.

The entire system of the M. and S. P. was pretty well tied up. We had pulled freight as near the fire line as we dared, and the sidetracks were about full of waiting cars.

The fire was still burning fiercely beside the roadbed in more than one place, and we weren't asked to try to pull a train through to the junction.

Naturally there were plenty of locomotives and [illegible] drivers at Lattell that day when the news came from the Yardsley operator. It was his last dispatch, for he had remained until it was too late to escape by any track through the forest, and there wasn't [illegible] the station.

"Wind changed. Fire will reach us in one hour. [illegible] danger. Can you [illegible]"

That was the message which the trainmaster read to us from the steps of the station at Lattell. He was pale, and his hands shook as he spelled the words out slowly.

He didn't have any need to tell us the danger. Nor did he call for volunteers. To try to get to Yardsley was like buying a through ticket for death and be done with it.

We stood around and discussed the terrible news and did nothing except Lannigan.

He appeared at Pug Donaldson's window, and, leaning his arms on the sill, looked in with the same humorous twist to his lean features.

"Those three boxes there empty?" he asked, jerking his head backward toward the sidetrack.

Donaldson nodded.

"I'm going to hitch my engine on to 'em. Jimmy and me'll see if we can git down there and beat that barbecue. Gimme a clear switch!"

The roundhouse foreman only stared; but, after Lannigan had disappeared from the window, he rushed to the door and yelled after him:

But Lannigan only grinned and jumped aboard the old engine. We didn't know what he was up to until he'd coupled on the three empty box cars and rattled away over the switches and out of the yard.

"He's making a bluff," some of us said.

Others who respected the pluck it took to approach the fire thought he'd never get through, but would waste his steam for nothing.

"Well, Jimmy, it's going to be a hot run," the long legged Yankee told his stoker as they neared the first belt of fire. "You fill up the furnace, and I'll slow down so you can jump. I don't want to take another man to perdition with me."

"Oh, I guess I'll stop," says Slosson, kind of shamefaced.

Then they shook hands on it, and from that moment neither questioned the other's intention of sticking to his job.

But Jimmy had loaded the old engine for bear all right before they reached the fire line. She was whirling miles under her drivers at a rate to beat even our one fast train, and the empty boxes behind were dancing like mad over the rough roadway.

"We're getting there, Jimmy!" sings out Lannigan at last. "Slide over into the water tank and fling a pail or so over me when you get a chance."

He stood out on the running board with a hand on the lever, his cap visor shielding his eyes from the smoke and flying sparks, peering ahead as best he could at the rails. Jimmy, up to his neck in the tank, flung pail after pail of water over his long figure.

Suddenly the engine seemed to run into a veritable wall of flame. It extended far across the roadbed and it wrapped the train about in a living, seething mantle as she rushed on.

It seemed as though no man could go through that sea of fire alive, but when the old engine staggered out of the fire belt Lannigan still stood upright at the lever.

His sparse mustache, his eyebrows, his shock of sandy hair were gone. He was as bald as a parrot, and his clothing was afire in a dozen spots. But he turned a horrible grin upon Jimmy and waved his hand.

"Give us another bucket!" he croaked. And the stoker climbed out of the tank, more dead than alive himself, and put out the burning garments.

The [illegible] Yardsley [illegible] were ever welcomed as angels straight from heaven it was Lannigan and his stoker, though they must have looked a deal more like devils from the pit.

Two hundred and ninety people, who had given up their last hope of continued existence, piled into those three box cars like cattle. The doors were closed, and then it was up to Lannigan and Jimmy to run them back to Lattell.

The old engine was reversed, and back through the awful belt of flame and smoke she went with the three boxes.

Lannigan certainly showed that day what he could do when he had the right of way.

Scorched almost to a cinder one instant and saturated the next, Lannigan stood at his post and brought the rescue train through to Lattell. The box cars were afire and the passengers half suffocated when they arrived.

Jimmy was pretty nearly drowned in the tank, and we picked Lannigan off the engine just as he caved completely.

"Daddy Longlegs" was some time in the hospital and came plaguy near losing his sight, and all because of that run. But if a man was ever popular along the line of the old M. and S. P. his name was Lannigan.

The first day he got down to the yard the super happened to be there himself. The line was open again and everything running smoothly by that time, only the miles upon miles of charred forest and the heap of ashes where Yardsley had stood telling of the forest fire.

"Humph!" said the super, trying to pick out the engineer's hand which was least bandaged to shake. "I hear you've been doing some tall running down here, Lannigan."

And the driver grinned sheepishly, as though he had done something to be ashamed of.

"Donaldson's got your record chalked up on his office wall over the Limited. Guess we'll have to find you something better than a freight to pull out when you're well enough."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Consumption.

Consumption is taken from other people who have it and is not simply "caused by a cold," although a cold may make it easier to take the disease. The matter coughed up and sneezed out by people who have the disease is full of living germs of consumption. Many tiny droplets of this matter float around in the air for awhile and if breathed into the lungs of others may start the disease, or this matter coughed up and spit out may become dried and stirred up as dust. Such dust breathed into the lungs may start another case of consumption. [illegible] weakened and debilitated people are more likely to catch the disease than strong, healthy people.

Avoid breathing dusty air. It may contain particles of dried tubercular spit. Avoid careless coughers and spitters. They may have consumption and not know it. Avoid close foul air at all times. Such air in crowded rooms is likely to contain germs of consumption. Avoid flies. They eat tubercular spit and may deposit it on your food. Above all things, avoid getting "run down." Keep well, keep healthy, keep stout.

RETRAINING SOLDIERS FOR WORK IN THE RAILWAY SHOPS

Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Companies Are Co-Operating With Department in This Matter.

Ottawa, July 14.—Evidences of practical sympathy with the work of the Vocational Branch of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment are being shown by the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railway Companies at the request of the Department. Each organization some months ago made arrangements for the industrial re-training of returned disabled soldiers in their shops under actual working conditions. Co-operation in this respect has been very satisfactory from all classes of manufacturers, as well as from the regular employes with whom the men undergoing re-training are working.

Mr. G. M. Wilson, Sperintendent of Motive Power, Montreal Shops, has been appointed to act for the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and the names of all men selected as suitable for re-training in these shops submitted by the District Vocational Officer to this official. The selection of the most suitable occupation for each individual case—that occupation in which the man's disability will prove of no handicap—is made only after a careful investigation and consultation. Men selected will be required to conform with the Company's regulations regarding hours of work, etc. They will be visited periodically by the Company's Medical Officer, and the Heads of Departments are instructed to carry out any changes that he may recommend, should the man's progress not appear satisfactory in the occupation selected.

Require Consideration

An excerpt from a letter written by the Vice President and issued to various Heads of Department contains the following:

"I desire to draw the attention of the officers and foremen to the fact that these men have passed through a terrible ordeal on the battlefield, and their condition may be such that they will require every consideration; therefore I trust the officers and all concerned, more especially the officers and foremen in immediate charge of the men, will be kind, considerate, patient and do everything possible to make their instruction a success."

The Executive of the Canadian Pacific Railway with a view to establishing the proper feeling and spirit between their foremen and the disabled men receiving instruction in the shops, have issued a circular letter pointing out the treatment the returned soldier deserves and should receive at their hands.

Not a Normal Man

It reads as follows: "How do you treat a returned soldier working under you? Do you consider him as an ordinary workman, let him shift for himself and look on his mistakes only as you would an ordinary employe? If so, you are assuming employe he is in all respects just a normal man, and should be able to do the same work as quickly and as well as the average employe. If you do, you are wrong.

"Most returned soldiers' constitutions are broken down. They have been gassed, shell-shocked and tortured by wounds, and consequently are highly strung and nervous, and will be for some time to come. What they make of themselves depends on you. If one of these m[illegible] a mistake and is roughly reprimanded, he is likely to shake like a leaf, get excited, etc., and be very difficult to make anything of; this is wrong.

The greatest tact, care and attention that you can give these men in helping them to become useful employes is what the Company expects, and moreover—you owe it to them.

"There are bound to be some exceptions and some men will fail to make good. The success or failure of the majority, however, depends on you, and it is you privilege to help your country in this National crisis by endeavoring to make useful citizens out of the nerve-shattered men that the coming back to us from the front."

It is good to learn that the relations between the men and their officials in these two very large industries are entirely satisfactory and that re-training ex-soldiers along these lines has proved successful beyond question.

These large shops, as well as over 1500 others throughout Canada, have been surveyed in a most comprehensive manner by the staff of the Vocational Branch of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment and the disabilities likely to handicap a man in each operation and process are on record. With a continuance of the settled policy of this Department to ensure the right selection to fit each individual case and with such assurance of good will and sympathetic instruction from manufacturers and their employes it is safe to predict that the greater proportion of Canada's disabled men will become producing elements in the national life, self supporting and justifiably proud of their triumph over their handicap due to war injuries.

THE REFERENDUM

Editor Review: In view of the approaching referendum on prohibition, would it not be as well for us to look into the question from every stand point and try and arrive at an impartial and sane judgment on the matter?

"Has alcohol, as a beverage, any place in modern life? Can we in view of the great increase in mechanical transport and the greater need of caution to avoid the multiplicity of dangers arising therefrom, put into the hands of these drivers, already in many instances, far too reckless, the whiskey, and the beer or wine bottle. We hear specious arguments advanced by the advocates of liquor, along the lines of personal liberty. Liberty for what? To get drunk if they wish and drive an automobile not only to his own injury or death but to the danger of every other citizen in his road. If our great transportation companies found it necessary even before prohibition to insist on abstinence for engine drivers, conductors, motormen, etc., and that when their con[illegible] were confined to steel tracks, how much more necessary is it it to insist in abstinence for the drivers of autos, etc. which are under no such limitations, but driven by persons under the influence of liquor would mean danger to all."

Accidents, fatal and otherwise, are far too common, even under present conditions for any one to wish to see them increase [illegible] which they assuredly would be by opening the door for a return of the liquor regime. This is a democratic age and we live in a democratic country, and the verdict must be given by the majority, but it is as well for the voter to know that every vote given for liquor in any form means apart from the moral or economic question altogether a vote for an increase in the danger of the streets, already far too great through the reckless driving of careless persons, and consequently a corresponding insecurity of life and property.

I am confident that if the referendum unfortunately resulted in the reopening of the bars it would bring in its wake such a crop of accidents that would appal us. This is an aspect of the question I have not seen brought out but which I think should cause a voter to think twice before casting a vote for the reintroduction of liquor.

OPEN LETTER TO MAYOR AND MEMBER CITY COUNCIL

Mr. J. G. Guise-Bagley Makes Another Proposition on the Hunter Street Bridge Question.

Editor Review: Enclosed herewith I send copy of an open letter I have addressed to the Mayor and all the aldermen, which I will be glad if you will publish as soon as your space will permit.

It is being stated on the street that my clients want to prevent the building of the bridge, and I want to give a most unqualified denial to this statement. Their object is to prevent a big waste of the ratepayers' money and to remove the doubt and uncertainty at present prevailing as to the ultimate cost of the structure.

Yours truly,
JAS. G. GUISE-BAGLEY.

LETTER TO MAYOR DUNCAN ET AL.

To the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Peterborough:

Gentlemen: This morning His Honor Judge Huycke made an order (subject to security being given) restraining the city of Peterborough from entering into the proposed contract with the Russell-Townsend Company for building the Hunter street bridge. It is now too late in the day to get the security completed, and the matter will have to stand over till Monday next.

I think it is a great pity that it should be necessary to expend so much money in litigation, when perhaps a friendly talk and a little forbearance would be of much benefit to the city and all concerned. The men that are taking exception to the contract have the best interests of the city at heart and are in no way hostile to you gentlemen. It is not too late to discuss the matter calmly and dispassionately and review the whole situation.

The present proposal has not one redeeming feature. The plus cost plan as proposed is much to be deprecated because the only limit is the sky. There are no means of guessing what the bridge will cost, having regard to the present unstable condition of affairs not only in the labor world, but also in the prices of material. Judge Huycke this morning made no secret of his opinion that the contract is loose, and eminently unsatisfactory because there is no limit to what the cost may be.

Under the proposed agreement the city pays the full cost of the work and materials. Presumably it would not cost any more if it were done by day labor employed direct by the city. In addition to the fair cost of the work, the city pays the engineer a big salary (about $12,000) for supervising the job. That would be fully enough to pay for all overseeing. But, in addition, it pays $28,000 to a firm of contractors. What for? Not for work, because the work of the job is all to be paid for as "cost"; not for supervising, for that is paid for in the engineer's salary. Then it must be as foremen's pay. Will these highly paid foremen save one cent out of what any fairly paid foreman employed by the city under its own engineer would spend in the work? And will these men that are to get $28,000 really act as foremen? It appears to me they will just sit back and employ foremen, etc. and their pay will appear on the pay sheets that the city will pay, and they will do nothing of value for their money. Better, far better, employ a staff of qualified foremen, let the engineer earn his money by supervising the buying of materials, etc., and do the work by day labor, without the intervention of any parasites who produce nothing and do nothing but draw their "pay"; and let the city get the benefit of the discounts.

Now, why not tackle this part of the problem at once? The concrete of the span is less than one-tenth of the total concrete work, and the steel work will employ some men, if not quite so many as the concrete, and we might as well decide to this before we begin, instead of designing the bridge as we go on; by these means we can eliminate the cost of piling, which will not be less than $12,000 and will employ only about half a dozen men, and the staging for the steel span will employ as many at a fifth of the cost, and the difference will pay for moving the present bridge, and keep open the traffic. Then you will eliminate the bugbear of the job—I mean the depth of the foundations of the centre span. For a steel span you will not have to go down nearly so far as the weight will be vertical instead of lateral, and there will be no difficulty in getting any number of contractors to tender a price certain for the approaches, because they know what has to be done, and the cost will be proportionately less.

You all want to have a concrete bridge instead of a steel bridge so as to give a maximum of work to the men of Peterborough, and in this you have the whole city with you. It will undoubtedly cost more, probably more than has been authorized, and it is said that if it turns out that we shall exceed the limit, we can have a steel span in the centre and effect a big saving.

You need not worry about two weeks' delay in getting the new tenders. We waited three weeks to hear from the Leonard Construction Co. and we have waited eighteen months for the bridge, anyway, and nothing terrible will happen us if we delay to see if we cannot do something practical and businesslike.

Let me plead with you, gentlemen, to give this letter careful thought, and see whether it is not possible to save the cost of the law suit, save the "commission" to the "contractors," and get a much better bridge at a lower price than we will get under the proposed arrangement.

Let this contract stand over and call for separate tenders for the approaches, and then let Mr. Barber advise whether we cannot best serve our city in the way indicated.

Your obedient servant,
JAS. G. GUISE-BAGLEY.

UNQUE PROGRAM FOR PEACE DAY

BRAMPTON TO PUT ON CELEBRATION ENTIRELY FREE TO THE PUBLIC.

Brampton, July 14.—Brampton has caught the spirit of the peace celebration and there is a monster committee hard at work perfecting the arrangement for positively the biggest day in the town's history. Brampton has celebrated in the past for various reasons, but the celebration on Peace Day will outshine the past as the sun outshines the moon.

The citizens are asked to decorate their premises. Many of them will but the town is asked to make it a general thing, so that wherever the eye falls it shall fall on the colors that mean so much for the years of the war. The business part will be a blaze of color, but the committee hope that every private house will bear testimony to the fact that the town is celebrating the most momentous day in the world's history.

At 1 o'clock there will be a grand parade, headed most appropriately by the Great War Veterans. In the parade there will be representations of the Allied countries, decorated floats and autos, [illegible], callithumpian bands, clowns, etc., and for this parade alone fifty prizes are offered.

The fair grounds will be thrown open to the public absolutely free of charge. The committee have been more than delighted with the spirit in which they were met by the driving club, the agricultural society and the Christ Church Athletic Association, who have given them the freedom of the whole place for that day. Every father, mother, aunt, uncle, cousin, son and daughter, old and young, big and little, is invited out to celebrate that day free of charge and to take part in a day that will never come again.

No Room for Grouches.

The Chief has orders to watch for a grouch and run him in at the first indication. Brampton will have no room for grouches on July 19; the grousing season closes at 12 p.m. sharp on Friday evening, July 18.

The only charge for the Peace Day Celebration: A firm determination to get and to give all the happiness that is possible to man on this sphere in the course of one short day.

Everything Is Absolutely Free.

Money will be of no use that day. Everything is to be absolutely free. Strangers in town will be taken in and entertained by the hotels and citizens without a cent being asked for the accommodation. The day promises to be one such as was never heard of before in the annals of celebrations.

Lord Reading Made Hit As British Ambassador In the United States

VISCOUNT BRYCE, probably was the most popular foreign ambassador who ever served at Washington, and when the American people think of an ideal ambassador they think of the author of the "American Commonwealth." But not even Ambassador Bryce's coming or going was the occasion of such an outburst of respect and admiration as that which has marked the departure of Lord Reading. In the general chorus of praise that has gone up from the American press there is not a dissenting voice. Indeed, there is not the slightest doubt that if such methods were in vogue a petition praying for his speedy return could be circulated and signed by practically every leading American in the country. His mission has been a "brilliant, unqualified success," as one paper describes it, and that is typical comment.

There is hardly a modern parallel for it. Two disadvantages had to be met and overcome by Lord Reading. In the first place he was known to be one of the greatest lawyers in Great Britain, the greatest with the exception of Sir Edward Carson. This fact might well have created the impression that he had been chosen for his ability to "put something over" and would have the natural tendency of making the Americans with whom he came in contact rather wary and reserved. In the next place he had had no diplomatic experience, surely a grave disability at a time when the most delicate negotiations were on foot. The fact that Lord Reading is a Jew may also have had some influence, for while this would aid him among the Jews, and would be particularly valuable in financial negotiations, it might not prove an asset with others, not quite free from anti-Jewish prejudices. Yet here is Lord Reading in the last days of his departure banquetted by the Pilgrims, the American Bar Association and as many other bodies as he can accept invitations from, escorted to his boat by a distinguished company, his rooms flooded with gifts, and newspapers displaying almost ill-temper that he is leaving the United States.

Lord Reading has done his part in winning the war, and he has done it well. In the first two years of the struggle, besides being Lord Chief Justice of England, he was the principle financial adviser to Lloyd George, who was then Chancellor of the Exchequer, and is credited with having devised those methods of financing that have resulted in the British Empire emerging from the war in a sounder economic position than any other belligerent or neutral, with the exception of the United States, which bore only a tithe of her burden. In 1915 he was sent to the United States to negotiate loans for the British and French Governments. This was a difficult task. There was pro-German propaganda to be overcome, and the [illegible] position of Germany at that time made lenders chary, while the money market conditions were generally unfavorable. Yet Lord Reading succeeded. The next year he returned again as British High Commissioner, and on the death of Sir Cecil Spring Rice was given the additional honor and burden of the American Ambassadorship.

But so greatly was his counsel in demand that last fall he was summoned home to consult with the British Government on the peace terms, and for several weeks he was busy in Paris as a member of the commission for the feeding of the European neutral and enemy nations. A short time ago he again returned to the United States, but simply to close his desk and say good-bye. He was urged by the British Government to continue the post, and the American Government, it is hinted, made similar representations, but Lord Reading's health cannot face the continued strain, and he returns to resume his office as Lord Chief Justice. It may be, indeed, that he will be one of the international court that will try the ex-Kaiser. This would set the crown upon one of the most remarkable of contemporary careers.

Tact appears to lie at the bottom of Lord Reading's success at Washington. This gift he is dowered with to an extraordinary degree. It is especially desirable in the British representative at Washington, for while he is on a slightly different footing from all other ambassadors, his privileged position makes it all the more necessary that he shall live up to a higher standard than is demanded of others. A "break" on the part of some ambassadors might be excused on the ground that they were unfamiliar with certain American prejudices or conditions. It would not thus be forgiven in a British ambassador. Moreover, personal relations enter into Washington diplomacy to a greater extent than in any other great capital. It is one of Lord Reading's gifts that he has been able in a remarkably short space of time to get on terms of friendship and intimacy with the leading men in American public life. Maybe the fact that he is a great lawyer, and thus has been able to make use of the legal freemasonry in a country where every lawyer is a politician, has helped him greatly. Anyway, he will be a hard man to follow at Washington.

CHRISTMAS A MYSTERY.

No One Knows Origin of Great Festival.

Nobody knows how Christmas originated, its origin, who first celebrated it, or when or where or how. Nor, of course, does anyone know that Christ was really born on December 25. The whole day is shrouded in mystery; it has simply been handed down to us as an arbitrary day on which to celebrate the birth of Christ, not day of His birth, says the Ladies' Home Journal.

There are more Christmas days than we know of. December 6 is one; several countries still celebrate that date; January 6 is another; in the Far East that date is celebrated. Other small nations celebrate April 20, May 20, September 29 and March 20. It was Pope Julius who first fixed December 25, and that date the large part of the world celebrates.

In foreign countries where December 6 is celebrated, it is known as St. Nicholas Day, the real Christmas Day for the children. In the Netherlands it is universally celebrated as Christmas, December 25 being a [illegible]. The day comes, of course, from the day on which the original Santa Claus is supposed to have passed away, December 6, 342. He was the Archbishop of Myra, in Lycia, and was always known as the friend of children. "St. Nicholas" became, in Dutch, Santa Klaas, and thence came Santa Claus.

England abolished Christmas once, in 1643, when Parliament did away with any celebration of the day. The King protested, the people stormed, but Parliament stood firm, and for twelve years there was no celebration of Christmas, and everyone who attempted to celebrate was arrested and fined. Massachusetts followed suit in 1659, and until 1681 Christmas was not recognized or permitted in the old Bay State.

The Christmas ceremony of bringing in the boar's head previous to the day's feast, which is still followed in some of the old English houses, is supposed to have been originated by a young student who was wandering in the woods on Christmas morning, studying his Aristotle, when he was attacked by a wild boar. He had no weapon, so he shoved his book down the animal's throat and choked him. The student took his knife, cut off the boar's head and bore it back to his college as proof of his exploit. He found his companions just sitting down to their Christmas dinner, and putting the boar's head on a platter bore it into the dining hall in triumph. The oyster is the great Christmas dish in France in such families where Christmas is celebrated. It is always served as the first course, and from this custom came the American habit of oysters as a first course at regular dinners.

Those With Enterprise.

The enterprising person is the person who is always learning and then putting that learning to use, who is making the very best of opportunity, and creating all the opportunities which seem to offer themselves to his or her molding. In other words, what is enterprise but a busy mind and a busy person properly directed by a sane soul.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.

As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada) "there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

REV. R. POGUE PREACHES ON PERSONAL LIBERTY

Pastor of St. Paul's in Sermon on Temperance Legislation Draws Distinction Between Freedom and License.

In the course of a sermon based upon the text, "If the Son shall make you free ye shall be free indeed," the Rev. R. Pogue had some things to say last night in St. Paul's Church bearing upon the matter of personal liberty in relation to drinking. He said in part:

"There is nothing that men love more than they do freedom. It is an instinct of our nature. It is not only true of men, it is true of every living thing. You cannot imprison life anywhere without it showing a desire for liberty. You may imprison the seed of a tree in the cleft of a rock and yet it will take root and spring up and struggle towards the sunshine in its desire to live its life in its natural element, the air. You may imprison a bird and it will express its desire for liberty by beating itself against the bars of its cage. You may imprison your puppy dog in its kennel and it will yelp all night in protest against the bars that confine it. Now, the desire of the human heart for liberty is just as natural as the desire planted deep in our nature when we come from the hands of our Creator.

What is True Freedom

But what is true freedom? What is the freedom of which Christ speaks? Is it the same as that for which men of evil life raise so loud a cry, men who form themselves into liberty leagues throghout the country, and who ask for the privilege of doing their own sweet will irrespective of the claim and rights of others? Is that freedom It freedom the privilege of doing just as you please? Let us be careful here in our definitions careful to understand what the nature of true freedom really is An individual is free when he lives the life which God intended he should live. He is free when he realizes the highest purpose of his existence He is freest when his life is of the most value to himself and others. Freedom is not a something which may be considered apart from others

I am free, for example, to extend my arms tonight to their full length and do what I please with them so long as there is no one else within reach. But I am not free, to thrust my fist in another man's face My freedom ends at the point of his nose. So that in defining what true freedom is we have to take into consideration the relation of our conduct to others. It cannot be considered apart from the well-being of others.

Freedom in Restraint

The colt in the field kicks up its heels and runs whither-so-ever it wills. It has a freedom of a kind But that is not the purpose of the existence of such a noble servant of man He is intended to be of service to the world. And in order to be of service he has to be taken from the field and have the bit and bridle placed upon him and brought into subjection to the will of man. The horse is never so free as when he has been brought to do the bidding og his master, as when he walks along the straight furrow, or speeds along the roadway, conveying his master to his desired destination That is a much higher freedom than the freedom of the colt in the field

I paid a visit recently to one of our farmers in the country. He was driving a beautiful team of horses behind a disc-harrow. As they walked along with their heads in the air doing the will of their master and preparing the soil for the seed they were the very embodiment of true liberty. He left them standing for a moment behind the house, while he came round and sat down for a chat with me on the verandah. In a moment we heard a noise, and, hastening to see what was the matter, we saw the team of horses running madly away with the disc-harrow behind them. Soon the harrow was broken. They dashed against a fence as though the rails were nothing but cobwebs, in their wild dash for liberty and freedom.

The Bolshevist's Liberty

That is a liberty of a very different kind to the liberty of free obedience to the will of their master. And that is the kind of liberty, exactly, that a certain type of people are crying for who are organizing themselves into Personal Liberty Leagues They are asking for the privilege of running amuck through the streets of civilization and doing whatsoever they please, irrespective of the effect their wild conduct will have upon themselves or those with whom they come in contact That is the Bolshevist's idea of liberty He wishes to free himself from the incumbrances of the traces, and harness of civilization, and regardless of how his conduct may affect his neighbor, he wants the privilege of doing his own sweet will.

License not Liberty

Needless to say that is not liberty that is license, and it is a license which a society that believes in its own preservation and which believes not only in the greatest good to the greatest number, but the highest good to all, will refuse to acquiesce. The reason why a high civilization passes prohibitory laws is because it wishes to secure the highest good of all its citizens So it will not permit a man to engage in a business that will endanger somebody else.

It goes farther than that, and it says that if a man will not protect himself and will not render the highest service of which he is capable to society, it will withhold from him that which is interfering with his usefulness and with his best service. Society, therefore, says that a man is not free to drink what he pleases, and that for two reasons: First of all he is not free to drink if the indulgence of his appetite in any way interferes with the well being of society. No man has a right, in order to gratify his own thirst, or his own appetite, to demand that an institution shall be maintained on the street corner that may work injury to other parts of the community And not only that, he has no right to gratify his appetite or his thirst if in so doing he himself may, in any way, be a burden upon the community. He cannot make another pay for his indulgence of his own appetite if that indulgence si going to interfere with the highest and best service which he owes to his family and to the community in which he is a citizen.

Police Alarm Gong At Oshawa City

A PATROL SYSTEM OPERATED BY TELEPHONE NOW INSTALLED.

Wide awake little Oshawa has now installed a police patrol telephone, which sounds a large gong to warn the police that they are wanted when they are anywhere within a block of it.

In this connection the Reformer says: It has been claimed that it was frequently impossible to get the services of the police, when they were needed There has been a good reason why. The force is not large enough to keep a man in the police office all the time, and when they were out on duty, there was no way of getting in touch with them by phone In order to obviate this difficulty the patrol phone has been installed While there is some one in the police office the switch to it will be shut off and when the office is closed, or there is no one there, it will be turned on, and all calls sent in will ring the gong there till the office is opened again. The patrol box is only accessible to the police, each of whom has a key to it, is being kept locked except while in use.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know

The use of Sage Tea and sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

RESTORE OLD PARTY SYSTEM

(Kingston Standard, Con.)

It is just a question whether, the world-war now over and won and peace now established, we cannot obtain better results in government by a return in Canada to the straight party system of government rather than by an attempted continuance of a Union Government that, having served its purpose, is now breaking up under the weight of its own irreconcilable elements.

It is just a question, too, even if there be a desire to prolong Union Government, whether that can successfully be accomplished. Already there are signs much larger than the proverbial "cloud on the horizon no bigger than a man's hand," that many one-time leading figures in the old Conservative as well as in the old Liberal parties are inclined to return to party lines and to doubt the wisdom of attempting in peace time to reconcile irreconcilables who, held together in war times by the exigencies of the situation and by high patriotic motives, are now drawing apart because of divergent views on re-construction and domestic policies.

To be sure, some Liberals now in the Union Party will remain there—such men, for instance, as Ballantyne and Mewburn and Guthrie, and mayhap Calder and Maclean and Rowell—but beyond these (and even some of these are not certain) there are likely to be few Liberals of importance who, still believing in Liberal policies, will not desire to go back to their own party, provided a satisfactory leader is chosen and a satisfactory policy decided upon at the forthcoming Liberal convention in Ottawa. Thus it is not unlikely that, whether or not the Conservatives will or wish it, and despite Sir Robert Borden's best efforts at Unionism, we shall shortly see a re-united and re-juvenated Liberal party, shorn, it may be, of one or two important figures but otherwise virile and aggressive and not indisposed to make the most of the mistakes of the present government and to emphasize every phase of the profiteering that recently has been disclosed as well as to insist that the High Cost of Living is High only because Unionism has not grappled with the problem as the Liberals would have, had they been in power.

It may well be that in this matter The Standard has misread the signs and has misjudged the situation and, not being a prophet or the son of a prophet, we can only answer that this may be so. Nevertheless if the Liberals at their forthcoming convention are actuated by a real "get together" spirit, choose a leader acceptable to all factions, and adopt a sane, rational, reasonable policy—not sectional but national in its scope and ideals—we have a very strong suspicion that the old-time Liberals will flock back to their party and that the Liberal newspapers (who practically all were quite frank in their declarations that they supported Unionism only as a war-time emergency) will be fairly solidly behind them.

Under such circumstances there will be nothing left for the Conservatives but to do their "getting together" also and in short order, holding to themselves those Liberal Unionists who may be unwilling to range themselves under the leadership or behind the policies adopted at the Liberal convention.

Frankly, the war over, The Standard believes that the country will be the better if this re-alignment of parties should come about, for Unionism as it is today is far from satisfactory, with too much indecision and marking of time. Straight Party Government has its faults but under that form of government we at least know who is to blame for the faults and mistakes that are made. Now for such mistakes as are being made nobody—and everybody—seems to be to blame. It is easy to "pass the buck!"

Wealthy Debutante Weds Beneath Her

GIVES HER HAND TO PENNILESS YOUNG ARCHITECT—STORY WELL TOLD.

The story of how a Copper King's only motherless daughter sought happiness by giving her hand in marriage to a penniless young architect, who saved her life at Atlantic City, was beautifully told on the screen at the Grand Opera House, Saturday night. The picture was a Metro one, and as such in the premier class. In its tragedy and comedy combined gave the big audience pretty well an hour's visualization of the truth that wealth is not necessarily an essential to happiness in married life. In fact, in "His Bonded Wife" (the name of this drama), the author pictures how riches with the bride reacts reversely when the bridegroom is self-respecting. The heroine, fleeing from a circle of selfish money-seeking aspirants for her hand, in search of some man who will love her for herself, meets her young architect lover, and concealing her identity by posing as a saleslady in a departmental store, she accepts his proposal of marriage. Discovering the imposture her lover calls at her millionaire father's home. She however, is sincere in her attachment and the father approves. But to satisfy the young man's scruples at any appearance of marrying for money, the father makes pretension at disowning his daughter, whom the hero then marries. They set up housekeeping in a New York flat, but the bride, missing her accustomed luxuries and comforts, gradually installs luxurious furnishings and servants, paid for out of a private fortune sent her by her father in anticipation of such a contingency. She has $100,000 in bonds concealed in a safe, which fact she reveals to her young husband when pressed as to the source of the improved conditions. In the meantime, her father is secretly advancing the young man's interests and places him in a position to acquire wealth himself. But the $100,000 stands between the pair's happiness and the husband burglarizes his wife's safe intending to disclose his criem when he can match her bonds with a similar amount of his own. He is shot in the arm by his bride, however, when escaping with the loot, she not knowing her husband was the burglar until he is arrested for te crime. All ends well, however, in the hero realizing at this moment his ambition to surround his wife with luxuries by his own efforts, and her father bribes the police to forget the burglary. And in this way the "Bonded" marriage terminates.

Trotzky the Actor

TROTZKY? Lenine? Yes, the two Bolshevists who hold in their grasp the fate of great Russia, are invariably linked together in the mind of the world. Yet, according to a writer in the London Times, they are wholly unlike. The latter, it seems, is "almost entirely devoid of temperament. But Trotzky, on the other hand, is "all fire and passion." We read:—

"He has the temperament of the artist and delights in theoretical heroics. While Lenine sneers at public honor, presumably on the grounds that there is no honor among thieves, and therefore none among capitalists, Trotzky makes great play with the word. He was defending Russia's 'honor' at Brest. It pleased him to bandy paradoxes with the German generals, and his sense of flattery was tickled when a well-known American declared in admiration that 'if the German General Staff bought Trotzky they bought a lemon.' After Brest, however, the lemon was indeed sour. Trotzky's dignity had suffered an affront, and he returned to Petrograd full of wrath with Germany and breathing threats of revenge. At that moment he would willingly have died fighting if 'all Russia had been present to see him do it.'

"Trotzky remained behind to sulk in his den at Smolny. A few days later, however, his equanimity was restored by the offer of the Commissariat for War, an office in which his boundless energy and organizing talents have been of the greatest service to the Bolshevists. Impetuous and hot-headed, he is apt, like the Queen in 'Alice in Wonderland,' to solve every crisis with a wild shriek of 'Off with his head!' On more than one occasion it has needed all Lenine's tact and discretion to rescue the Bolshevist bark from the rocks on to which Trotzky's fiery energy had driven it.

"Among his colleagues Trotzky does not enjoy the same respect or admiration as Lenine, and in this connection too much importance should not be attached to the frequent rumors of quarrels between the two men. They are probably untrue. Bolshevist commissaries will always smile whenever one mentions the possibility of a Lenine-Trotzky split. Trotzky, after all, is only one of themselves. Lenine is of the gods.

"This does not mean that Trotzky is to be considered as an insignificant factor in the Bolshevist movement. Originally useful as a journalist and a pamphleteer, he has become to-day the Bolshevist man of action, the Bolshevist imperialist. The Red army, such as it is, is largely his creation."

Trotzy, the orator—

"is a powerful demagogue, hissing out his words with a degree of hate which is not without effect. He is apt, however, to lose his temper in the face of opposition and to take refuge in mere abuse. Rumor has many unkind things to say about his private life and his commercial honesty. They may be untrue, but they give an illustration of the different estimate of the characters of Lenine and Trotzky which exists in the mind of the Russian people. Always neatly dressed and with carefully manicured nails, he is the best dressed of all the Bolshevist commissaries. Vain and easily susceptible to flattery, he is by no means averse from publicity and is, or at any rate was, far more accessible to foreign journalists than his more famous colleague. To-day he has imitated Kerensky's fashion of appearing at Red army concerts or parades in a semi-uniform of khaki, and even his own friends have taunted him with Napoleonic designs.

"When the world is going well with him he can be very affable, and, indeed, is not without a certain charm of manner. In this way he has been able at times to make a favorable first impression upon foreigners, one American in a fit of exuberation once describing him as 'the greatest Jew since Christ.' These impressions, however, do not stand the test of time. Behind those fierce black eyes lurks ever the demon of suspicion and distrust. It is this ever-present fear of treachery which inspires the terrible, pitiless cruelty of which he has been guilty. It was probably after much hesitation and with some misgivings that Trotzky finally threw in his lot with the Bolshevists. To-day, however, he knows that he has crossed a Rubicon to which there is no returning. More conscious of, less indifferent, too, than Lenine to the fate that awaits him in the event of failure, he is prepared to sell his life dearly and to shrink before nothing in his attempt to carry Bolshevism by fair means or foul into the four corners of Europe."

He wired her, "Alma Mater."

More African Unrest.

From a letter in the East African Standard:

"We have indeed reached the stage known as the last straw on the camel's back, and I, for one, am quite prepared as one of the least component parts of the camel to add my iota to the endeavor to kick over the traces. Let us unite and, marching shoulder to shoulder and eye to eye, set sail for that glorious and equally well known goal, 'Who pays the piper calls the tune.'"

No man of spirit could resist so stirring an appeal.—Punch.

PLANNING FOR GREAT OLYMPIAD

PREPARATIONS FOR WORLD'S BIG EVENT IN BELGIUM.

In Toronto this evening the postponed quarterly meeting of the Ontario branch A. A. N. will be held at 22 College street. Discussion regarding the Olympic Games and ways and means of developing talent for the Canadian team will be discussed. It is expected that the annual meeting of the A. A. U. of C. will be held shortly and matters relating to delegates, etc., will be up for debate. Every encouragement is being given to towns and cities to hold meets.

The Registration Committee of the Ontario branch A.A.U. of C. at their weekly meeting approved of the reinstatement of Carsoan Cooper, of Hamilton, who took part in the patriotic lacrosse series in 1917. Sanctions were granted the Diamond B. B. club to hold boxing bouts in Broadway Hall on July 15; Sons of England to hold athletic meet at Island Stadium on Saturday, July 26; North Riverdale Ratepayers' Association to hold games at their peace celebration in Withrow Park on July 19th.

Preparations are being made by the Union to hold the Ontario boys' track and field championships in September, and a modified Marathon race. A trophy that a few years ago was highly valued, it is expected, will be turned over to the Union for the purpose of reviving this once famous classic. Efforts are now being made by the Union officials to bring this about.

5,000 WOMEN FIGHT FANS

SEE WILLARD-DEMPSEY FIGHT AND THEIR FACES DID NOT BLANCHE.

The New York World says: There must have been 5,000 women in the big arena at the Willard-Dempsey bout, and they stood up on the hard, sun-blistered benches and added their shrill cries to the rolls of applause and encouragement that their male companions hurled at the combatants.

And were they dismayed; did their faces blanche; did they reach for smelling salts when the blood fairly sprayed through the air as Dempsey landed blow after blow on Willard's smashed features? No so.

Indeed, there were no signs of fainting even when Dempsey's gore-stained gloves left great red patches on Willard's body and the pouring sweat, curiously streaming through the red, left an effect like an amateur painter's first sunset.

In fact, the women did not seem to care at all whether Jess bled, but they did greet with applause every fresh rally and whirlwind of blows from Dempsey's fists.

There were no cries of "Stop it, please."

Like their husbands and brothers, and sweethearts, the women, some grey heared and motherly looking, appeared to want the chopping up process to go on.

The steamer Rayon D'Or, en route from Portland, Maine, to Yarmouth, went ashore at Big Flat Mud Island.

LINDSAY BOWLERS HERE WEDNESDAY

THREE OR FOUR RINKS WILL CONTEST WITH THE PETES FRIENDLY GAME.

Lindsay Bowlers broke even in a Junior League game at Sunderland on Friday.

Skip Doan won out from Skip Thompson by two shots, while Skip Turner's rink was down six against Skip St. John.

The boys were well treated while at Sunderland, and state that the return game will be played in the evening and at a date to be announced later.

Mr. J. J. Turner has been elected chairman of the executive, which is arranging for the Felt Cup competition as well as the tournament for the McCarty Cup.

Three or four rinks will come to Peterborough Wednesday afternoon next for friendly games.

Batting Averages Intern'l League

LEAFS SHOW A SLUMP—SEE OF ROCHESTER LEADS—KELLY HIS CLOSEST RIVAL.

Latest averages compiled show See of Rochester to be the leading batsman of the International League with the grand average of .387. Kelly the "home run" king, his closest rival, is now hitting at a .380 clip. None of the Leafs are in the charmed circle. Whiteman being the first player in the league to bat three hundred times with an average of .295—nearly .300. "Andy" Anderson, who has been cavorting around right field all week, gained sixteen pounds and is now credited with a .297 average. Gonzales took a big slump, losing twenty-two points. His average is .254. The Leafs lost six points in team batting and are now in sixth place. They have just passed through a hard series where hits were as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. Every other team, with the exception of the Jersey City Skeeters who lost one point, gained during the week. McLarry of Binghampton established a record for hitting in consecutive games. He connected safely in seventeen straight games, but was halted the last time Hersche pitched against him. Breckenridge scored five runs in as many games. Onslow, the Leafs' first sacker is still hitting at a fair clip, although he dropped two points during the week, leaving him with a percentage of .88.

Watson and Hill, Baltimore, lead the pitchers with a perfect average having won three games and lost none.

The real leader, however, is Frank of Baltimore, who has won eleven games and lost but two, giving him the nice average of .846.

Jones has won ten games and lost three, while "Rube" Parnham has been successful in sixteen starts and lost six. Hersche has won seven and lost three. Hubbell by his victory yesterday brought his heaving average up to nine games won and six games lost. Alex Peterson lost one game this week to the Bingoes so his average goes down a little, with six games won and eight games lost. Justin also succumbed once to the Bingoes, having won five and lost seven.

Heavily Fined For Rough Playing

BALL PRESIDENT WILL NOT STAND FOR BOLSHEVIKI STUNTS.

Philadelphia, July 14. Heavy fines were imposed by William F. Baker, President of the Philadelphia National League club on three members of the team for disorderly conduct yesterday.

Pitcher Gene Packard was fined $200 and Pitcher Frank Woodward was penalized $100. Catcher Forrest Cady was fined $100 and given ten days' notice of release.

These players, Baker said, went into their bleachers in centrefield in their street clothes and acted boisterously. One of them harangued the bleacherites against the action of President Baker in changing managers.

CONDITIONS IN ALASKA.

Farm and Factory Overshadowed by the Mining Industry.

The mining industry of Alaska is of the first order of importance to that territory. According to the thirteenth census, out of a total male population of only 39,598, aged fifteen years and over, 8,025 persons, or 20.3 per cent. were engaged or employed in the mining industry in Alaska, which goes to show that mining is of first importance in that territory. The capital invested in this industry was $47,749,000 and the total amount paid during the census year in salaries and wages was $6,819,000.

In marked contrast there were only 222 farms of a total value, including all farm property, of $1,468,000. There were also only 152 manufacturing establishments, with an invested capital of $13,000,000, employing 8,479 persons on salaries or wages, who earned $2,328,000 for services during the census year. In 1913, according to the United States geological survey, there were 466 miles of railway in the territory, covered by nine different systems, from five to 195 miles in length, but only 260 miles were operated. Such transportation facilities are totally inadequate for a territory with a land area of 590,884 square miles. The mining industry is widely distributed throughout the whole of Alaska, and mining operations outside of southeastern Alaska are carried on under climatic conditions fundamentally more or less different from those of the United States.—Engineering and Mining Journal.

BASEBALL CONFIDENCE.

Connie Mack Aims to Make All His Players Self Reliant.

Writing in the American Magazine of his experiences in baseball, Eddie Collins, second baseman for the Philadelphia Athletics, says that Connie Mack is a past master at arousing confidence in his players. Following is one of the stories he tells to make this point:

"There came a situation during the last world series against the Giants that gave Schang, our young catcher, confidence. Barry was on first base, and nobody was out. It was Schang's turn to go to bat, and, turning to Mack, he said:

"'What shall I do—put Barry over' (baseball slang for 'sacrifice') 'or hit?'

"'Use your own judgment,' replied Mack.

"Clearly Mack had confidence in him. An important moment in the world series, Schang doubtless thought, and Mack leaves it all with me. Now, when a young ball player thinks that way he gains self confidence—that is, if he has the right stuff in him. Well, Schang went up there, and instead of doing the easy thing, sacrificing, he chose to hit and drove out a ball that let Barry race to third base.

"The moral of this incident is that it is Mack's policy to create confidence in your own ability. Any man who can do that for other men, I don't care whether it's in baseball or finance, is a master of his profession."

Press Red Tape in China.

New regulations for the control of the press have been issued by the Chinese government. Editors and publishers are required to submit a record of their past to the police before they can obtain permission to publish. This rule in effect gives power to the police to refuse a license to any one who has been connected with political propaganda. Publishers in Peking must deposit with the police $150 for a daily newspaper, $125 for a weekly, $75 for a monthly and $50 for an annual, and the rates are doubled for publications outside Peking. No person under thirty can be the editor, publisher or printer of a newspaper, and no person having a nervous disease can be an editor.

Ocean Newspapers.

The first transatlantic liner to publish a newspaper made up of wireless items was the American liner St. Paul. It was fourteen years ago while Mr. Marconi was crossing the Atlantic on that vessel that he personally directed the issuing of the first number of the Transatlantic Times, the first wireless newspaper published at sea. Such publications now include the Daily Bulletin of the Cunard line, Das Atlantische Tageblatt of the Hamburg-American and the Ocean Times of the White Star line. On the Pacific on steamers running to Alaska the Wireless Herald is published. The stations at Poldhu and Cape Cod furnish most of the wireless news received on board the transatlantic liners in regard to what is going on on shore.—Railroad Reporter and Travelers' News.

THE MURMANSK RAILWAY.

How the Archangel Troops Were Fed.

Fuller details of how the Germans concentrated a large force in Finland late last summer in the hope of seizing the Murmansk Railway and occupying Kola and Murmansk are given in recent despatches. Relatives and friends of troops have an especial interest in this railway since it is the artery which supplied the Allied forces in North Russia with food, clothing and munitions during the long winter months when Archangel itself was closed to shipping by ice.

"Murmansk is the northern terminus of the Murman Railway, a single track line which connects the ice-free port with Petrograd by way of Kandalaksha, Kem, Petrozavodsk and Zvanda, 660 of the 900 miles of the line having been constructed since 1914 in the face of some of the greatest obstacles ever encountered in civil engineering," the bulletin states.

"War work on the Murman Railway began January 1, 1915, with the appointment by the Russian Government of Vladamir Goriachkovsky as the engineer. At his disposal were placed 100,000 workmen, recruited from all parts of the empire.

"The line had to run through a terrain presenting the most discouraging difficulties—swaps, bogs, frozen lakes and almost impenetrable forests. In Russia's peril construction work could not wait until the advent of spring. Soundings were made through the ice by means of long iron rods to determine earth contours, in order to establish the safest roadbeds in swamp country. Much of the surveying during the long nights of the Arctic winter had to be done by lantern light.

"The German propaganda bureau spread reports of frightful mortality among the workmen, but as a matter of fact, although the laborers lived under the most primitive conditions, in tents, the death rate was extremely low. About one per cent. of those taken ill succumbed to scurvy.

"It is true that when the first trains began to run over the partly completed road there were occasions when the track suddenly subsided due to the fact that the rails had been laid upon what were thought to be rocks, but which proved, with the thaw of spring, to be ice. Under the circumstances, however, the mishaps were comparatively rare and no serious accidents resulted. The swampy character of the right of way is indicated by the fact that there are 1,110 bridges on the line.

"To maintain Allied troops operating along the Archangel-Vologda line in the winter of 1918-1919, when the harbor of Archangel was sealed, supplies were shipped by steamer to Murmansk, where they were unloaded and sent by rail to Kandalaksha, a distance of 170 miles, and thence transported by sledges across the frozen White Sea to Archangel, 200 miles to the east."

The Sixth Sense.

The belief of some people that they can always detect the presence of a spider in the same room with them and of other people that they can tell when a cat is near is rousing a lively controversy abroad, and a scientific study of the supposed ability has been undertaken by psychologists. One scientist has advertised for persons who believe they have the strange power and are willing to be tested. The existence of any such sense is denied by many scientists, who ascribe it to the habit of noticing every time a guess is correct and taking no conscious notice of the failures. Others have suggested that it may be true and due to the detection of a faint odor.—Exchange.

Passing of the Foreign Country.

Gradually the foreign country is passing from the world's map. In the international consciousness of the progressive peoples of the earth it has already disappeared. Geographically, we are drawing closer together, so that "a foreign people" is a misnomer. New trade routes, short cuts, railroads, canals and steamships make the world one. Distance is a matter of time, not miles. Wireless stations are being established by which we are to talk around the globe.

Found a New Kind of Whale.

A new kind of whalebone whale has recently been discovered in the south Atlantic. It is nearly as large as the finback, the more familiar whale of those waters. But instead of subsisting on minute crustaceans it feeds on small schooling fishes, such as young herring and mackerel. The frayed ends of its baleen, or whalebone, are not curled into a woolly fringe, like those of the finback, which needs a fringe in order to entrap its minute food, but are straight and comblike. The new species has quite as much commercial value as its better known relative.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Mouth Sanitation.

The mouth is the seat of many of the communicable diseases. Because this is true mouth sanitation is important. A clean mouth and sound teeth are pretty big factors in protecting our physical health, and this is especially true of children. Teach the child to keep its mouth and teeth clean and it will be far less likely to attacks of the usual epidemic diseases peculiar to childhood, and while teaching the child do not forget to set a good example by rigidly practicing what you preach.

AN ARTIFICIAL STORM.

Ingenious Electric Sign on One of New York's Theaters.

In front of the new Strand theater, New York, is an electric sign designed to attract attention to the name of the theater by representing a lightning stroke from some artificial clouds to earth and producing a blue flash and a crash as the lightning strikes. The clouds are very ingeniously constructed so as not to display their source of illumination and to represent sheet lightning prior to the direct stroke.

The clouds consist of horizontal metal strips arranged like a louver so that the light from within is diffused over the visible portion of the vanes, which are painted to represent clouds. By causing the light to flicker a semblance of sheet lightning is produced, after which a zigzag stroke darts downward along the sign, terminating with a flash and a crash from the discharge of high potential energy across a gap. The high potential discharge is caused by an oscillator similar to that used in wireless telegraph work. The coil is installed within the building, and the terminals are led out through insulated bushings to the discharge points.

While the lightning stroke is spectacular the noise accompanying the discharge at the gap is decidedly more so and is very effective in attracting the attention of those who pass by.—Electrical World.

CURIOUS FATALITY.

The Very Long Arm of Coincidence In a Transvaal City.

A strange fatality seems to be connected with the office of the mayor of Uitenhage, in the Transvaal, South Africa. Fourteen gentlemen have occupied that position, including the present incumbent, and thirteen are dead. No ex-mayor save one has lived for more than a year or so after vacating the civic chair, and the extraordinary thing is that twelve of the thirteen died on a Saturday and were buried on a Sunday. The late Mr. Ward passed away at Sea Point recently on a Friday and was therefore the only exception in this respect. But he, too, the thirteenth, was interred in Uitenhage on a Sunday.

This curious fatality rather got on the nerves of the late T. W. Mills, M. [illegible], a whilom mayor of Uitenhage, and it was his custom to close his game at [illegible] at midnight on Saturday with the pious remark, "Well, thank God [illegible] got another Saturday safely over." [illegible] eventually retired from the country, [illegible] entered parliament, contracted [illegible] disease, died on a Saturday and was buried on a Sunday.—Oudtshoorn South African Courant.

Largest Underground Waterworks.

The city of Prague and the closely attached suburban municipalities of Karlin, Smichov, Weinberge and Zizkov, with a total population of about 500,000, have just completed one of the world's largest underground waterworks systems at a cost of $5,000,000. The water is supplied by 575 small and by seven large artesian wells. These wells are fifteen miles from the city of Prague. As the water is pumped out of them it runs by gravitation through pipes into a reservoir. Enlargement is possible by the location on the same strip of land of more wells.

Ancient Gambling Games.

It is known that from the earliest Roman times the games of tali and tessera were played with dice, but their invention has been attributed by the Grecian poets and sophists to Palamedes, who in 1244, B. C., joined the Greeks in their expedition against Troy, where, by some writers, Palamedes is said to have been slain by an arrow from the bow of Paris. In addition to the invention of dice, Palamedes is said to have invented lighthouses, measures, scales, the discus, the alphabet and the art of regulating sentinels.

The Stormy Petrel.

The birds known to sailors as Mother Carey's chickens, whose appearance is supposed to foretell a storm, are otherwise known by the term stormy petrel (Thalassidroma pelagica). The bird seems to run in a remarkable manner along the surface of the sea, where it picks up its food. The petrel is a small bird of dusky plumage, nocturnal in habit, most abundant in the southern hemisphere. The name Mother Carey is supposed to be a corruption of the "Mother Cara"—dear mother—of Levantine sailors.

Perfume Their Dead.

Natives of Torres Strait islands, to the north of Queensland, have some peculiar burial customs. One is the anointing the bodies with cheap perfume, the remainder being corked in the bottle and left on the grave. In some cases a cheap stone is set on the grave and this ceremony is usually marked by a three-days' gorge on the part of the relatives of the departed, pig, yams and turtle being shaken down to make room for more by vigorous dancing and singing.

SAILOR IN U. S. NAVY MAY HAVE INCOME OF MILLION DOLLARS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, July 14. When the giant liner Imperator docked at Hoboken last night there climbed out of the stoke hole a coal passer who has suddenly come into incomes of $480,000 a year. He is S. L. Perkins, a sailor in the United States navy.

In 1913 Perkins bought an eight-acre farm, three miles north-east of his home town, and planted corn on it. During the war he enlisted in the navy. Just before the Imperator sailed from here for Brest to load troops, Perkins, who had been assigned to her fire room force, received word from his father that a six thousand barrel gusher had been located on his farm. The drillers started to bore seven other wells and they figure the eight might shoot his income up to a million dollars a year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL UNDER TREES

OVER 100 TOOK PART IN EXERCISES YESTERDAY AT BRAUNDPORT.

A Sunday School has been in operation at "Braundport," down the river, during the camping season, for a number of years, under the auspices of the Salvation Army. This Sunday School is in charge of Mr R. C. Braund, superintendent of the Sunday School at the Temple, on Simcoe street.

The School meets at 11 o'clock on Sunday mornings, and the attendance is good every Sunday. Yesterday's attendance was a record breaker for this year, when 102 people met under the trees at Braundport. This record is almost up to last year's, which was 108 at the end of the season. The attendance has risen very rapidly this year, as on the first Sunday, some four weeks ago, the congregation numbered only eight.

All campers are invited to these services, they are interesting, and a variety is provided to avoid monotony.

57th BAND PRACTICE

The 57th Regiment Band will practice tonight at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

REVIVAL SERVICES TO BE KEPT UP FOR THREE NIGHTS LONGER

Vote of Large Audience Taken at Meeting Last Night—Evangelist Kennedy Preached One of His Most Powerful Discourses

The big meeting held in the tent on Hunter street last evening in the union evangelistic campaign, was full of interest from start to finish. The tent was filled to overflowing and Evangelist H. D. Kennedy gave one of the most searching addresses he has yet delivered. Originally it was thought that the meetings would run for the four weeks, concluding last night. So much interest has been aroused in the meetings that a vote of the audience was taken last evening, with the result that it was decided to continue the meetings till next Wednesday night at least. Including those that took place last night, about 50 conversions haev been recorded to date and many more are still expected. In the audience last evening was a party of 16 from Oshawa who visited the city especially to hear Mr. Kennedy, who is well known in Oshawa where he conducted a special campaign some months ago.

Mr. Kennedy's Methods.

There is a great deal of psychology in the handling of an evangelistic campaign. Mr. Kennedy seems to be a master of this side of the subject. He often asks his audience to do things without explaining his purpose, yet there is a purpose behind it. Unconverted people when they enter such a meeting as was held last night, do so with their mind made up to resist any appeal that may be made to them. Last evening during the singing of one of the songs Mr. Kennedy asked everybody to shake hands first with the neighbor on their right, next with their neighbor on the left and finally with the person standing behind them. Nearly everybody did so, though there was considerable laughter and indifference about it. A little later he asked all present to do as he did. He then raised his hands over his head and as the verse of the hymn was sung kept time with his hands. Such methods as these break up the stiffness of a meeting and prepares the audience for the gospel message in a way that only those who have studied the effect of such practices can best appreciate.

A Request That Did Not Fail.

On several occasions at the beginning of the campaign Mr. Kennedy asked certain of the Christians present to comeforward for one purpose or another. This was to prepare them for the meetings later in the campaign so that they would move quickly and assist new converts in going to the front. Often a convert hesitates to go forward alone, but is ready to go forward among a number of Christians. Christians who at first hesitated to fall in with Mr. Kennedy's requests have done so wellingly since they have learned the purpose that was behind it. Last evening as the audience was large and people were sitting close together, Mr. Kennedy asked every lady who had paid for her hat if she would mind removing it. After such a request it was not to be wondered at that there was a ready response to his appeal.

From the start of the present campaign no collections have been taken up on week nights. Instead, a quiet canvass has been conducted among the Christian people of the city for the several hundred dollars of funds required to meet the expenses of the campaign. Last evening the chairman announced that the committee was going to be able to pay all expenses in full promptly at the close of the campaign. A few more subscriptions are required to enable the committee to do this, but it is believed that these will be forth-coming. Many of the chief bills have already been paid.

Subjects of Addresses.

As this week may see the close of the campaign considerable interest is being taken in the subjects that are to be discussed. Tonight Mr. Kennedy will speak on "The Heart of the Gospel." Two weeks ago he gave this address in the morning in St. Paul's Presbtyerian Church. It made such an impression, in most cases favorable, but in a few cases unfavorable, that he has been asked to repeat it tonight and by special request has consented to do so. On one occasion after delivering this address in Eugene, Oregon, it made such a deep impression that at the request of the pastor and people it was repeated later on a Sunday afternoon to an audience of 1,000 people and at its close many conversions were reported.

Tomorrow night Mr. Kennedy will speak on the "Second Coming." He said last night that many foolish ideas have been expressed in regard to the second coming and particularly since the outbreak of the war. He has never spoken on this subject until within the past year or so, but after several years 'study of the subject he has felt that he has been called to use it and has always had many conversions after its delivery. On Wednesday evening his subject will be "Good Cheer."

There was quite an array of ministers on the platform last night. Those present including Rev. Mr. Ross of Mark Street and Messrs. Greatrix, Webb, Mallott, Pogue and Thomas. A solo was rendered verly effectively by Mr. Mulligan.

Last Night's Address.

Mr. Kennedy's subject last evening was "The Handwriting on the Wall," and was based on the incident recorded in the book of Daniel about Belshazzar's feast, the text being, "Then the king's countenance was changed and his thoughts troubled him." Mr. Kennedy showed that Belshazzar was the greatest king of his time, that his throne was in the centre of the most strongly fortified city known, that he had a great army about him, that he was defiant of God and man and to show his disregard to God had used the holy vessels captured in Jerusalem, in which to serve liquor at the feast. Yet his thoughts troubled him, and that night judgment visited him and he was dead before the morning. Mr. Kennedy stated that wicked men and women today may act defiantly toward God, although none of them know how short their lease on life may be, and how soon they may have to stand before God in judgment.

Law Versus Gospel.

Mr. Kennedy stated that some people have a good deal to say about the requirements of the ten commandments. They do not seem to understand that the requirements of the Sermon on the Mount are much more exacting. For instance, the Ten Commandments say, "Thou shalt not kill, and whosoever killeth shall be in danger of the judgment." The Sermon on the Mount says, 'That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause is in danger of the judgment." Mr. Kennedy then weighed his audience by applying one after the other of the Ten Commandments to them and showed how far short people fall of keeping them. Taking God's name in vain was made to include people who pretend to be Christians on Sunday but disregard his commandments on week days. "Thou shalt not steal" was applied to Christians who run accounts with people without paying them, or who defraud others in any way. "Honor thy father and mother" was applied to those young people who speak of their parents as "the old man" or "the old woman," or who by their bad conduct cause their parents distress. By the time Mr. Kennedy got through few, if any, of those present felt they had any righteousness of their own that they could stand on. In concluding, Mr. Kennedy showed that the only method of salvation is by faith in the righteousness of Christ, which is sufficient for the utmost need of every sinner.

SPARKS FROM KENNEDY'S ANVIL

Supposing a girl newly engaged sees her lover the next day flirting with another girl.

Once a shoe maker had up for his motto, "Christ first, family second, and shoes third," that is being a real Christian.

Some folks only take excursions to Christ on Sunday. Other days of the week they are as worldly as sinners, they don't fool anybody but themselves. The world has its own way of turning the x-ray on the followers of Christ.

G.W.V.A. DECORATE COMRADE'S GRAVES

BEAUTIFUL AND TOUCHING CEREMONY AT ST. PETER'S CEMETERY YESTERDAY.

The Great War Veterans decorated the graves of four of their Roman Catholic comrades who died while in the military service during the great war.

One died at Halifax, one here in this city and two made the supreme sacrifice in the battle field. They are:

COMRADE BOYLE.
COMRADE GRADY.
COMRADE BOLIN.
COMRADE TUCKER.

These deceased comrades are interred in St. Peter's cemetery, which the Veterans reached in parade order, headed by their band shortly after three o'clock.

On approaching the cemetery the band played with faithful expression that beautiful old comforting hymn, "Abide Mith Me."

Just within the cemetery gates the national flag floated in the breeze from a staff in the centre of a grass oval from which all paths radiate. A motto at the foot of this flag pole read: "In memory of our heroes who have fallen in the great war."

The Vets lined up beside each grave, to which they were escorted by Rev. Father Phelan and Comrade Staunton reverently placed thereon floral tributes and a Union Jack in memory of the departed comrade.

50,000 Fallen.

Rev. Father Phelan, at the conclusion of the decorating ceremony, indorsed the sentiment of the G. W. V. A. in making their decoration day an annual event, and invited all present to go with him in spirit to the graves of the 50,000 braves Canadians who have fallen in the war, and who sleep their last sleep beneath the sod of poplar adorned Belgium and the poppy-clothed fields of martyred France. "You Veterans," he said, "like them, went overseas prepared to make the supreme sacrifice, but Almighty God, in His mercy, has spared you to return and engage in this beautiful memorial ceremony today. Death will come to all you men, even as it hath visited these, your comrades, the principle of self-sacrifice for which two died, and for which two were prepared to die, was exemplified in the death of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross at Calvary for the salvation of all mankind." The reverend gentleman hoped that the G.W.V.A. would reflect the fundamental doctrine of the Christian church, for which Christ died, in inculcating those principles that make for a brotherhood of man, charity for all mankind and a love of God.

In conclusion, Rev. Father Phelan thanked the G.W.V.A. for the adoption of this annual decoration day that the graves of departed comrades may be kept ever green as their own will be when their turn comes to answer the summons of death.

GLORIOUS 12TH AT COBOURG TOWN

HUGE PROCESSION—PETERBORO LODGE NO. 50 WINS COMPLIMENTS.

The Twelfth of July celebration at Cobourg, Saturday, was a huge success in every way, the weather was ideal for parading and speeches and entertainment in general of a commendable nature.

The grand parade formed on the pretty lake shore part, at one o'clock, marched around this pretty Ontario summer resort, with flags flying and bands playing, and returned to the park again at about the stroke of two.

One of the Finest

It is contended that the procession was one of the largest ever held in this district, taking 55 minutes to pass a given point. Some 50 or 60 lodges took part, including three women's lodges. LodgeNo 50, of Peterborough, with which Alderman Edgar marched is credited with having been the best lodge in the parade in point of both numbers, dress, and military step and bearing.

Orderly and Self-Contained

The doing of the day were so orderly and self-contained that Cobourg resembled the scene of a huge Sunday School picnic.

The Peterborough excursionists returned at nine o'clock and marched from the G. T. R. station along Charlotte to Water street, then to Brock street, and down George street to the local lodge rooms, in the Victoria Hall.

There seemed to be plenty to eat in little Cobourg this time.

The tag day for St Joseph's Hospital Chatham brought $1,433.

VISITING SCENES OF EARLY YOUTH

MR. J. E. HODGSON, OF SPRINGFIELD, MASS., RENEWS OLD ACQUAINTENCE.

Mr. J. E. Hodgson, a former resident of Peterborough, who left here in 1902 to go to Springfield, Mass., is visiting friends in this city, having arrived here Sunday morning. The members of Mr Hodgson's family are holding a reunion in honor of Walter Hodgson, a brother, just back from overseas, who enlisted in Edmonton and who will spend some time here before leaving for his home in Detroit. A sister will arrive from Wheeling, W. Va., to visit her brother.

Mr. J. E. Hodgson was a well-known physician while residing in Peterborough, and, with his brother Walter, was a member of the 57th Band. His last visit to his old home was made six years ago, and in the interval he notes the many improvements that have been made in the general appearance of the city and the air of progress that seems to mark all of the residents. Mr. Hodgson will be in the city for a week or more, and will have a busy time of it meeting his many friends. The first man he noticed on his arrival Saturday morning was an Orangeman in full regalia, and this reminded him of the old days when as a fifer he led many a parade on the Twelfth of July.

FARMER FACING MURDER CHARGE DROPS DEAD IN POLICE COURT

Respected and Aged Resident Had Shot Man Found in Pig-tye and Shock Was Too Much For Him.

Collingwood, July 17.—Under especially peculiar circumstances a double tragedy was enacted here yesterday. It began on the farm of Amos Sherrick, on the outskirts out the town, about half past one o'clock when Sherrick fired a shotgun at a young man named John Mooney whom he found in his pig sty, and who was endeavoring to make his escape from the place. It ended by the sudden death of Sherrick in the Police Court when standing before Police Magistrate Hogg, preparing to listen to the formal charge of murder which had been laid against him by the police.

Hit Him in Back

According to the statement of Mr. Sherrick, he was aroused by the barking of his dog, about half-past one, when he found Mooney at his pig sty. On his challenging Mooney, the latter ran out and tried to knock him down, but failed in this and dashed down the road which goes past the farm. Sherrick fired a shotgun at Mooney, the charge lodging in the back under the right shoulder, and causing death a few minutes later.

Chief of Police Johnstone was called to the scene and placed Sherrick under arrest, and at 10 o'clock he came before the Magistrate facing a capital charge, when he died suddenly of heart failure.

Mooney's body was removed to Collingwood and Coroner A. M. McFaul has empanelled a jury which sat, and after viewing the body, adjourned until Tuesday morning next.

Too Much For Old Man

Mooney was a returned soldier about thirty years' of age, while Sherrick was in his sixty-fifth year, and had been a resident of Nottawasaga Township for many years. He was a very quiet man and highly respected. The shock of the death of Mooney undoubtedly caused his death.

TO PROSECUTE ULSTER LEADER

SIR EDWARD CARSON'S CASE IS UP IN BRITISH COMMONS.

London, July 17.—Sir Edward Carson's speech on Saturday has brought the Ulster leader under the lash of the newspapers of all parties, primarily on account of his references to the United States, which are criticised as tactless and calculated to breed bad blood between the two nations, and, secondly, because he reiterated his old threat to call out the Ulster Volunteers to resist any attempt to place the Home Rule Act in operation.

The Labor organs are not slow to point out how such incitement to "direct action" could be improved on in the industrial field for securing political ends. The liberal pro-Irish papers are equally quick to point out that in point of tactics there is no difference between "King De Valera" and "King Carson."

Challenges Government.

The matter came up in the House of Commons when the Speaker gave John Robert Clynes, Laborite, permission to move adjournment of the House for the purpose of challenging the Government to set the law in motion against Sir Edward Carson for a speech inciting violence and endangering the safety of the realm. Mr. Clynes said there were many poor illiterate men now in prison for saying less harmful things than Sir Edward Carson had said. It was the government's duty to see that the law was equitably enforced.

Allegations Break Down.

Attorney-General Sir Gordon Hewart declared that the allegation that Sir Edward Carsons' speeches incited to a breach of the law and violence had broken down. There was nothing in the speech in question upon which it was possible to found legal proceedings. The passage referring to the calling out of volunteers was hypothetical and contingent on depriving Ulster people of their rights as British subjects, and this nobody proposed to do.

By a vote of 217 to 73 the House rejected a motion by J. R. Clynes, Labor member, urging the Government to prosecute Sir Edward Carson for his speech of incitement to violence and breach of the law.

Labor Not Tricked By Political Dodge

HAS NO REPRESENTATIVE FOR THE LIBERAL CONVENTION AT OTTAWA.

At the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night the question of representation at the Liberal convention in Ottawa in August was brought up. Reference was made to the fact that at the meeting of the Liberal party here when delegates were chosen it had been stated by the chairman that the selection of Mr. G. N. Gordon was a concession to labor. The sentiment of the meeting last night was that no man without a union card in his pocket could represent Labor at any gathering of the kind.

Peterborough Street Cars

Ald. Morrison gave a report of the Aldermanic conference held yesterday with Sir Adam Beck, in Toronto, regarding the street car system here. Briefly, Sir Adam declined to extend the road unless the city assumed the cost. The one man cars are regarded as safe and will remain as at present despite protests. Ald. Morrison gave it as his opinion that the city would soon take over the control of the road.

About the only definite assurance that the deputation received from the Commission was the promise that the wages of the employes of the system will be increased to forty cents an hour.

SILENCE GIVES CONSENT

Ald. Phelan, yesterday, expressed his astonishment at some members of the City Council, paying too much heed to Mr. R. R. Hall's warning in the press, that the Alderman "May go on and complete their breach of trust and court individual loss by proceeding with the new bridge under contract with the Russell-Townsend Co., on a cost-plus basis."

"They seemed more scared at this letter of Mr. Hall," remarked the chairman of the Board of Works," than at the Kearn's injunction."

Let the Work Go Ahead

Now, Ald. Phelan, although holding out for a lump-sum contract and finally realizing that such a one of an acceptable nature to the majority of the council was not forthcoming, is now as anxious as any one that the bridge shall be proceeded with at once. He is not at all afraid of the Russell-Townsend proposition overstepping the financial mark, and is more especially satisfied with the contract now that it provides that a steel centre span may be resorted to should circumstances warrant. And he cannot see what on earth the Mayor and the few Aldermen of his views need be afraid of.

OBJECTS TO OFFICIAL LASH FOR CHILDREN

Editor Review:—I was shocked to read in your issue of today of the punishment given two children of six and nine years of age. Your account says these little fellows were beaten with a cat-o-nine tails, an instrument of torture usually reserved for men guilty of a moral offence and by no means given to such men inevitably. Your article on the matter is so restrained and general in its tone that I feel that the first impression given by your news item must be a wrong one. Surely no magistrate could pronounce such a sentence on children, surely it must have been difficult to find a Canadian to carry it into effect. If the brutal thing be true then the sooner Peterborough has a juvenile court the better. Let us keep the knout for men and for men's offences and treat naughty children in a more fatherly spirit of correction. This thing isn't decent as it is printed in your news column of today and unless explained and put in a totally different light will put a blot on the fair name of Peterborough.

Yours truly,
A. W. MACKENZIE

WILL CITY ACQUIRE STREET RAILWAY?

AND OPERATE SAME AS MUNICIPAL-OWNED PUBLIC UTILITY.

Ald. Edgar, chairman of the city Legal Committee, together with Aldermen Crowe and Morrison met Sir Adam Beck in Toronto, yesterday by appointment.

A very satisfactory conference transpired and the Aldermen have returned encouraged in the hope for an early acquisition by the city of the Peterborough street railway, on advantageous terms.

The delegation's real object of their visit was to press on the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario further extensions. But considering that the acquiring by Peterborough of this railway, and operating it as its own public utility, is a live question with the municipality the Commission's idea is to encourage an early transferrance after which the city could make its own extensions.

Alderman Edgar has called a meeting of his Railways Committee, for tomorrow evening when he will report the actual results of his deputation's interview with Sir Adam Beck, and submit figures for digestion.

Before taking over the street railway as a municipally-owned public utility, ratepayers must endorse such a proposition at the polls.

Dublin, July 17.—All grades of officials of the City Corporation have signed a memorial to the Lord Mayor of Dublin asking him [illegible] to recognize July 19th, Peace Day, as a holiday, on the ground that "a state of war exists between the British Government and the Irish people and the latter do not desire to participate in peace celebrations."

Arbitrators Will Deal With Strike

Ottawa, July 17.—The Minister of Labor has appointed a board of conciliation to deal with the dispute between some twenty master bakers of Toronto and their bread drivers. There are about 600 men directly and 800 indirectly involved in the dispute. The men were on strike but have now gone back to work.

As the firms involved were not public utility corporations, a board could be established only by mutual consent of the disputing parties. The master bakers have appointed F. H. McGuigan of Toronto as their representative on the board, and the men will be represented by W. Clay. They will select the chairman, or, failing an agreement, he will be appointed by the Minister.

Paris, July 17.—The Bulgarian delegation which is to receive the [illegible] terms, will arrive in Paris, July 25th.

TRADES COUNCIL TAKES UP CASE OF CHILDREN IN POLICE COURT

Judgement Given by Magistrate Sentencing Young Boys to Lash to be Brought to Attention of Attorney General—Other Matters Dealt With at Last Night's Meeting.

Delegates Noonan, Houston and Mathews, at the meeting of the Trades Council last night were appointed a committee to call to the attention of Attorney-General Lucas a recent police court case in this city in which Magistrate Dumble sentenced two boys, one six and the other nine years old, to five and ten lashes, respectively, the punishment to be administered in the presence of their parents. In addition to this, the parents were required to make restitution of the goods stolen by the boys and for the damage they did when they broke into a local store. If the parents failed in this regard the boys were to serve jail sentences.

After Ald. Garside.

A resolution was adopted calling on Ald. Garside to appear before the Trades Council at the next meeting to give an account of his aldermanic stewardship and to explain why on a recent occasion he voted against the day labor idea for public works and also against the eight-hour law. Ald. Morrison, who was present, came to the rescue of his colleague and declared that any man was liable to make mistakes by failing to understand just what was contained in the matter under consideration. Ald. Morrison also gave a detailed report of the conference which Ald. Crowe and Edgar and himself had yesterday with Sir Adam Beck in Toronto on the street car situation here, a report of which will appear in another column.

Deporting Aliens.

Acting Minister of Justice Meighen wrote in reply to a protest recently sent in from Peterborough against the deportation of aliens without a hearing and the trial of the strike leaders in Canada. Mr. Meighen stated that all British subjects would be given a trial by jury, but that aliens who come under the operation of the Immigration Act would be dealt with by Hon. J. A. Calder, the head of that department.

One-Man Street Cars.

In reply to the protest against the operation of one-man street cars in this city, Joseph Gibbons of the Toronto Street Railwaymen's Union, wrote that the Railway and Municipal Board has nothing to do with cars operated by the Hydro Commission. In Toronto two-men cars are run by special agreement.

Labor Leaders and Profiteers.

A communication from the Prince Rupert Trades Council asked for concurrence in a suggestion sent to Premier Borden that for every labor leader placed on trial one profiteer be put in the same box, Sir Joseph Flavelle to head the list. This recommendation was unanimously approved.

Petitions in Circulation.

Petitions asking for a special session of the Legislature to enact an eight hour day, farmers to be excluded, and one protesting against the deportation of aliens without a hearing are being circulated in this city. The delegates also protested against the bringing to this city of travelling entertainment companies on special terms in competition with tax-paying concerns already here.

Hugh Stevenson a visitor.

Hugh Stevenson, at present connected with the Factory Department, was a visitor at the Council last night and gave a brief address on general labor topics in which he declared his opposition to the O. B. U. idea. Mr. Stevenson organized the Printers' Union in this city about twenty years ago and the Trades and Labor Council later, and is naturally pleased to find that both organizations are in a flourishing condition.

THE MASONIC ORDER WILL HELP IN PUTTING DOWN ALL SEDITIOUS ACTS

Reports Submitted at Meeting of Grand Lodge in Toronto Show Steady Increase in Membership.

Toronto, July 17.—The reports submitted at the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Masons in session here show that there are now on the roll of the Grand Lodge, 458 lodges, with a membership of 69,775, an increase of 3,705 over last year. All but thirteen of these are warranted, the thirteen being under dispensation.

The aim of Masonry is concisely set forth in the report on its condi[illegible] report acknowledges that these are abnormal times, the condition of masonry therefore, for they aim at the establishment of the reign [illegible] the reign of light, it claims is of national significance in this year. "The craft" the report says, "will welcome progressive evolution consistent with good Government and reasoned prudence, but will certainly condemn revolution, riot, sedition and schism, and will demand the adequate deterrent and repressive punishment of those who neither fear God, love the brotherhood nor honor the King."

Attention was drawn to the fact that the Masonic order would fall short of its boasted loyalty and brotherliness unless it saw to the material welfare of its twelve to fifteen thousand members who served in the ranks of the army.

Disability Not a Bar.

Much discussion took place over the proposed amendment dealing with the admission of disabled soldiers to the craft. It was finally decided that any man intelligent enough to be given admission to masonry should [illegible] debarred because of a physical disability. It will be left to the [illegible] Master of each lodge to decide in each case, however, subject to the approval of the Grand Ma[illegible]

Rt. W. Thos. Rowe, of London, presented a motion for the approval of the delegates that hereafter the annual meeting of the grand Lodge be held in the month of May instead of July, supporting it with the arguments that under the present usage reduced railway fares could not be secured, and that many were away on vacation during this month. Those opposed to the motion submitted that for sixty-four years the Grand Lodge had met in July and that it should not be changed now, also that numbers of school teachers would be unable to attend if held in May. The motion was defeated.

The Grand Master rebuked those Masons who, when seeking public office, have in writing requested brother Masons to support them. He says: "I would like to call the attention of the brethren to the fact that men seeking public office have addressed letters to the brethren to support them because they are Masons. This is a great breach of Masonic conduct, and should be frowned down by the Masons wherever it is [illegible]. We teach principles. We are not a political society."

A number of other reports were read and adopted, and a motion thanking the Grand Master and his work was passed.

[illegible] evening the brethren of the Toronto districts gave a concert to the visiting delegates in the auditorium of the Masonic Temple. The entertainers were Mr. J. Campbell McInnis, Mr. Lawrence J. Lugsdin, Mr. Boris Hambourg, Mrs. Mabel Pickard, with Bro. H. A. Fricker and Miss Madge Williamson at the piano. Entertainers from Shea's Hippodrome and Lowe's Theatre were also present, and [illegible] number of acts.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1919

CIVIC HANDICAPS.

THERE IS SOMETHING the matter with any community where in any public movement the entire burden is thrown upon two or three volunteers while the others not only fail to lend a hand but cannot be restrained from adverse criticism of what the others are doing and belittling the results achieved. The hammer should be buried. The get-together spirit must be cultivated.

THE HUNTER STREET CAMPAIGN.

THE HUNTER STREET campaign, which closed last night in the big tent was in many ways remarkable. In the first place, it was conducted by Evangelist H. D. Kennedy in his home town. A prophet, it seems, is not always without honor in his own country, Mr. Kennedy's case being the exception required to prove the rule. He was born in the immediate neighborhood, and was not only an attendant of a local church in his youth, but he graduated from the Collegiate Institute here. There are hundreds of citizens who are acquainted with him. The compliment that can be paid to him, not only personally but with reference to his work as well, is a plain statement of the fact that people turned out by the hundreds to hear him for thirty-two consecutive nights and on Sunday evening the tent was not large enough to accommodate the crowds.

Mr. Kennedy has given a wonderful example of earnestness and energy throughout the services. It is customary for evangelists to preach only six nights a week, but he took no holidays during the progress of the revival, and every Saturday evening found him in his place. When it is noted that he preached at least an hour on each occasion and put all the force of an energetic nature into his sermons, his sustained effort appears all the more remarkable.

There was a pleasing spirit of Christian unity throughout the services not only among the promoters but in the congregations as well. Pastors and members of the leading churches in the city, as well as representatives from the choirs were in constant attendance, their presence and assistance an inspiration to the seekers after truth. Perhaps, and most pleasing of all, the majority of those who attended every night were those who are not regular churchgoers. There was among them a spirit of fraternity, unlike the church-made cordiality, that shakes the hand of the stranger on Sunday and leaves him to his own devices during the other six days of the week. In the revival services, too, the subscribing to any particular tenet of dogmatic theology was not made a condition of conversion.

Every sermon in the series preached by Evangelist Kennedy, every important statement he made with regard to the plan of salvation, was based on scriptural authority, which beyond all question accounts for their popularity among those who heard them. There must be sincerity and power, too, about a preacher who in his own town night after night for over a month was able to attract audiences in increasing numbers.

The scope of the sermons, however, was not confined to those who heard them. The extensive reports that appeared every day in the local papers, with the epigrams gleaned from the discourses, were went throughout the entire community and were read by thousands. Mr. Kennedy really had the attention and interest of hundreds who were never able to attend the meetings.

Another agency in the work was the distribution of religious literature by Mr. Kennedy, who during the services gave away whole volumes of tracts at his own expense, tracts that he himself had read and to the helpfulness of which he was able to testify.

A word as to the finances. The preparations for the revival, including the tent and the seating, involved an expense of over $800. The arrangements were not extravagant, but the place was comfortable and in excellent taste. No one guaranteed the outlay. No collections were taken up except on Sunday evenings, an unusual procedure in such services. Yet the campaign closes with all bills paid and a balance on hand. Subscriptions, unsolicited, were handed in during the campaign by citizens who appreciated the work that was being done.

It is impossible to estimate the results from the number of conversions. The seeds of truth were scattered broadcast and may yet germinate. Many a random shaft finds its mark. An example of quick returns may be cited here. Last Sunday night Mr. Kennedy impressed upon his audience the fact that no man could be a Christian unless he paid his honest debts when he was able to do so. Next day, it is of record, a citizen who heard that sermon called at a local store and paid for a suit of clothes for which he had been owing for the past thirteen years.

No small share of the success of the reival is due to the work of Mr. G. W. Mulligan, who conducted the musical part of the services and rendered solo after solo with characteristic skill and feeling. Mr. Fred Walden acted almost every night as accompanist, and the choirs of the city churches gave of their best from the beginning.

THE SINS OF THE PARENTS.

THE DELEGATES to the Trades Council at their meeting last night appointed a committee that is charged with the task of calling to the attention of the Attorney-General a decision recently handed down in the Police Court by Magistrate Dumble. The story of that case as reported in the papers, when the matter was disposed of the other day, was to the effect that two boys, one nine and the other six years old, were convicted of burglary. The older boy was sentenced to endure ten and the younger five lashes, this punishment to be inflicted by a policeman, the parents being required to witness the proceedings. In addition to this, the parents of the boys were ordered to make good the damage which their children had done and to make restitution of what had been stolen. Failing this, the children of tender years were to serve sentences in jail.

The action of the Trades Council last night in a measure removes this matter from the field of newspaper discussion. In taking the course which he did the other day, Magistrate Dumble is following precedents established by himself. His favorite remedy for juvenile delinquency is the lash. He takes the children from parental jurisdiction for the time being and turns them over to an official lasher, probably with the intention of impressing the tender minds with an idea of the awful majesty of the law.

There are juvenile courts all over America. In Peterborough alone is this drastic method of punishment employed, and it is a relic of the barbarous days when force was the chief agency used in dealing with offenders. The tendency of the times is all in the direction of [illegible] reform. Corporal punishment is being abolished in penitentiaries, not for any sentimental reason, but because it has been found that such methods make bad men ten times worse, if possible. Occasionally an offender against womanhood is still sentenced to the lash, but such a court decree never fails to arouse a protest. If a boy of six and another of nine years are to be publicly whipped, are there no humanitarians left in this city to voice an objection?

If a horse balked on the streets or showed other evidence of equine depravity, and if the owner or driver of that horse lashed the animal in the same measure as the elder boy in question was whipped the other day, that man would be liable to a fine or imprisonment. No man could with impunity so lash his dog. Are horses and dogs of more value than our own children; are they entitled to more considerate treatment?

What does a boy of six or even nine years of age know of the distinction between right and wrong? Perhaps it is true, as so often charged, that the parents of juvenile delinquents are themselves to blame because of careless management. But this is not true in all cases. The child, naturally prone to sin, often departs from the narrow path in which he has been taught to tread. If parents are to be held accountable for the transgressions of their offspring of tender or mature years, then may heaven be merciful to the fathers and mothers whose sons and daughters so often go astray in spite of the care with which they were reared in Christian homes.

MR. STRICKLAND'S APPOINTMENT.

THE APPOINTMENT of Mr. J. F. Strickland as chief enumerator for West Peterborough will give general satisfaction, as beyond all question he is well fitted for the important duties which the position entails. He will take up the work, possessing the entire confidence of the community that his task will be faithfully and efficiently performed. His selection is not only a well-deserved compliment to the War Veterans, but marks a gratifying departure in political methods, besides being a flattering recognition of the merits of a rising young man who takes up private life again after an honorable career in the service of his country.

WHERE TITLES HAVE NO PLACE.

THE WAR VETERANS risked their lives in a task which has been acclaimed as that of making the world safe for democracy, and perhaps no more fitting term could be found to describe the stupendous work which they so gallantly and unselfishly performed.

Now that the war is over, the men who helped win it with glory to their nation and honor to themselves, are giving the world a practical illustration of the object for which they fought. Every branch of the G.W.V.A. in Canada is a model democratic state. There in very truth all men are equal. There are no petty class distinctions among the men who wore the King's uniform, whether the garb was that of a private or carried the trappings which showed that the wearer was a commissioned officer. There are no generals, colonels, majors, captains or lieutenants among the returned soldiers. They are all comrades, regardless of former status in the service, and so address each other and ask that they be so addressed by those who never carried arms, and so referred to in the newspapers. It may be that this procedure is in accordance with military regulations, but the readiness with which the officer is willing to surrender his title of distinction shows the spirit of the veterans.

If the man who won promotion and honor worth while on the field of battle, with death in ghastly form hovering all around him, is willing to give up that title now, why should the knight or baronet complain if asked to do likewise, especially as his decoration was conferred upon him probably for some service that was of as much material advantage to himself as to the State?

The veterans are true democrats, creating their own democracies. It is unfortunate, however, that the Government still insists on distinctions in rank in the pension system that has been promulgated in the face of general protest ever since the first plan of payment was made public. The crippled general is not more helpless than the private or the non-commissioned officer in the same case. The chances are that his worldly circumstances are better and that he has less necessity for the higher rate allowed him by a government that cannot apparently recognize the fact that the sacrifice of one was as great as that of the other.

The pension system visits its iniquity, too, upon the heads of the unfortunate dependents of the victims of the war. All the men who enlisted in Canada for service overseas could not be officers, no matter what their qualifications. There were not high places enough to go round, many as the deserving were. But why penalize the widows and children of the martyred or disabled heroes? The orphan of a private has just as much right to a chance for existence as has the offspring of a major-general. The loss sustained by the one is as great as that suffered by the other. The same world with its trials confronts both. The last vestige of anything like snobbery has been abolished by the men who came to know and respect each other while undergoing a baptism of German fire. Let the Government, then, note this fact and do as much when it comes to distributing the rewards for service.

SOUND ADVICE ON EDUCATION

(Canadian Farmer)

President Taylor of Queen's University was amongst those who addressed the Provincial Teachers' Association convened in Toronto two or three weeks ago. His address bore the title "Unconscious Education."

We have read the synopsis of Dr Taylor's lecture as presented in the press with great pleasure. There was much of the wisdom gleaned from true scholarship in it.

"Restrictions imposed by school courses," said the learned lecturer, "are deadening alike to teacher and to pupil. A teacher is not permitted in the Ontario School code to go beyond the subjects prescribed and the teacher in following the code loses his individuality and becomes little more than a machine."

And again Principal Taylor gave out these wise words to the assembled teachers: "The second of the unconscious things in education is that of the untutored and unfettered use of books. Turn a child loose in a library and you will be amazed at the kind of stuff he finds himself interested in. There is no such enemy of education as the cheap magazine of today."

And yet in the face of this degradation of scholarships which obtains in Ontario, today, Hon. Dr Cody, minister of education is reported to have said that there is no need of a radical or sweeping change in the School System in Ontario.

Is there, we ask the head of the Education Department for Ontario, the slightest evidence of any individuality in the school work of this province? Do not two words express the whole vicious system "smattering" and "stuffing"? Is not the whole system based on the request of a certain character in Dickens who said to the teacher, "teach my boy facts?" "Sameness, dullness, pedantry," are the trinity of the schools in Ontario. Wherever the pupil may be caught going through educational machine — whether at Cornwall, Sarnia, or Sault Ste Marie — this innocent victim bears the trade mark, the brand of the school as clear as that on a Texas steer.

Yet despite all this specialists and doctors of pedagogy are so thick in the province that on a dark night they fall over each other. Who will deliver us from this educational plague of locusts?

WIT AND WISDOM

"Wouldn't you like," his mother asked a little boy "wouldn't you like to give your toy boat to that poor orphan who hasn't any father?"

HIS OPINION.

They were talking about that terrible cry, "Man overboard!"

"Only those who have been roused from midnight slumber on board ship can comprehend its meaning," said a seasoned traveller. "The sudden alarm, the fear and horror—"

"Oh, yes, they can!" replied a lame little shoemaker, who had no repute as a traveller. "I heard it once when I wasn't on a ship, and I realized the horror of it more than anyone else."

"You couldn't!" said the great traveller contemptuously. And the assembled company sided with him.

"But I could," persisted the cobbler. "You see, I was the man who fell overboard."

THE GOODS, ALL RIGHT.

First Gossip—Don't tell a soul, but I saw a whole barrel of whiskey delivered to the Topeleys' this afternoon in broad daylight.

Second Gossip—How'd you know it was whiskey?

First Gossip—Why, Topeley himself helped the delivery man handle it with care.

AND HARRY LAUGHED.

The head of the family glanced up from the paper and remarked:

"I see there's a new hippopotamus at the Zoo." Glancing at his son a moment later, he said:

"What are you laughing at, Harry?"

"I was jus' laughin' to think of a stork carryin' a hippopotamus," returned Harry.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.

A man from a bone-dry Arkansas community went to a wet Missouri town and was invited by an acquaintance to have a drink, says an exchange. In the saloon the friend asked:

"What are you going to have?"

"Have," dreamily returned the visitor, blinking at the glorious array of barreled and bottled goods. "I ain't going to have nuth'n'."

"What do you mean, Gabe?" You won't have a drink aftre coming all this distance?"

"Nope!" answered the Arkansawyer. "There hain't no such place as this. I'll wake up in a minute."

SOME WAR FIGURES

General headquarters received 9,000 telegrams in one day, and 3,400 letters by despatch riders. One army headquarters had 10,000 telegrams in a day, and the daily telegrams on the lines of communication were 23,000.

There were 1,500 miles of telegraphs and telephones, and 3,688 miles of railways, on which 1,800 trains ran weekly.

In six weeks 5,000,000 rations were supplied by our armies in France to 800,000 civilians in the relieved areas.

Two hundred tons dead weight of supplies and stores were required daily for the maintenance of each division.

The total daily ration strength of our armies was 2,700,000. An addition of one ounce to each man's rations represented an extra seventy-five tons.

Over 400,000 horses and mules and 46,700 motor vehicles were used and 4,500 miles of road made or maintained.

In 1914 there was one machine gun to 500 infantrymen in the British army; at the armistice there was one machine gun to twenty infantrymen.

Over 700,000 tons of ammunition were fired by our artillery on the Western front from last August to the armistice.

HELPING FLIES TO BREED

Now is the season when incubators all over the country are beginning to hatch out a great and continuous crop.

Chickens? Oh dear no. Flies—just ordinary house flies.

We are so fond of them that everywhere we make a regular business of breeding them, being able by artificial incubation to multiply their swarms.

In speaking of fly incubators, one refers, of course, to dirty stables, which, it is reckoned, produce 95 per cent of all the house flies that frequent our dwellings and share our food.

Sanitation is doing great things for our towns and cities, guarding the milk and other food supplies, etc., but as a rule it does not bother enough with dirty stables.

This is a wonderful help for the flies. One dirty stable will turn them out by millions, hatched from a pile of manure, and will supply a whole neighborhood with the insects all summer long.

If each stable owner were obliged to put all manure into a covered bin or pit and remove it once a week, flies would have no chance to breed in such refuse.

Talk about the mosquito as a menace! Why, the buzz in the pantry or kitchen is incomparably more ominous, where health and life are concerned, than the night song in the bedroom upstairs.

Immense efforts are being made to "clean up" mosquito-infested districts by ditching and other means, the object in view being to prevent the insects from breeding. But when it comes to flies we actually go out of our way to hatch them artificially in stables.

Each year in early summer, a "fly-swatting" campaign is started in many of our cities. It is next door to useless, because all the flies thereby destroyed in an entire season are not more than a small fraction of the number hatched in local stables in a single day.

It does not seem to occur to anybody to cut off the supply at the source by the simple expedient of compelling stable owners through a system of sanitary inspection to keep their stables clean.

The fly problem, in cities, is almost wholly a stable problem. How truly this is so may be judged from the fact that flies nowadays are rarely seen in the fashionable quarters of big towns, where the horse stable has been replaced by the motor garage.

STATE OWNERSHIP AND THE PUBLIC

The Government Must See to it That the Rights of the People Are Respected.

"Reconstruction" is a word greatly used—and somewhat overworked—in the newspapers of the day.

After all, countries remote from the actual theatres of war, like Canada and other American countries, were not so completely upset that they require to be rebuilt from their foundations upward.

Improvement in many respects, the acid test of war has shown to be possible, and advisable. No observant person can fail to have noticed that. But not complete "Reconstruction!"

Still exaggeration, or shall we say magnifying? is sometimes needed to direct public opinion to needed reforms. And on that account it may be well that we have such books as "Reconstructing America," by Edwin Wildman, to set us, somewhat forcibly, face to face with problems requiring solution if we are to make real progress in improving national conditions.

Mr. Wildman is the editor of "The Forum," and a well-known maker of useful books. In this one he has compiled in a handsome volume the expressed opinions of most of the influential politicians, financial men and thinkers of the United States upon important public matters.

For instance there is a regular symposium upon the absorbing subject of the public ownership of railways. The opinion of Congressman Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, is especially to the point. He remarks that:

"The owners must relinquish the claims that the roads are private and will be run for profit. That stage is long past. The brotherhoods must also relinquish the claim that the roads are run to employ men at good wages. The public or third party in the deal must be considered and will in the end become the chief factor in the determination of the policy. This is right since it is the public which makes possible the enterprise.

"While the Government is concerned in maintaining the rights of property and should see to it that these rights are inviolable, yet its larger function is to see to it that the rights of the public are respected.

"But if we mean to maintain our system of Government we will respect the element of private ownership, individual initiative, and personal responsibility in the interest of progress and economic efficiency by permitting concentration at large we must exercise a rigid Government control. It seems to me the solution of the railway problem lies in this direction."

So, too there seems to be much food for thought in the argument against public ownership of wire communications—should not wireless telegraph be included also? by Clarence Mackay, President of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company. He argues that: "The telegraph differs from every other public utility in that the telegraph is not used by the great majority of people. Farmers use it very rarely. The laboring classes use it little, if at all. The clerical classes have little occasion to use it, and even the social use of the telegraph is negligible. One of the great telegraph companies states that only 3 or 4 per cent. of its entire telegraph business is from these classes. Over 70 per cent. of the entire telegraph business of the United States originates in forty cities, these being the large commercial cities of the country. The fact is that the telegraph is a commercial agent, almost exclusively, and its expense is a part of the cost of the banker, broker manufacturing, and mercantile classes. Hence any attempt to give them cheap telegraph service at the expense of the taxpayer is unfair and discriminatory."

How Bonuses Are To Be Distributed

INCREASES WILL BE GRADED ACCORDING TO SALARIES NOW EARNED.

Ottawa, July 16.—The civil service commission announces the signing of an order-in-Council determining the methods by which the civil service bonus of $10,000,000 is to be applied. Regulations based on recommendations made by Arthur Young & Co. provide that heads of households receiving less than $1200 per year will receive a bonus of $420. This amount decreases in steps of $24 for each $120 increase in salary up to $3000.

Single employes over 21 years of age with a salary less than $960 per year receive $252, the amount decreasing as the salary increases up to $1800. Single persons between 18 and 21 years, with salaries less than $1200 per year, receive $150. Bonus will be paid in monthly instalments, and is retractive to April 1, 1919.

Make No Distinction.

No distinction is made as to date of entry into the service or between inside and outside services. Seasonable employes participate pro rata. Employes now receiving a higher bonus are protected for the duration of the order. Persons receiving union rates or carrying on private occupations while in the service do not participate.

The administration of the bonus is placed in the hands of the civil service commission, and first payment will be made on completion and approval of bonus lists.

Thin Watches Not New.

The thin watches that have been fashioned for several years are not a new model. P. V. Bergen of Bound Brook, N. J., has a thin watch that is more than 100 years old. It is an open face watch, three-eighths of an inch thick. The movement is one and three-quarters inches in diameter and the watch itself two inches. The movement is full plate, lever escapement and opens at the front. The case is beautifully made and of 18 carat gold. The watch is marked "Micallef & Gigho, Malta."

Drug addicts are flocking into New Jersey in the hope of escaping the drastic regulations in force in New York.

Cook's Cotton Root Compound.

WEEPING ECZEMA SOON RELIEVED

A Perfect Treatment For This Distressing Complaint

WASING, ONT.

"I had an attack of Weeping Eczema; so bad that my clothes would be wet through at times.

For four months, I suffered terribly. I could get no relief until I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and 'Sootha Salva'. The first treatment gave me relief.

Altogether, I have used three boxes of 'Sootha Salva' and two of 'Fruit-a-tives', and am entirely well."

G. W. HALL.

Both these sterling remedies are sold by dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"Fruit-a-tives" is also put up in a trial size which sells for 25c.

War-time Husbands.

Some curious facts are revealed in the British Registrar-General's report of births, marriages and deaths in 1917.

Whereas most of the marriages used to take place in July, August and September, the favorite months now are October, November and December. Widows remarried in great numbers. Although young war-widows affected the figures, it is clear that the war was not wholly responsible, for the total began to increase in 1912. Widowers, too, show an increasing tendency to take second wives.

The youngest bachelor to marry was fifteen, and the youngest spinster fourteen. No fewer than twenty-nine males married at the age of sixteen, and 329 at the age of seventeen, two of the latter marrying widows. Twenty-six spinsters married at the age of fifteen, one of them to a widower; 187 women were sixteen when they married, and of 1,200 marrying at seventeen years, fifteen married widowers.

The earliest second marriage of males was at the age of nineteen, and three widows remarried at the age of eighteen; of thirty-nine men marrying when they were turned eighty only one, aged eighty-one, had never tasted the joys of matrimonial bliss previously, the rest being widowers; but out of nine women marrying beyond that age two were spinsters. The oldest man to be married was a widower of ninety-two, and the two oldest women were aged eighty-five, one a widow and one a spinster.—Tit-Bits.

Ancient Perfumes.

The first nation to learn the secret of aromatic substances was Persia. The priests of Egypt were the only people who studied science at that time, and Egyptian perfumes achieved great celebrity, especially those made in Alexandria.

Reserved originally for religious rites, perfumes subsequently became of current use among the wealthy classes. During banquets they were diffused through the halls and were burned in profusion. The Israelites during their sojourn in Egypt adopted the use of aromatic substances primarily for religious purposes and afterwards for personal usage. The Jews were fond of cosmetics and even used them to paint the face.

All these perfumes were extracted from essences of trees and various plants. The Greeks, who loved elegance, were especially addicted to the use of perfumes, and they taught their secrets and usage to the Romans. The latter in the days of their decadence went so far as to scent the coats of their dogs.

In the Middle Ages the Arabs, Venetians, Genoese, and Florentines became famous for the preparation of sweet-smelling essences.—Tit-Bits.

Must Have Olive Oil.

Although olive oil as a food and medicinal oil can be replaced very largely by other vegetable oils, there are one or two technical uses, wool-spinning, for instance, for which no entirely satisfactory substitute has yet been found.

His Regret.

One shrewd old farmer who had heard his first lecture on dietetics said if he'd known as much about feeding children as he did about rations for cows and hogs "his family'd have been a heap healthier folks."

Our Character.

People seem not to see that their opinion of the world is also a confession of character. We can only see what we are, and, if we misbehave, we suspect others.—Emerson.

Philosophical.

"Love levels all things," sighed the sad-eyed swain, with a pang of pain, as his sweetheart sat on his new high hat and smashed it flat.

Optimistic Thought.

The hero lifteth his sword against the enemy that resisteth, but no sooner does he submit than he is satisfied.

Even Then.

Even the man who thinks twice before he speaks is often sorry he said it.—Boston Transcript.

The Round-Up

By ROBERT W. CREEL

(Copyright.)

How he came to be braking on the C. I. W. it would be impossible to say. It is doubtful if Legs Brown himself knew. He was a boomer brakeman, and, as such, he traveled by no schedule whatever. To ordinarily find him at any given time you might inquire on any railway division in America with an equal chance of success.

He reminded you of that insect whose amiable disposition and attenuated appearance have won for it the sobriquet of "grand-daddy-longlegs." Hence Brown's own nickname. Notwithstanding his fragile proportions, however, when occasion arose he could wield his huge fists with force sufficient to fracture a jaw-bone or drive a man's ear into the side of his head—a fact that had been demonstrated to the sorrow of more than one belligerent hobo.

As the long train of flat cars writhed in and out among the sand hills, Brown, stationed a short distance ahead of the caboose, was the only person visible.

At the last stop, Murphy, the conductor, had received a telegram warning him to be prepared for an attack when they entered Sandville. A large number of hoboes were gathered there and had taken possession of the town, explaining to the unhappy citizens the necessity of majority rule, if the republican form of government was to be maintained in the land.

Previous experience similar to this had detracted from the novelty of the situation for the few inhabitants of Sandville; but the hoboes were becoming bolder, and spoke of capturing the next train that came thither for the purpose of making their escape. Whereupon the station agent had grown alarmed and sent the telegram.

Among his other characteristics, Brown was intensely loyal to the road that chanced to employ him. Any action such as that contemplated by the hoboes was resented as a personal affront. Furthermore, at this particular time he knew that the president of the road was but a few hours behind in his special, and Brown deemed it his duty to do all in his power to prevent any unpleasantness when the great man should arrive.

Therefore as they drew near the little hamlet he returned to the caboose and conferred with the conductor.

"They's no use runnin' clear in, Jim. You better stop on the edge of this here metropolis while I go in an' reconnoiter the force of the enemy, as they say in the army."

"I wouldn't advise you to go alone, Legs. You can't tell what those boes'll do if they're drunk."

"Why, Jim, you know them fellers 're like sheep. The only reason I can see for 'em actin' like this is because they got a leader. If that's the case, all I got to do is to sling him around like he didn't cost much, an' that'll take the fight right out of 'em. Besides, if a bunch of us go in, they'll git ready for trouble."

"All right, you can go while we stop for water. That'll give you time to see what they're up to."

So it was that, on foot and unaccompanied, Legs Brown ambled into the captured town. He had no doubt as to the location of the triumphant hoboes, for, though it was now almost dark, the only place that showed a light was the saloon, and to this he directed his steps.

At the bar stood a swarthy, well-set fellow, whose curly hair and high cheek-bones, together with the peculiar formation of his head, marked him as a native of Poland. This worthy was the most boisterous of the lot, but Brown thought it hardly likely that he was the leader, giving him scant attention, therefore, as he strode forward and ordered a drink.

"Here, ye rube, ye better ask me fer what ye want, 'r I'll break yo in two," said the tramp aggressively, pausing in the act of raising a glass to his lips.

Brown, reaching for his own drink, seemed not to hear the words, but his prodigious foot, as if released from a spring, suddenly swept up, and, striking the other's hand, threw the glass, with its contents, into his scowling face.

A storm of laughter arose from the onlookers, who swore, with mighty oaths that it was the funniest thing they had ever seen. The victim, however, laughed not at all, but bellowed with rage and pain as the fiery liquid seared his eyes, and repeatedly yelled for Brown to come near.

Not desirous of being masticated, nor yet willing to move out of the way of the Pole, who was blindly groping for him, Brown chose the only alternative, and smote him squarely between the eyes; so that he crumpled up on the floor. Then, turning to the man's comrades, he broached the business of the evening.

"I want to tell you dirty bums that I'm going to take charge of this here city government from now till I leave. If any of you've got anything to say, why, you can step up and say it. You might be able to bluff these poor devils that live here, but I've seen too many boes not to know what you're made of. You're all under arrest, an' the first man that moves'll get plugged." The brakeman placed a hand in his hip pocket, which, by the way, held nothing but his red bandanna handkerchief.

"Now, I want to see the man that's at the head of this outfit. Who put you up to this job?"

Following a sound of shuffling footsteps, the illustrious leader himself appeared in the doorway. Bully Hackett's visage was one of those of which the worst dreams are made. While it was rendered somewhat vacant by the absence of his nose, one of his eyes, and the major portion of his upper lip—unwilling sacrifices to the god of war—his expression lost none of its ferocity on that account, and his shaggy hair and beard gave him a look that was scarcely human.

Mr. Hackett had been engaged on a private foraging expedition, and knew nothing of the happenings within the saloon, nor saw the brakeman, as he came toward the bar.

"Wot's the matter?" he inquired savagely. "Didn't ye see that freight pull in?"

By way of attracting his attention, Brown struck him smartly on the part of his face formerly occupied by his nose.

"Yes, an' she'll lay there till she rots, if she waits fer you to take her out. By the time I git through with you, you'll be ready to crawl in your hole," said the brakeman. He had seen the train crew gathered in the shadows outside the door and now had little to fear from the other hoboes.

"Better take off your coat, because I'm not a-goin' to knock you out. I'll make you quit like a dog, so the rest of these gents'll see what you are," stated Brown, removing his own outer garment.

Hackett waited not for further advice, but lashed out so viciously with his right arm that Brown was taken unawares, and, had it not been for the bar at his back, he would have gone down ignominously. Even so, he was in an evil plight, for the tramp, seeing his opportunity, waded in, raining blows on the face and body of his opponent.

Then, indeed, did it seem that the brakeman had been overconfident in his boasting. The other hoboes shouted encouragement to their champion, and the train crew were only restrained from joining in the fight by the conductor, who continued to voice his belief in Brown's prowess.

Veteran of a hundred battles, Brown's first move was to stop the flailing arms. This he did by the simple expedient of twining his own about them. Gradually, with the apparent sinuosity of a boa constrictor, he wrapped his limbs about those of the other, and for a moment lifted his own feet clear of the floor, making Hackett support the weight of both their bodies. Then, unmindful of his struggles, Brown as carefully freed himself, sending the hobo backward with a solid jolt on the spot where his first blow had landed.

Brown was intent on proving a theory that he had long held, namely, that a man, though inwardly a coward, may fight with seeming bravery so long as the blows of his adversary have not the appearance of being well judged or aimed with accuracy; but that a succession of blows, however light, on a sensitive spot will make him quit if he has the least vestige of a yellow streak.

During the next few minutes, so fiercely did Hackett assail him that the brakeman was almost entirely on the defensive. More than once he felt the impact of the tramp's horny fist on his face, but he still held to his purpose. When the opening offered, his hand flashed out, striking with invariable precision the spot he had selected for his attack.

Hackett manifested his displeasure at this mode of warfare, evidently thinking that Brown acted dishonorably in profiting by the absence of his nasal feature.

For a long time they fought, neither gaining the advantage. Brown was bleeding freely from the mouth, and one eye was fast swelling shut; but his antagonist was also badly bruised, the remnant of his nose being quite raw. Of the two, Hackett seemed the more fatigued. Excessive drinking had made him short-winded, and he breathed heavily. The brakeman now began to force the fighting, striking more often in the same spot. Hackett gave ground and once he glanced back, as if seeking a way of escape.

"Stand up an' fight, why don't you?" panted Brown. "You claim to be the champeen bo. Well, I ain't no kind of a champeen, an' here you're tryin' to quit before I git warmed up. What kind of fightin' do you call that? Come on an' mix it a little."

But Hackett had had enough. His spirit was gone, and he slunk back into the crowd, whimpering.

"Stop 'im, boys; stop 'im," he pleaded. "My heavens, my mug's broke in! I can't fight no more."

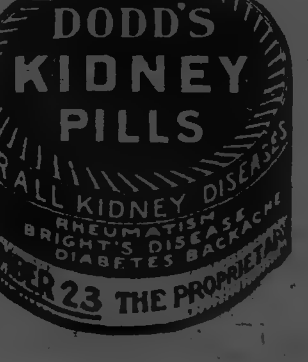
"You don't need to be scared. I'm satisfied," answered Brown. "I knew you was a quitter the minute I seen you, an' I wanted to show you up, so you couldn't lead these dubs into no more deviltry. What'll we do with 'em, Jim?" he asked, turning to the conductor.

"The best thing will be to lock 'em in a box car an' hand 'em over to the sheriff at Bennington," replied Murphy, who was guarding the door.

From the dark recesses of the caboose he had brought forth an old revolver. With it to uphold his authority, the erstwhile conquerors were placed in line and marched to the waiting train, escorted by the crew.

To Brown, this closed the incident. He marveled greatly, therefore, when there came a commendatory letter from the company's chief executive, together with a small package, which, on examination, was found to contain a gold watch.

"That business must've leaked out some way or other," he remarked thoughtfully.



Colors of the Sardine.

The fresh sardine is a beautiful little fish. The scales on its back are an iridescent blue-green, the exact tint which the sea so often takes, while beneath the scales there shows up the most wonderful peacock blue. There are bars on its back and sides when it first comes out of the water like those on the mackerel, but they seem to fade and disappear the moment it is exposed to the air. The remainder of its body is pure silver in its color scheme.

Icebergs.

Icebergs do not form at sea, but are masses detached from the glaciers which form on the land and project into the sea, where great blocks break off and float out to sea. There is hardly any limit to the size of these masses, and as ice is lighter than water they may float a long time with a large part of their bulk beneath the surface and melting gradually by contact with warmer water.

Average Vocabulary.

The size of the average person's vocabulary has been estimated at about 5,000 words. Shakespeare's vocabulary has been computed variously as containing from 15,000 to 24,000 words, and it includes the root words and inflections. Milton's vocabulary has been estimated at 13,000; the Bible contains 8,674 Hebrew and Chaldee words and 5,674 Greek words.

Two Minds in Accord.

Clergyman (intent on administering a gentle reproof to bridge-playing parishioner)—"I am afraid much valuable time is wasted on playing cards." Bridge-playing Parishioner—"I quite agree with you. The time taken by some players in shuffling, dealing or deciding what card to play is simply exasperating."

United States Senate.

Each United States senator is elected for six years, unless he is chosen to fill the unexpired term of some senator who has died or resigned. On March 4 in every "odd year"—1919, etc.—the terms of 32 senators expire; that is, one-third of the whole number. By this plan there is never an entirely new senate. Even if no members were re-elected, two-thirds of the membership would always consist of men who have had either two or four years' service.

Helpful Sympathy.

She was slowly recovering from a long illness, but still too weak for the trip downtown to a hairdresser for the much-needed shampoo. At last a maid was found who would come to the house. During the drying process she made the startling discovery of the first gray hairs. The convalescent's grief was so intense that the maid, striving to comfort, said: "Law, lady, what if you had to wear one of them transmissions on your head!"

Indian Potlatch.

Potlatch is a corruption of an Indian word common among the Pacific coast tribes, meaning a festival of gifts. At a potshatl (potlatch) celebration the more personal property an Indian gives away, blankets, ornaments, etc., the higher he stands in the estimation of his neighbors, and the more he expects to receive in return at the next potlatch. The festival is accompanied by music, dancing and feasting.

Peanut Oil.

The peanut oil, which is used as a substitute for other nut oils, is receiving special attention from growers who find this the most profitable feature of the industry. About 40,000,000 bushels a year are used in the production of peanut oil, a bushel weighing 30 pounds, usually yielding about a gallon.

Rich Brazilian Forests.

There are more than 300 varieties of woods in the Sao Paulo region alone and as a whole Brazilian forests not only abound in the finest of woods but are of enormous extent. Transportation facilities are developing slowly and the labor supply is a constant problem.

Not to Be Thought Of.

Jamie was asking his mother a lot of silly questions, such as, "Why are your eyes blue?" His mother said. "Why do you ask such silly questions when I am trying to read?" "Well," responded Jamie, "do you want your little boy to grow up without a vocabulary in his mind?"

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

THE BALKAN CLOUD.

It Still Hangs Heavy in Spite of the Peace Treaty.

Seeds for possible future trouble are not confined to the causes outlined thus far. The Balkans, which furnished the immediate cause of the Great War, and which had for years before been a sort of simmering volcano, are far from being in a settled state even yet. There is a standing feud between Serbians and Bulgarians, there is at least suspicion between Greeks and Serbs, there is divergence of interest between Roumania and the other Balkan States and there is the acute difference between Italy and her Slav neighbors over the east shore of the Adriatic and the Teuton, who dragged the whole world into war by refusing to arbitrate their quarrel with the Slavs in the Balkans, are openly exulting over the Balkan controversy which has broken out between Slavs and Latins. The chief Serbian delegate to the Peace Conference declares that "Fiume belongs to us by every standard—by the ethnographic standard, and by the economic standard. The Italianization of Fiume is very recent. Personally I can remember when Fiume was overwhelmingly Slavic. The introduction of the Italians was promoted by the Magyars as a political manoeuvre against the Croats. The official Austrian-Hungarian statistics for 1910 report 244,212 Italians and 15,687 Jugo-Slavs. But even those figures are misleading. They were compiled and published by the municipal authorities of Fiume, who had every reason to make Slavic strength in their city appear as slight as possible. But there are still two important points to be remembered. First, included in that 24,212 are Italianized Slavs. In the second place, both Italian and Magyar statisticians count the population of Fiume as if Susak were not properly included. Now Susak, which is divided from so-called Fiume by only a narrow canal, is as much a part of real Fiume as Westmount is a part of real Montreal. In Susak there are 11,396 Jugo-Slavs as against 685 Italians. Therefore, in greater Fiume there are altogether 277,393 Jugo-Slavs as against 24,870 Italians. For economic reasons it is a matter almost of life and death for us to have Fiume. With its fine rail connections this port serves the very heart and, indeed, the whole interior of the country. Look at the other ports which might be available to us. Ragusa is linked with the interior only by a narrow-gauge railway. Ogulin-Knin has no connection with our capital. It is true that Spalato is a good harbor which may be connected with Belgrade. But even if that railway is built, it will be a tremendously expensive task and one which cannot be accomplished for a long time. In short, Fiume is indispensable to us. It is not indispensable to Italy. If our trade had to pass through an Italian Fiume, Italy would hold our whole commerce in her hands. She could blockade us when she pleased. For us that would be a situation not to be borne."

Fiume may be the same sort of powder magazine between Italy and the new Serbian Confederation that Alsace-Lorraine was between France and Germany for fifty years.

Mr. Kennedey's Last Word to People

SUBJECT OF SERMON AT CLOSE OF CAMPAIGN, "GOOD CHEER."

The subject of Evangelist Kennedy's concluding address in the big tent last evening was "Good Cheer." It was a message intended principally for the new converts, but it had its application to every Christian and to sinners as well. He based his remarks on Romans 8:28, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." Mr. Kennedy called attention to the fact that the verse explicitly states that Christians know this to be true. It is not a matter of guess work. God is planning the lives of those who love Him and is able to make even apparent set-backs works out to His glory. Mr. Kennedy said that the environment does not make a person a Christian. Christians must have something more powerful in their life than the circumstances of their environment. They need Christ, who is able to change the environment according to His own purposes. God allowed Paul to be cast into prison. While there he wrote several of the Epistles, which have been a blessing to Christians ever since. In the same way God allowed Milton to be cast into prison, where he wrote his great book, "Paradise Lost," which has been such a blessing to many.

The Ways of Providence.

"It takes God a long time," said Mr. Kennedy, "to make a fine character. Christians often are tempted to give up when, if they only knew it, the clouds which overhang them, are full of blessings ready to break upon their heads. God does not always answer prayer in the way people desire but He is sure to answer the prayer of faith. Paul asked that the thorn in his flesh be removed. Instead of removing it God gave him such an abundant supply of grace that Paul was able to glory in his tribulations. Christ asked, if possible, the cup should be taken from Him. God said that it was not possible but sent an angel to strengthen Him. God has told us that no temptations shall assail us that we will not be able to bear but with every temptation He will provide a way of escape therefrom.

Mr. Kennedy gave a most interesting resume of the life of Joseph showing how that stage after stage Joseph must have thought that everything was going wrong. He alowed Joseph to be cast into the pit. Later, to be sold into Egypt, later to be falsely accused by his employer's wife, then again to be cast into prison, only in the end to make him next to Pharaoh in power and a means of blessing to all his brethren. What Christians need is faith in the love of God. This gives them strength to believe that a divine purpose is behind all the events of their life.

The message was a powerful one and inspiring to all who heard it. It made a fitting concluding message for the month's campaign.

Within two blocks of a police station burglars at New York stole $50,000 worth of silks.

Music in the Home

NOTED PIANO TEACHER DISAPPROVES OF MEMORY WORK IN OUTSPOKEN FASHION

Wastes Time, Energy and is a Fruitless Tax on the Brain.

"No terms that I could employ would be too strong to express my complete and absolute disapproval of the modern craze of playing from memory. To see, as we do, an announcement in the syllabus for examinations in our public music schools that 'credit will be given for the performance from memory of at least one of the test pieces' fills me with impotent rage, so inconsistent do I consider such an exhibition with true artistic endeavor. And it is strange that while such memory work is exacted from those who play a solo, no such demand is made upon those who take part in concerded music."

This very direct and stinging assertion is made by no less a personage than Francesco Berger, professor of pianoforte playing at the Royal Academy of Music, London. "Let me not be misunderstood," he writes in the Etude, "if the pianist has played his solo so often that he feels he no longer requires to consult the music pages which face him, feels that he can dispense with them, there is no objection to his doing so. What is objected to is: that he should be required to make efforts to achieve so poor an end. That he should be invited ~~to devote precious hours~~—"memorizing,"—hours which he could far more profitably employ in "reading" new music, or in perfecting old.

"Reading is an accomplishment which bears fruit. The more one "reads" the easier it becomes. And facility in "reading" is desirable because it enables one, in a given number of days or years, to become acquainted with a far greater number of works than if the process were slow and laborious. But playing from memory bears no such fruit; it is barren of any profit.

"The act of memorizing is waste of time, waste of energy, a fruitless tax on the brain. It has no more relation with artistic performance than the material of which the seat at the piano is constructed has with the fingers. Indeed, in some cases, not to say in many, it retards and interferes with the highest obtainable executive result; for, while the pianist is making the mental effort of trying to remember what comes next, he cannot possibly give undivided attention to his rendering of the music.

"And again, playing from memory is no indication of higher musicianship. If he labors at it long enough, any fool can commit a piece to memory. It is the true musician who disdains such drudgery. He refuses—very wisely refuses—to tread the same limited bit of ground over and over again, until, like the blind horse at the kiln, he cannot go wrong from sheer habit. His artist's soul revolts from such a cramping occupation. Long before he has committed it to memory he is weary of the piece, sick of the composer, slams the piano-lid, upsets the stool, flies from the room into the fresh air!"

ARE MUSICIANS KEEPING STEP?

Self-esteem, within the bounds of moderation, becomes the musician. He is proud of his art, and there is every reason why he should take reasonable pride in himself. To justify that pride he must do things. He must help to make music a vital factor in every day life. This is not an age for the hermit, the recluse, the anchorite musically or otherwise. And music, from the very nature of its mission, must be in harmony with the age. Our modern music, as such, does mirror the restlessness of spirit, the breaking away from the rule and line, and the craving for release from old dogmas that have quickened the pulse and put a flush upon the face of this sometimes freshened, sometimes jaded, sometimes naive and sometimes blase old world of ours. But if it is a day of restlessness, it is also a day of achievement—a day when the men among men and the women among women who are worth while know their worth, and taking pride in it, strike out boldly to do something big in consonance with the bigness of the world. Are our musicians keeping step? Are they letting opportunities slide? Are they dropping into ruts?

AN EXCELLENT INVESTMENT.

There is nothing more inspiring and improving to a young student of music than to hear a piece which he is studying performed by a really great artist. More may be learned by example, even unconsciously, than the most skillful and conscientious teacher could impart in a lesson. It is not an extravagance to spend money freely to hear good concerts or in the purchase of records by the best artists.

WHAT THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD DO FOR MUSIC

State-aided Music Far Advanced in Australia.

One thing that stands out prominently in the musical discussions of today is the insistent demand for a greater recognition of music on the part of the state. Governments and city councils are being urged by the citizens to give music the place it ought to have in their lives. Out in Australia, state-aided music has made good progress. They have their government conservatory of music, supported and operated under the jurisdiction of the Australian government.

In a recent address Professor W. A. Laver, of the Melbourne University Conservatorium of Music, outlined what he considered to be the duties of their government. His views are of more than passing interest in Canada. "I think the government should take steps," he said, "in the interests of a sound musical culture; to legalize the registration of all teachers of music:

"(3) To set aside certain amounts from time to time, as necessity arises, for the development of its national music institution—the University Conservatorium of Music. A proscenium with stage effects has since been granted through private munificence.

"(4) To establish a first class State military band.

~~"I may mention that~~ at the last Interstate conference of the Pan-Australian examination scheme, arrangements were made for representatives of the various States to obtain information with the object of conducting examinations in brass and military band instrument playing, in order to encourage and create a finer standard of this class of player. Anyone who has heard the fine military bands of Great Britain and the Continent, will realize the value of initiating a first-class military band.

"There is, I understand, a fine collection of military band music at the Forts at Queenscliff. This should be placed in the University, or Public Library for use and reference.

"(5) To establish a permanent symphony orchestra for the higher development of musical culture. The orchestra may either be associated with the University oCnservatorium or be a separate body, controlled by an expert body under the chairmanship of the Minister or Director of Education.

"There should be at least two evening performances each week, one devoted to works of a lighter yet good character, and the other to heavier symphonic compositions. Each of the foremost conductors in Australia should have regular opportunities to conduct such a subsidised permanent orchestra.

"(6) To establish grand opera. Before this is possible with any degree of success, it is necessary to establish an operatic school.

"(7) The Government should also give a special grant of, say £200 a year—a kind of research scholarship—for a period of three years, to an Australian-born possessed of outstanding creative ability as a composer, pianist, poet or dramatist.

"This would encourage creative art and help to form in course of time an Australian school of composition, painting and literature."

SHARPS AND FLATS

Have you ever thought of having a musical festival in your town?

When guests come into your home, always have the piano open to welcome them. Somehow or other it adds to your hospitality. A closed piano is not inviting.

Unquestionably, the largest number of music students are those who study piano playing. Consequently the piano is the most appropriate instrument to use in connection with the study of musical theory.

Our duty is to see to it that the rising generation shall absorb a real love for good music. Urge them to hear it whenever possible, but urge them still more to take part in it, for in the making of music lies its greatest joy.

A law that should be passed is one that would demand a big penalty from any music teacher who attempts to teach the children, who come to her for lessons, on a piano that is out of tune—not that this crime is frequently committed, but as a safeguard.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS SCHOOL ORCHESTRA AT LUNCHEON

So Many U.S. Schools want Orchestras that Enough Teachers Cannot Be Found.

"If any of you have not started instrumental music in the schools of your city, dont' fail to give it consideration, because it is a great thing," said Dr. Hollis Dann of Cornell University, with emphasis when recently addressing a Canadian audience. "Those men and women in our country, who are looking for things to help the boy, may be assured that there is nothing you can do for the boy that will help him more than to interest him in this," continued this educationalist. "I find that if a boy is inclined to be wild, you get him interested in a violin, clarinet, trombone, 'cello or drum, and he will go to rehearsals religiously."

Explaining how the instrumental music in the schools worked out in his own city, Dr. Dann said: "For only three years the instrumental side of music in the schools has been in operation, and to me the results achieved have been very wonderful, and I attribute them to the power the children have to read their music, and their feeling for tone and rhythm, so that the violin teacher does not have to stop to teach them to read it, as they can read and sing what they are going to play before they start the violin.

"For three years there has been a school orchestra for the first eight grades, and several violin classes in each school. In the High School which has now begun to be fed by those grade schools, there is an orchestra of fifty pieces and a band of thirty-five pieces. Now, this orchestra of 50 pieces has simply astounded the musicians of the town and especially those of us who know what it means, and the parents are simply taken off their feet.

"I recently attended a Rotary Club luncheon in the High School, which the men thought was the greatest luncheon they ever had. It was prepared by the Domestic Science girls—they said it would spoil them for all the hotel luncheons after that and the music was furnished by the band and orchestra. They started out with the overture from the Bohemian Girl, and they rendered it in such a way, as brought tears to the eyes of those men, who were taken off their feet with the way those 50 little boys and girls performed that night. The tone and style they had was marvelous.

"It is a wonderful movement this instrumental music in the schools, so great that we cannot find teachers fast enough now in the United States to supply the demand in the cities that want to put it in."

Violin strings are graded in thickness according to the pitch to which they are to be tuned, thus the E is the thinnest because it has to be tuned to such a high pitch, and the other strings in proportion. However, each of the strings of the violin can be procured in slightly varying thicknesses. Some violins sound better with slightly thicker and some with slightly thinner strings. The best size of any violin can only be ascertained by experiments conducted by an expert violinist. After the best size for each string has been learned by experiment, the size can be tested by a gauge which can be bought at any music store for a few cents, and a record made of the sizes, so that the violinist can always order strings of the same size as indicated by the gauge. It would be worth many times its cost to take your violin to a good violinist and have him test it and find out what gauge for each of the strings would give the best results.

How Graham Bell Keeps House Cool

"You heat your house in winter; why not cool it in summer?" asks Dr. Graham Bell, the Canadian inventor of telephone fame, who is devoting his energies to keeping Washington cool. He says:

"We get up to the Arctic regions and heat our house, and live. We go down to the tropics and die.

"I have found one radical defect in the construction of our houses that absolutely precludes the possibility of cooling them to any great degree.

"You will readily understand the difficulty when you remember that cold air is heavier than warm air. You can take a bucket of cold air, for example, and carry it about in the summertime and not spill a drop, but if you make a hole in the bottom of the bucket, of course the cold air will run out.

His Tank Room Felt Cool.

"I began to think that it might be possible to apply the bucket principle at least to one room in my Washington home and thus get a place of retreat in the summertime. It seemed to be advisable to close up all openings near the bottom of the room to prevent the escape of old air, and open the windows at the top to let out the heated air of the room.

"Now it so happens that I have in the basement of my house a swimming tank, and it occurred to me that since this tank holds water it should certainly hold cold air. So I turned the water out and made a room of it. The tank seemed to be damp and the sides felt slippery.

"I reflected, however, that the condensation of moisture resulted from the fact that the sides of the tank were cooler than the air admitted. Water vapor will not condense on anything that is warmer than itself, and it occurred to me that if I introduced air that was much cooler than I wanted to use, then it would be warming up in the tank and becoming dryer all the time. It would not deposit moisture on the sides, and would actually absorb the moisture there.

"I therefore provided a refrigerator in which were placed large blocks of ice covered with salt. This was placed in another room at a higher elevation than the tank, and a pipe covered with asbestos was employed to lead the cold air into the tank.

"The first effect was the drying of the walls. Then I felt the level of the cold air gradually rising. At last it came over my head. The tank was full and I found myself immersed in cool air. I felt so cool and comfortable that it seemed difficult to believe that Washington was sizzling outside. I climbed up the ladder in the tank until my head was above the surface, and then found myself breathing a hot, damp, muggy atmosphere. I therefore speedily retreated into the tank, where I was perfectly cool and comfortable.

Cold Air Pipes.

"Guided by this experience, I tried another experiment in my house. I put the refrigerator in the attic and led the cold air downward through a pipe covered with asbestos into one of the rooms of the house. The doors were kept shut and the windows were opened at the top. The temperature in that room was perfectly comfortable, about 65 degrees.

"Some time ago the newspapers were speaking of an ice plant that had been installed in the White House, and congratulated the President, then Mr. Taft, upon a temperature of only 80 degrees when the thermometer showed 100 degrees outside. Under similar conditions I enjoyed in my house a temperature of 65 degrees (the ideal temperature), with a delicious feeling of freshness in the air."

LIBERTY GIVEN RETURNED MEN

ALL HELD FOR VIOLATION OF TEMPERANCE ACT SET FREE.

Toronto, July 17. The Ontario Government yesterday passed an order-in-council putting into effect the Prime Minister's assurance that the jail doors would be opened to all returned men incarcerated for breaches of the Ontario Temperance Act. The order declares:

"It is hereby ordered that all returned soldiers now undergoing confinement for any infraction whatsoever of the Ontario Temperance Act be forthwith released from custody and the balance of their said terms of imprisonment remitted."

The order-in-Council was based upon a report of the Board of License Commissioners which refers to the services of the men who fought overseas and to the advisability of giving freedom to all such men in order that they might take part in the celebration of a peace they helped to make possible.

Reports that there were 500 returned men in jail for breaches of the Ontario Temperance Act, are ridiculed. The License Board has been making every effort to get the names of all returned men under sentence, and has so far received but 32. It is admitted however that there may be others whose right to freedom is not unknown, and the Attorney-General, Hon. Mr. Lucas, is anxious that all sheriffs, etc., who have returned men in custody for breaches of the O. T. A. should communicate with the Department for instructions.

THOUSAND PEOPLE AT GARDEN PARTY

ON BEAUTIFUL LAWN OF REV. AND MRS. ALLEN, IN MILLBROOK.

The garden party held on Thursday evening at "Shenley House," Millbrook, the beautiful home of Rev. Canon and Mrs. Allen was attended by nearly a thousand people, judging from the fact that over six hundred "signed the register," and very many more did not sign. The supper was served on small tables, and each and every one present was well looked after by the receiving committee. The good ladies of the parish of Cavan are to be congratulated on the quatity and excellence of their cooking and "there was enough and to spare."

The program was in keeping with the happy occasion, the 100th anniversary of the parish of Cavan. Rev. Canon Allen was chairman. Mr. A. A. Smith was first called on to give a history of the parish, which he did in a most creditable manner. Before closing, he asked Mr. Allen to accept, on behalf of himself and Mrs. Allen, the good wishes of the people of the whole parish for their continued success. The churches of the parish of Cavan had prospered under the guiding hand of the late Venerable Archdeacon and Mrs. Allen's and its prosperity continues under your direction, assisted by Mrs. Allen. This purse we present to you with the one object in view, that of showing the affection and esteem in which you are both held by your parishioners.

Mr. Allen, although completely surprised, made a suitable reply. Happy and felicitious addresses were given by Rev. Canon Marsh, Lindsay; Col. Robert Stewart, Toronto; Dr. Lee, Millbrook; Rev. E. R. James, Omemee, and Rev. Mr. Fenning, of Newcastle. Mrs. Fred Waterman sang two excellent solos in a sweet voice. The Port Hope band was present and discoursed lively music throughout the evening. The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close one of the most successful events ever held in connection with the Anglican Church in the parish of Cavan.

SPENT A SMALL FORTUNE, HE SAYS

CHAPPELL SUFFERED FIFTEEN YEARS BEFORE FINDING RELIEF—PRAISES TANLAC.

Remarkable indeed was the statement made by W. D. Chappell, a well known painter and paperhanger, living at 311 South Franklin street, St Paul, Minnesota, while in the St Paul Drug Company's store recently. Mr Chappell declared that three bottles of Tanlac have done him more real good than other treatment and medicines that cost him a small fortune, which he has paid out during the past fifteen years trying to get rid of a bad case of stomach trouble and kidney complaint.

"For fifteen years," said Mr Chappell, "I have suffered from stomach trouble, and painful, disordered kidneys. My appetite was gone and the gas from what little I did eat would bloat me up terribly, causing intense pains in my left side and about my heart. My kidneys disturbed me so at night that I never averaged more than about three hours' sleep, and the pains in my back were so bad that it was agony for me to bend over and straighten up. I was also badly constipated and felt tired out all the time. I have spent a small fortune trying to get rid of these troubles, but only got worse. This spring I got in such a bad shape that I was forced to quit work entirely.

"A man I know personally, one whose word I could not doubt, recommended Tanlac to me, and, while I have taken only three bottles so far, the medicine has done me more real good than anything else I have taken combined, and I am still taking it and improving right along. My stomach feels almost like a new one, and my kidneys are in much better shape. I am sleeping better at night than I have in years, and I get up in the mornings feeling like work. My appetite is so good that I just want to eat all the time, and since the gas has stopped forming on my stomach I am not troubled any more with pains in my side or about my heart. Tanlac commenced to build me up before I had finished the first bottle, and I have been steadily improving ever since. I had about given up hope of ever finding a medicine that would help me, so you may know how thankful I am that Tanlac came my way, and I am able to pass the good word along."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Omemee Cobbler Complains Bitterly Of His Income Tax

Suggests Change in the Order of Council That Poor Shoe Repairer is Relieved.

The following communication was written by Mr. A. Laidley, of Omemee, in connection with the filling out of his income form:

Omemee, June 27, 1919.

"Mr. Hugh D. Patterson.
"Toronto.

"Dear Sir,—Re income tax paper. Not knowing how to fill out these papers I shall endeavor to co-operate with the department by giving you the information you require.

"When the assessor comes around he asks me some questions re my property, my family and what church I attend.

"My business is repairing shoes, but seeing that the world is in great need of food, I turned my attention in part to other work. My income as nearly as I can give it is as follows:

From shoe repairs	$100 00
Thirty hives of bees, honey	400 00
Rent	98 00
Day's work here and there	75 00
35 bushels of beans (not sold) say	100 00

I live in my own house, produce my own vegetables and most of the fruit I need. Keep twelve hens. When the fuel was scarce in 1918 I went to the woods and cut some wood. I am wearing out old clothes. My wife tells me on work days I look ridiculous, but I say that I am not afraid of the rag man or the sport. My clothes are not worth being weighed and they would never stand to be rammed into a gun. I am past sixty years old, hale and hearty; go to bed early and get up with the birds. My income is small. I have all I need and am willing to pay taxes on all I should.

"My family:

"My wife cooks me good meals, fixes me a comfortable bed and cleans me up for the Sabbath Day. A wise son makes a glad father. I have two sons, Canadian citizens, well employed and I am glad. My two daughters are teaching school and are able to live independently. The above is my family.

"My religion:

"I work, and if I have a little over to give to him that is in need, all right. I think the best place for prayer is behind closed doors. I like to get people happy enough to laugh. They look better. I tell the other fellow to keep out of hell. The company is bad and it is too hot for either of us. "Beware of covetousness, which is idolatry." This is the reason why I don't wish to make any income which might be taxed. In doing so I might covet some other man's goods, and if I made a pile, some Bolshevist might covet mine. Then we would both be back to heathen darkness. "The heavens declare the glory of God." I have no telescope but two eyes.

"Final remarks:

"I am no grafter, but if I do have to fill out these papers, which I am not able to do, the first time you are in Omemee, I will invite you to dinner and you will have the proof of the pudding. If this won't do, will you be kind enough to send this letter to R. N. Rowell or Sir Robert Borden? They might change the order-in-Council and let the Omemee cobbler go free.

"Yours truly.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre To Hair

That beautiful even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appear glossy and lustrous.

AIRPLANE C238 VISITS THIS CITY

FLIGHT-LIEUT. COOLEY ENTERTAINS CITIZENS TO FREE EXHIBIT OF CLEVER STUNTS.

Flight-Lieut Arthur Cooley, of Toronto, reached this city shortly before nine o'clock last evening in his airplane C233. He treated the citizens who happened to be around at that time with quite a program of clever aerial stunts, including looping-the-loop, and nose dives. At times he flew so low that timid spectators looked around for cover.

Cooley made a skilful landing in a lot north of St. James street, west from South Park stret, below the De Laval. He alighted head and tail to the narow width of the field, and within but 12 feet of a fence. His control of his machine was clever in the extreme. Willing hands assisted the Lieutenant in running his airplane beneath some trees, where he left it for the night, after securing from J. J. Turner and Sons, some rope and stakes, to form a temporary protection against invasion from a host of inquisitives—old and young.

City's Greeting

Alderman J. J. Turner, on noticing Cooley doing air stunts over his house on Water street, entered his car, and in company with his brothers Reginald and Webber, together with Chris Graham made for south city after the airman. Alderman Turner reached the scene of teh landing, in time to seize his first opportuntiy as chairman of the City's Legal Committee, to extend this City's welcome to the birdman visitor.

After Exhibits

Flight-Lieutenant Cooley left Toronto yesterday for Peterborough, calling at Lindsay and other intermediate points, enquiring as to the chances for airplane engagements for Saturday, Peace Day. He had a conference with Webber Turrner and other members of the Exhibition Board this morning, and there is a possibility that Lieutenant Cooley may be engaged to give airplane exhibit here on August 11th, Peace Day Celebration in Peterborough. A definite decision in that respect will be reached this evening; but there is nothing doing on Saturday in the aerial stunt line.

First Lady to Fly

This afternoon Lieutenant Cooley made many trips around and over the city, carrying passengers. His fee was $10 per head, with quite a few takers, including some ladies. Mrs. Reginald Turner was the first Peterborough lady to vie with the birds, and enjoyed her trip in the air immensely. The flights were made from the field in which Cooley lighted last evening.

COPENHAGEN.

Capital of Denmark Is Very Pleasant City.

"Copenhagen is a very pleasant town, and almost all its chief buildings exemplify the architectural ideals of the Rennaissance. Street upon street of houses, white stucco or red brick, adorned with pilaster and pediment and cornice, covered with tall pantiled roofs, many bearing the dates of their birth-years two or three centuries ago; these give the capital an old world, most attractive look, a picturesqueness that is sternly denied to most so modern towns. Steeples of character to match, frequently tower above the roofs, while very constant parks and squares, long avenues of broad-leaved trees and cool looking fountains, some of them real works of art, do much to make the town a very delightful place," L. C. Hannah says in "Capitals of the Northlands."

Copenhagen is an epitome of Denmark herself, the prosperous metropolis of an extremely industrious and well-ordered community that likes to be amused. Though fallen from possessing the widest empire of the north to the limits of a mere province, she yet thrills with vigorous life, an object lesson on many points that no land can afford to ignore. Magnificently equipped with boulevards, palaces and parks, cut through by fine waterways and roadways, the city rather strangely lacks any conspicuous central point. The Danes boast that their large buildings are schools, while those of England are factories, and those of Germany are barracks, but the headquarters of one of the chief universities of earth possess little architectural splendor.

"The site of the city, like its name, Copenhagen or merchants' harbor, is not romantic, though extremely convenient for travel and trade. It looks straight over the Sound to Sweden and the entrance to the Baltic; the arm of the sea that divides Zealand from the small island of Amager also penetrates the town and adds to the water front available for wharves. It was on a little backwater of this channel that in the twelfth century Bishop Axel (Absalon) raised on church lands a castle, which was called by his own name, to protect the merchants from the pirates infesting the Sound. Little he suspected that round it would grow up a town to supplant his cathedral city. Copenhagen was made the capital in 1443 by Christopher, the Bavarian, just after he had been recognized as King in Sweden and Norway as well as in Denmark itself."

"Thus, Copenhagen is a medieval town, but it has no buildings earlier than the creations of that most accomplished sovereign Christian IV, who could sail a ship and navigate the fjords and swim and leap and fight and ride and drive and speak many languages and explain the course of the stars. If he really designed the buildings that he raised, as it seems he truly did, he was also an architect of no mean power.

"The Bourse, which he erected about 1624, presents a long, low facade to one of the quays, and its high roof is relieved by large gabled dormer windows. From the top of the tower in the centre four dragons look down and coil their tails heavenward together to form a spire about a hundred and fifty feet high. Another of his works is the Round Tower, originally used as an observatory. It is entirely filled by a brick slope up which one may walk with ease to the top, corkscrewing round a pillar. Over the metal parapet that bears the date of 1643, there is a splendid view across wide miles of steep roofs covered with curving tiles, relieved by many a tree and the tall masts of many a ship. And the other spires and towers and domes of the city make a really splendid array, especially the quaint steeple of Vor Frelser Kirke, round whose outside an open stairway winds to the golden ball at the top. Across the Sound loom up low Swedish hills, but the city is too vast to allow a view of Danish country of any decipherable sort. Over thirteen miles of choppy sea appears the small isle of Hveen, now famous for its hares, where in 1580 Tycho Brahe built his observatory and wielded the sword, not to smite flesh and blood, but to strike out a clearer path up to the stars of heaven'."

The Phrase "Big Three."

The present craze for designating all sorts of combinations and enterprises in terms of numbers, with the adjective "big" prefixed, is by no means new.

Moltke, so long ago as 1871, coined the phrase "Big Three" in allusion to the French fortresses of Strasbourg, Metz and Verdun. "With the Big Three in our possession our safety is assured," he said at the Versailles peace conference. He got his will so far as the first two were concerned, but failed as regards the third, luckily for France, and the world at large.

To-day we find the newspapers using the phrase Big Three to designate three individuals—Clemenceau, Lloyd George and Wilson, and three affiliated trade unions—those representing the railwaymen, miners and transport workers. — Pearson's Weekly.

He Knew the Facts.

"My dear sir," said the friendly old gentleman to another man who was smiling grimly as he read an automobile advertisement in a magazine, "pardon me, but you seem to get some amusement out of that beautifully illustrated and finely worded advertisement." "Yes," replied the other. "I can take a joke, even when it's at my expense. I own one of these blankety-blanked cars."

No Such Thing.

"And we can sell you this car on easy payments," said the agent, pleasantly. "My friend," replied the prospect, "the expression 'easy payments' belongs to the same category with that other well known fib, painless dentistry'."

Mrs. F. Watson, 80, Chicago's only surviving Civil War nurse, is dead.

ANNA I. NILLSON IN "THE WAY OF THE STRONG."

Anna Q. Nilsson, whose wealth of blonde hair is her crowing glory, will be seen as a brunette in the prologue of "The Way of the Strong," a new Metro production featuring Miss Nilsson at the head of a notable cast, which opens at the Grand today. Miss Nilsson enacts two roles in this picture. First she is the wife of the Yukon prospector whose dominant personality is the basis of the title, later she is the betrayed woman's half sister, a blonde, with whom the strong man at last finds love and happiness.

Edwin Carewe directed Miss Nilsson in "The Way of the Strong." Fin is Fox's screen adaptation of the popular novel by Ridgewell Cullum.

The company spent two weeks at Truckee, California, where they took Yukon snow scenes in the white-clad Sierra Madras. They returned to balmy Hollywood after enduring the rigors of cold that at one time touched 17 degrees below zero.

Joe King, recently with Triangle, plays opposite Miss Nilsson in "The Way of the Strong," in an exceedingly virile role. Harry S. Northrup does the heavy part. Precocious and talented little Irene Yeager appears as a boy—the child that ultimately repays the man and woman for the sufferings they undergo.

This picture to be presented at the Grand today, Friday and Saturday.

Best Ethel Clayton Has Ever Yet Done

THAT IS OPINION OF CRITICS CONCERNING "A SOUL WITHOUT WINDOWS.

"It is the very best thing that Ethel Clayton has ever done."

"It is the sort of a picture that is brought back again and again by theatres for return engagements."

"It sets a new standard."

"It's great, that's all—it's simply great!"

These and many similar statements are the opinions of motion picture critics who have seen Miss Ethel Clayton in her newest World-Picture "A Soul Without Windows."

It is doubtful if any picture has recently been as highly praised as this altogether delightful new attraction in which this winsome star is seen in such an interesting, varied and pleasing role. It is doubtful if any picture recently produced has such high entertainment values, such gripping interest, such a thoroughly pleasing story as this production.

It is certain to make a big hit in this city, not alone because Miss Clayton is so immensely popular here but because it is the kind of a story that the people of this city like—a strong convincing drama, full of unusual incidents, jammed with splendid characterizations and presenting the star in the most charming and pleasing of roles.

"A Soul Without Windows," will be the big attraction today, Friday and Saturday at the Grand. Arrange now to be among those who are splendidly entertained by this attraction at this theatre on this date.

All Plodders.

I have known several men who may be recognized in days to come as men of genius, and they were all plodders, hard working, intent men. Genius is known by its works; genius without works is a blind faith, a dumb oracle. But meritorious works are the result of time and labor, and cannot be accomplished by intention or by a wish. Every great work is the result of time, of vast preparatory training. Facility comes by labor.—George Ross.

Time's Changes.

Caesar used to wait days to hear from the outposts of his empire, but today the descendants of his legions who plow the sunny fields near Hammond, La., get daily market news on their strawberries from places thousands of miles away. This news comes over wires and is issued in Italian, as well as in English, by the local office of the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture.

Life of Candle Flame.

Laboratory experiments conducted of late have shown that a candle flame will become extinguished when the oxygen content of the atmosphere in which it is burning falls to about 45 per cent. Sulphur stops burning when all but 13.5 per cent of the oxygen in an inclosed space has been exhausted. The case of charcoal, however, is notable. Combustion continues until only 9 per cent of the oxygen remains.

Will Seek for Treasure Buried by Francis Drake In the Pacific Islands

THE very mention of an island of the Pacific and you have a name to conjure with. It may be the halo that has surrounded Robinson Crusoe since your childhood days, but whatever the reason there is something mysterious, romantic about islands. Hence, when suit was started in the Superior Court of Santa Barbara, California, a few days ago by one of the seven holders of title to Santa Cruz Island for the partition of that little sun-kissed empire of 50,000 acres among the individual owners, imagination was at once kindled anew, says an exchange. The ostensible purpose of the partition is to give the Federal Government an opportunity to acquire such reservations as may be required for the defensive fortifications of the channel and mainland against the invasion of the United States via California by enemy troops. The general plan is to mount long-range guns captured from Germany and thus be in a position to sweep the paths of the Pacific for miles.

Buried treasure! That, declares the students of island lore, is the great desideratum, for be it known in the years of long ago when the British pirates, headed by Sir Francis Drake, ploughed the main, they despoiled the Spanish galleons of many million dollars' worth of gold and silver coin and plate, gems of rare price, bullion and doubloons. Only a small fraction of Drake's ill-gotten gains was ever recorded as having reached England, and it is known that upon at least one occasion, when the buccaneer was hard pressed by the Spanish armada, after he had despoiled a treasure squadron on its way from Manila and the Spice Islands, he sought refuge in a secluded harbor of Santa Cruz. Tons of his loot were lightered ashore and buried on the island, so the story runs. Having eluded his pursuers, a storm, coming up from the west, Drake was compelled to set sail without having recovered his hidden treasure. The voyage to England was made in safety, but there is no evidence that either Drake or his successors or agents returned to Santa Cruz. The navy of Spain offered protection to her island commerce to such an extent that piracy became taboo. The present owners of the island—one faction of the holders—is said to have made a discovery bearing upon the location of the pirate's cache; but the owners are involved in quarrels, and no exploration under present conditions is either possible or permitted. Those who think they know where the wealth lies hidden are unwilling that the other faction of the syndicate shall profit by the knowledge, and rely upon partition by the court to award the coveted holdings.

Santa Cruz and the other islands lying just off the California coast were not always the barren, deserted and desolate wastes the fisherman sees to-day. Juan Rodriques Cabrilla, the daring Portuguese navigator—the first white man to view California — discovered them when passing up the coast in 1542. He found them densely peopled by tribes of industrious Indians. Next came Sebastian Viscaino in 1602, and he tells the same story of Indians and activity. Sixty years later Portola found them the same. But during the next century when Father Junipero Serra and the padres arrived they discovered that the islands were all but deserted. The heavy timber spoken of by those who had preceded them had dwindled to mere shrubs, while at least one of the islands—San Nicolas—had been converted into rivers of sand drifting into the sea.

Great mounds of Indian poles tell where the Indians went; but there is nothing to indicate whether they were overpowered by a superior race or wiped from the face of the earth by the Russians descending upon them from Alaska. That they were transported to the mainland by boats is not probable, as the only boats they possessed were such as they could manufacture with primitive tools. They had no edged tools except of flint, and the only method they had of holding the planks together was by boring holes through the boards and securing them by means of rawhide.

With the division of the islands into individual holdings it is believed extensive explorations will be undertaken, when it is expected the Indian mounds will be excavated in the hope of reading the story of the lost tribe. But the exploration that holds the greater interest is that which has for its object the uncovering of the Spanish treasure buried securely by Sir Francis Drake and believed to be still reposing in its hiding place.

Of deeper interest to scientists, however, than the search for burial treasure are the possibilities that the exploration of the islands may open to archeologists and paleontologists. In the past the surface of the possessions has received only a superficial scratching. However, that scratching has yielded tons of interesting relics of an earlier civilization.

Labor In Russia.

The Czar's Government withheld from Russian workmen the right to strike by requiring them to give their employer two weeks' notice before quitting his employ.

Chauffeur—Well, sir, you see we are headed down.

NEW RECORD FOR TENNIS BY WOMAN

MRS. GEO. WIGHTMAN OF BROOKLINE, MASS., WINS FIFTEEN NATIONAL TITLES.

A new record has been established by Mrs. Geo. W. Wightman, of Brooklin, was by her recent winning of the woman's single championship at Philadelphia. She has now won fifteen national titles. As Miss Hazel Hotchkiss she won the singles champion in 1909, 1910 and 1911. After a lapse of eight years she is now champion for the fourth time.

She has also been winner of the national doubles four times and the national mixed doubles five times. Last spring as a preliminary to her recent comeback she added the national indoor singles and doubles to her list. [redacted]

In the recent women's championship at Philadelphia Mrs. Wightman, after winning the first game fro mMiss Eleanor Goss, lost ten in sucression and seemed utterly unable to cope with the hard driving and sharp volleying of her opponent. With the score 4-0 against her in the second set Mrs. Wightman suddenl ychanged to a gentle lobbing and "patball" game, which so disconcerted her opponent that the latter beat herself.

R. D. Wrenn, Little and Hackett are past masters of tactics and have won many matches through generalship.

BUT ONE CREW FROM OTTAWA FOR HENLEY REGATTA

Ottawa, July 17.—It is definitely announced that the Ottawa Rowling Club would only have one crew in the Royal Canadian Henley regatta. This will be the junior eight, stroked by Gordon Dunlop. Hopes had been entertained that the Ottawa Club would be able to send a junior four and a 140-lb. eight, but these have vanished and an officer of the club stated that one eight would be "the best that Ottawa could do this year."

Lawn Tennis is as Old as the Hills

A FAVORITE GAME WITH ROYALTY THREE CENTURIES AND NINE AGO.

It may be claimed that lawn tennis is at least three centuries old, having been played in 1591 when Queen Elizabeth was entertained at Elvetham, in Hampshire, by the Earl of Hertford. Strutt, quotting from Nichol's "Progress of Queen Elizabeth," tells us that "after dinner, about 3 o'clock, 10 of His Lordship's servants, all Somersetshire men, in a square green court, before lines, squaring out the form of a tennis court and making a cross line in the middle. In this square they, being stript of their doubles, played, five to five, with handball the great liking of Her Highness."

RACE TRACK CHANGES HANDS

The Thoroughbred Horse Association of America has purchased the controlling stock of the Havre de Grace, Md., race track yesterday for $250,000. The track in future will be operated under the "Simms plan," which will limit profits to ten per cent. on the investment, the surplus revenue being used to make the track one of the picturesque landmarks of the East, and to develop the breeding industry.

GARWOOD OF DETROIT ESTABLISHES RECORD AT PUT-IN-BAY.

At Port-in-Bay, Ohio, over a 15-mile course at the Inter-Lake Yachting Association regatta Gar Wood, of Detroit, established a record for the course by driving a new boat which he hasn't yet named, an average of better than 37 miles an hour.

Wood covered the first five miles lap in eight minutes and five seconds, the second in eight minutes and one second, and the final lap in seven minutes and 52 seconds. Wood's performance was the feature of the day's events, in which sailing yachts and power craft took part in the regatta.

BELLEVILLE BALL TEAM GOES DOWN TO DEFEAT-SCORE 6-1

Peterborough and Belleville are Tie For First Place in Central Ontario League Series—Game Here Saturday July 26

Belleville Ontario League ball team went down to defeat last evening at the hands of Lindsay, who all but shut them out with a score of 6 to 1 in favor of the Scugog nine.

The game was played at Lindsay in the presence of a fairly large crowd. Peterborough fans, who went up to Lindsay on the 5.30 train, together with quite a few enthusiasts by motor car, made a good sized contingent of spectators. Belleville fans accompanied their team in goodly numbers.

Although the score does not show up to the Belleville's credit, still the game was keenly contested and retained interest throughout. Belleville barely escaped a zero score by one run in the 9th innings, while Lindsay scored 2, 3 and 1 runs in innings 3, 6 and 8, respectively.

Peterborough-Belleville Tie

This defeat of Belleville ties Peterborough and Belleville for first place in the C. O. L. series, and the deciding match will be contested on the Riverside diamond, Peterborough, Saturday, week next, July 26th.

Another Exhibit.

During the game Flight-Lieut. Arthur Cooley, of Toronto, flew over the ball field, and entertained the crowd with a few breath-holding aerial stunts.

Robinson Crusoe.

Defoe based his story, "Robinson Crusoe," which made him famous, on the experiences of Selkirk, who was put ashore on Juan Fernandez Island, at his own request, as he had quarreled with the captain of the Cinque Ports, of which he was sailing master. Selkirk remained on the island more than four years, and in 1712 there appeared his book, "Cruising Voyage Around the World," and Captain Cooke's "Voyage to the South Sea," which Defoe used as his basis.

Tip to Authors.

A youthful aspirant applied to a successful authoress for advice as to how to succeed in literature. "You need indomitable perseverance, a typewriter and a mangle," was the reply. "Do you mean I had better take in washing?" asked the aspirant. "Nonsense! You need the mangle to take the creases out of your manuscripts. Mangle them well, and then, unless the editors have burned them with cigarette ash, no one can tell they have been out before."

Australian Forests.

Australia has extensive forests, but owing to lack of sufficient railway and shipping facilities, a comparatively small amount of the timber has thus far been cut.

Unendurable Surgical Thirst.

Thirst following abdominal operations is often of so intense a character that the memory of it lingers in the patient's mind for many years. Every hospital has records of patients who have surreptitiously consumed the contents of a hot water bottle in an effort to quench the unendurable thirst from which they were suffering.

Just at Hand.

"The best things are nearest, breath in your nostrils, light in your eyes, flowers at your feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars, but do life's plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life."—Marcus Aurelius.

SOLDIERS, SAILORS IN U. S. HENLEY

ALLIED OARSMEN ARE INVITED TO TAKE PART IN SPECIAL EVENTS.

New York, July 17.—For the first time in the history of the National Rowing regatta, two special events have been added to this year's programme in order to give soldiers and sailors of the Allied nations an opportunity of competing. Twelve regular championship races will be rowed over the Lake Quinsigamond course on August 1 and 2, in the forty-fifth annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, which this year will be held under the auspices of the Lake Quinsigamond Association of Worcester, Mass. Eleven of these will be rowed over a straightaway course of one mile and a quarter, and the other will be a one-quarter mile dash for seniors.

The regatta committee unanimously decided to cater for the soldiers and sailors of any or all of the Allied by the addition of a single scull, shell race and a four-oared gig event with coxswain. The single scull shell race will be open to those who never won the single scull shell senior or the single scull national championship. The first prize for this contest a silver cup emblematic of the championship of the world, is the gift of Major-General John F. O'Ryan, while the second and third men will receive a silver medal and a bronze medal, respectively.

President John J. F. Mulcahey, of the Atlanta Boat Club, of New York, has donated gold, silver and bronze medals for the winning and placed crews in the four-oared gig open boat race, with coxwain weighing 105 pounds, open to Allied soldiers and sailors.

Began the Bastille.

April 21 is the anniversary of the beginning of the building of the bastille in 1370 by Charles V, who erected it as a protection against the English. The prison became famous in French history and was finally destroyed by the people in 1789. The key was sent by Thomas Paine to George Washington.

What Quadrille Means.

The word "quadrille" is derived from the position of the dancers, the French word "quadrille" meaning a little square. "Country dance" does not mean a rustic dance, but it is a corruption of the French term contredanse, which relates to the position of the couples—opposite to each other.

Billions of Lead Pencils.

The world's product of lead pencils probably amounts to nearly two thousand millions a year, half of which are made from American-grown cedar. The United States makes about 750,000,000 a year, or more than eight pencils for each of its inhabitants.

Need for Both Law and Sword.

In all government there must of necessity be both the law and the sword; laws without arms would give us not liberty but licentiousness, and arms without laws would produce not subjection but slavery.—Colton.

The piece of eight was the old Spanish piaster or peso, now called a dollar, thus known throughout the Spanish Main in the days of piracy, because it was divided into eight reals. It was a silver coin worth $1.

Speeches were made, congratulating the young couple and wishing them every success and happiness, in the new sphere. Mr. and Mrs. Jones replied, Mrs. Jones assuring the gathering that although she had only been in Canada a few days, she felt quite at home, and was most delighted with the cordial reception extended to her.

Unity of Action Has Marked Campaign From Beginning—Scores of Conversions Recorded.

The big Union Evangelistic Campaign, which has been in progress in Peterborough for just a month, concluded last evening with one of the best meetings of the series. In fact, the four last meetings were the four best meetings for their respective nights of the campaign. The campaign has been a distinct success. Scores of conversions have been recorded. Last night it was a striking scene when the converts present gathered in front of the platform and gave testimonies growing out of their brief Christian experience. The converts included children from fourteen years of age, with possibly a few a little younger, to those well up in years, the great majority of those who have taken a stand during the campaign having been adults.

Conversions That Last.

Sometimes the criticism is made against campaigns of this kind that conversions recorded during the excitement of a campaign are seldom lasting. On a couple of nights during the campaign Evangelist Kennedy thoroughly exploded this charge by the simple expedient of asking the Christians present who had been converted in an evangelistic meeting to stand. In all parts of the tent people stood up until it was evident that probably half or more of the Christians in attendance had been converted through the efforts of evangelists. As many of these people had been Christians for many years, there was not much left that could be said against such methods. Those who stood included people prominent in the public life of Peterborough.

The campaign in this city has been a remarkable one in a number of respects. In spite of the fact that there were many discouraging influences to contend with, success has attended the effort from the outset. Evangelist Kennedy stated last evening that although he had been in evangelistic work for twenty years and had taken part in some two hundred campaigns in different parts of the United States and Canada, he had never been connected with a campaign that has been conducted so smoothly as the one in Peterborough. From start to finish there had been complete harmony among the members of the committee in charge, who had worked together earnestly and sympathetically for the success of the campaign. This created a splendid feeling which had been evident from the opening night of the campaign and continued throughout. There had been sympathy also on the part of the public which was very apparent, there having been practically no criticism or fault-finding from any quarter with any part of the campaign.

Unusual Feature.

A novel feature of the campaign was the fact that no collections were taken up on week nights during the first four weeks of the campaign. It was thought that the success of the meetings might be interfered with by the constant taking of offerings. The committee decided, therefore, that they would rely on the Sunday night collections and a private canvass among the Christian people of the city to meet the $800 or more of direct expense that was involved in the campaign. This did not include anything for Mr. Kennedy. The response on the Sunday evenings and of the people who have been approached in the matter has been so generous that the committee is meeting all the expenses promptly and in full. Evangelist Kennedy's understanding was that he should receive a free-will offering the last Sunday evening and whatever the public might care to give. Offerings have been taken up for this purpose, and the results have shown how greatly appreciated Mr. Kennedy's services have been, although he has not received more than the committee felt he was justly entitled to. Thanks was expressed last evening to the Christian people who have contributed towards the expenses of the campaign.

Some Discouraging Features.

Among the discouraging features for a while were the hot weather on the opening days of the campaign, the fact that the children in the schools have been busy on examinations and therefore it was not practicable to take means of interesting them; the church choirs have been pretty well disorganized, as usual, at this time of the year, making it difficult to obtain their full co-operation, and last week there was the presence in the city throughout the week of the Chautauqua meetings. In spite of all these factors, the meetings on the whole have been well attended, especially Sunday nights, when the tent was always crowded. It was realized also that the success of the campaign cannot be judged by the scores of conversions which were recorded, as many Christian people in the city have received great help and seed has been sown that will bring in results later. For instance, one woman who refused to take a stand for Christ during the meetings accepted Christ the following night at a meeting of the Salvation Army. Splendid assistance has been given by a number of the choirs of the city. When some of the choirs could not arrange to have their members attend they supplied special musical features, such as solos, duets and quartettes which proved of great assistance. Mr. Kennedy paid special tribute last evening to the invaluable assistance that has been rendered by Mr. Geo. Mulligan, not only in the making of the preliminary arrangements for the campaign, but as leader of the service of song night after night. Often men who conduct this work, no more ably than Mr. Mulligan has done, received as high as $50 a week for their services. Mr. Mulligan undertook the work in this case without asking for any financial return whatever. The services also of Mr. F. E. Walden, at the piano, have been of great value. Many of those who attended the meetings commented highly on Mr. Walden's sympathetic accompaniment of the different hymns and songs.

Loyal support has been given the campaign by the leading ministers of the city, some of whom have scarcely missed a meeting from the start. Messrs. Pogue, Thomas, Malott and Cruikshanks have been most faithful in their support. Assistance has also been given by Rev. Messrs Webb, Greatrix, Whattam, Doner, Galt and others.

Mr. Kennedy last evening attributed the success of the campaign very largely to the splendid reports the city papers have given of the meetings night after night. He stated that he had never been connected with a campaign when such complete and accurate reports of the meetings had been published as has been the case in Peterborough. Mention of the co-operation the papers were giving was made several times, while the meetings were in progress. By means of the reports in the daily papers, thousands of people have been reached who were not in attendance at the meetings.

In addition to these reports a large number of pamphlets have been distributed to the converts as well as to all who asked for them. Probably $40 or $50 worth of literature has been distributed.

Meetings for Converts

The committee in charge of the campaign is planning to arrange for a series of special meetings to be conducted in the interests of the converts in order to give them instruction in the first steps of the Christian life. The converts present last evening voted practically unanimously in favor of the holding of such meetings. Mr Kennedy will be in the city for a few weeks and has kindly consented to address any such meetings that may be arranged. All the converts are being encouraged to identify themselves with the churches of their preference in the city. Some of those who have been converted have been from points outside the city, including Toronto.

The chairman of the local committee expressed last night from the platform the warm appreciation of the committee of Mr. Kennedy's services as the evangelist. From start to finish Mr. Kennedy's handling of his subjects and of the meetings, it was stated, had given the most complete satisfaction and the fact that conversions were recorded every night from the night the first appeal was made to the closing meeting, with only one exception when a special meeting for Christians was held, showed that God's spirit had been present throughout and that God had been honoring Mr. Kennedy's efforts. Reference was madeto Mr. Kennedy's fidelity to the word of God. Mr. Kennedy has spoken on an average of about one hour a night for 31 nights, a somewhat remarkable record. A feature of his preaching has been the fact that he never uses a note and his wonderful memory of the scriptures, he frequently quoting lengthy passages from all parts of the scriptures to an extent that has been the cause of much comment. As is well know, Mr. Kennedy was born and brought up in Peterborough and his friends are naturally much gratified with the success that has attended this campaign.

EX-KAISER SAW NO REASON FOR WAR BETWEEN SERBIA AND AUSTRIA

Letter Written in 1914 and Just Published, Shows That Emperor Was in Favor of Arranging Terms Between the Two Powers.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, July 18.—A letter written by former Emperor William, July 28 1914, to Dr. Von Belham, N.-Hollweg, then the Imperial German Chancelor, is published here. The letter says that after having read the Serbian reply to the Austrian ultimatum it was the opinion of the Emperor that all of Austria's wishes had been met and that all ground for war was removed. It adds, however, that as the Serbians "are Orientals and untrustworthy" that the Austrians should occupy Belgrade until the Serbian promises were fulfil. "On this basis," says the emperor, "I would be ready to arrange peace in Austria."

Air Passenger Service in City

VISITING AIRPLANE DOING GOOD BUSINESS IN 10-MINTE FLIGHTS AT $10 EACH.

Fight-Lieut. Cooley's flight grounds below the De Laval, west of south Park street, was the centre of interest for Peterborough citizens last evening. Hundreds assembled there to witness landings and ascensions by the visiting airplane and to take note of citizen passengers who side-tracked their nerves and paid $10 for a ten-minute soaring in the air among the birds. Strapped in and with ears and eyes protected, there is not the slightest danger in making a trip above in case of the visiting birdman, whose control of, and skill in operating, his machine, is marvellous. While ten minutes is not a long flight, still Cooley gives his passengers in that time thrilling experiences in half turns, figure eight gyrations nose and spiral dives.

Yesterday afternoon, passengers offered freely, and had to book ahead, and last evening saw but rare intervals between flights for lack of passengers. He carried during the afternoon and evening at least 33 passengers, one a trip—male and female carried he them—at $10 per. This netted him $330 in fares yesterday, and business is still good.

Drys Propose To Outlaw Stocks Of Liquor Stored In Private Houses

Washington, July 18.—Flushed with their sweeping victory over the "Liberals" some of the "bone-dry" members of the House determined upon a plan to make the Volstead prohibition enforcement bill even more drastic than it now stands. This plan is aimed at the element that laid in a supply of liquors before the war-prohibition act became operative July 1. Notice to this effect was served at a meeting of the Judiciary Committee today.

When consideration of the bill is removed an amendment will be offered to eliminate the provision legalizing the possession in residences of intoxicants. The reiterated charges that many members of Congress and wealthy citizens quantities of wines, whiskey and beer, the "bone dry" advocates declare, make it necessary to insert in the enforcement legislation a prohibition against the possession of liquors regardless of when purchased.

The proponents of this provision claim they will have sufficient strength to put it through, but the less radical "drys" indicated that such an attempt would result in a split in the "dry" ranks. The latter faction will not favor an amendment which goes further than to restrict the use of liquors purchased before July 1 to the owners' immediate families and bone fide guests.

The elimination of the provision permitting possession of liquors laid in before July 1, it is pointed out, will necessitate the inclusion of a supplemental amendment granting the right of search and seizure of private homes. A move of this character, it is admitted, is certain to meet with bitter opposition. Many members who have stood solidly with the "drys" would not support it.

The meeting of the committee was held for the purpose of agreeing on amendments to libralize the bill so as to permit the manufacture and sale of legitimate commodities such as flavoring extracts, patent medicines, toilet articles, etc., which contain more than one-half of one per cent. of alcohol. This change will be effected by amendments exempting from the operation of the law liquids "unfit for drinking purposes."

Despite the defeat of all attempts to modify the bill Monday, the "wets" announced that they are still determined to push their fight against the more drastic provisions of the measure. Representative Igoe, of Missouri, "wet" leader, said he would renew the effort to eliminate the definition of intoxicating liquor which limits the alcoholic content to one-half of 1 per cent.

When advised of this attitude on the part of the "wets," the "dry" leaders asserted that all such efforts would be short-lived. They assert that their steam roller will soon flatten out all opposition and the bill will be put through without any important change.

MAYOR MAY CALL SPECIAL MEETING OF COUNCIL TO RESCIND BRIDGE BY-LAW

Labor Aldermen Have Persuaded Him to Withhold Signature From Contract

The Kearns-Guise-Bagley threatened injunction against the city, to restrain Council from building the new bridge, under contract with the Russell-Townsend Co., is all off, the applicants for restrain not having put up security for $10,000, to secure further proceedings. The time limit for satisfying the law in this respect was yesterday.

This morning at ten o'clock Mayor Duncan said he was willing and ready to sign the contract with the Russell-Townsend people whose signature had already been attached to the document. But, he stated Ald. Gainey, Garside and Crowe, each of whom voted for the Russell-Townsend bylaw, now are anxious that he should call a special council meeting to re-open the whole question with a view to rescinding the by-law.

They persuaded his worship to delay signing the contract a few hours, in the hope of their securing three more Aldermen to fall in line with their views and thus warant the Mayor in calling a meeting to again discuss the contract.

Up to a late hour this afternoon the three malcontents had not succeeded in their purpose, neither had the contract been signed by His Worship.

Ald. Crowe, personally, is quite satisfied with the Russell-Townsend contract; but Ald. Gainey and Garside are pressing him, as a fellow labor Alderman to support them in their views in opposition to proceeding with the work, the other Labor Alderman, Ald. Morrison, voted against the Russell Townsend proposition, seeing that it carried, in Council is anxious that work on the bridge should now go ahead.

Ald. Crowe when in Toornto was greatly impressed with the Russell-Townsend work and their huge plant

FRENCH EXPERT DESIGNED GUN WITH RANGE OF HUNDRED MILES

Official Red Tape, However, Retarded the Order for the Manufacture, But Cannon Was Ready for Service When Armistic Was Signed.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 18. While giving evidence before the committee of the Chamber of Deputies investigating the Briey question, M. L. Bourgeois, Chief Engineer of the Navy Department, said that at the time Paris was being bombarded by the German long range guns, he had designed a canon with a range of 100 miles, which could be put in position in one hour. M. Bourgeois stated that previous to that time he had urged upon Albert Thomas, then Under Secretary of State for War and Munitions the importance of bombarding the Briey iron works and had been asked to design a long range cannon. His plans, however, were sent from one committee to another and the order to manufacture it was not given until February 1918. The gun was ready for action at the time the armistice was signed he said.

TO PACIFY RUSSIA IS FIRST DUTY OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Winston Church Says That Nation is Keynote of Peace of the World—Justifies Action of Allies in Warring on Bolsheviki

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 18.—"Russia at the present moment is the beynote of the future peace of the world and the relifting of that country must be the first duty of the League of Nations." said Winston Churchill in an address at the British Russian Club dinner last night. "If the whole of Russia and its resources fall into the hands of Lenine and Trotzky, the whole power of the Bolshevik forces will be thrown against those little states which have been promised protection of the League of Nations. If the Bolshevik forces prevail in Russia, these little states, nay Russia itself, will fall into the hands of Germany," he continued.

Mr. Churchill defended the action of the Allies in sending troops to Russia and said if the five government powers had been able to act in concert, "things would not be as they are there."

He declared more than 300,000 Bolsheviki were being held in check by the Allies and "if the British Government contributed in any way toward that result, I for one rejoice."

Mr. Churchill predicted an entire change in the situation within a fortnight, but did not explain what it might be.

Plenty of Work elsewhere in Ontario and not much doing in Peterborough is the report of Hugh Robertson of the Dominion-Provincial Labor Employment Bureau. Mr. Waters had just reached his office on July 3, when he realized death was near. He reached for the nearest piece of paper—a market report, scribbled six words and obtained the signatures of two business associates, as witnesses before he died.

CIVIC HANDICAPS.

THERE IS SOMETHING the matter with any community the public officials of which are retroactive, where they are wedded to the methods of the sixteenth century. The sun may rise and set regardless of human inactivity or retrogression, but no municipality can make progress if those charged with its management insist on holding it in a deadlock.

There is something the matter with any community in which the minority in any movement refuse to submit to and co-operate with the majority, but persevere in the role of the canine in the manger full of hay.

There is something the matter with any centre that, while aspiring to the status of a city still adopts the ways that are popular ii the country village, entertainments included. Cities are judged to a great extent by outsiders according to the stylo of amusments in which the people indulge.

MAKING RESTITUTION.

A MAN MAY WRECK a bank and get away with it scot free, no matter what sorrow and suffering he creates in the community whose confidence he enjoyed. A man may play fast and loose with the savings of the widow, with the money that is needed to feed helpless orphans, and roll in ease and opulence himself while his victims starve. Even if the majesty of the law feels itself outraged and the wrecker of homes is sent for a short term to the penitentiary, that does not help the situation of those he has ruined. There is in such cases no talk of restitution except to the extent of the trifle that may be saved from the wreck, a trifle that the despoiler was unable to make away with.

A baby steals a bag of peanuts or some other comestible left within his easy reach; he may wantonly or even accidentally work some other damage, and his parents are held responsible for the loss. The boy taken into court is sentenced to a public whipping and to a jail term unless the parents make good to the full the loss that the child has created. Such a boy has his chance to learn. He may not know it now, but when he grows up he will realize, recalling events of his youth, that the criminal who would secure immunity must devote his efforts to the big affairs of his line of endeavor. He will in time come to see the difference between embezzlement, breach of trust and mere petty peculations.

MR. DEWART'S STAR OF HOPE.

MR. ROWELL SAYS that Mr. Hartley Dewart, the new leader of the Ontario Liberals, is the rising hope of the liquor party. Mr. Dewart disclaims this with an indignation that is, under the circumstances, peculiarly significant.

Mr. Dewart can hardly claim to be the rising hope of the prohibitionists. What is he, then? His star is visible nowhere in the political firmament. Has it set forever or has it not yet risen?

THE PARTY AND THE VETERANS.

THE ACTION of the executive committee of the Liberal-Conservative Association Monday night in failing to recommend Mr. J. F. Strickland for the position of chief enumerator for this riding, after he had been endorsed by his fellow members of the G. W. V. A., does not show any lack of harmony between the two organizations. The circumstance was due entirely to a hitch in the arrangements.

Mr. Strickland's application did not reach the executive in time. He mailed it to President Moore, who lives in Smith Township, and the rural delivery system failed to get the letter into Mr. Moore's hands before the meeting Monday night. The members of the executive had nothing before them in this particular case upon which to take action. The result might have been entirely different had conditions been otherwise.

CANADA TAKES FULL RANK.

THE FORWARD STEP was taken when Canada's plenipotentiaries signed the treaty of peace at Versailles with those of the world powers. From the time the first British settler came to this country the possibilities were here of founding and developing a great nation to eventually take its place among the other great nations of the world. Many weary years have intervened since then and at times it seemed that such a thing could never be accomplished. But the faith of the pioneers has been justified, and they "who builded better than they knew" bequeathed to their children a rich heritage which is now reaching its full fruition.

Its growth has been accelerated, not forced, by the awful hours of agony endured during the last four years of horrible warfare. But that is now a thing of the past, and now her sons and daughters, regal in the dignity of their newly acquired nationhood, stand upon the threshold of a new era.

Whatever may be the national characteristics that eventually will be one of the chief traits of Canadians, it is of vital importance at this stage of development that habits of thrift should be cultivated by the people. To "teach the young idea how to shoot" is no longer popular or necessary, but to teach the children the true meaning of thrift in all its relationships, will be to provide them with an equipment for fighting the battle of life successfully and for developing a sturdy type of character.

With this object in view, the Thrift Campaign, by means of War Savings and Thrift Stamps, should find a response everywhere and should receive the cordial support of parents, teachers and all educational authorities.

Habits, even bad ones, are not acquired in one day. It, therefore, must not be expected that within the short time the Thrift Campaign has been in progress that any great impression has been made upon the habits of the people. But its continuation upon a permanent basis will bring results of untold value, even unto the "third and fourth generation."

WHAT FREE TRADE WOULD MEAN.

THE CANADIAN agricultural implement industry represents an invested capital of $800,000,000, employs over 20,000 persons, and pays $20,000,000 in wages and salaries annually. In a recent address to the farmers of Huron County, Mr. Thomas Findlay, president of the Massey-Harris Company, said:

"We could make implements in Canada under free trade, but to make as much money we would have to remove part of our industry to another country. That removal I do not wish to contemplate, because it means the enrichment of another country at the expense of this. As to this, the manufacturer also pays duty. But if we were to say on that account that we want to go to the other country and ship the finished articles from there, though we should make as much money under free trade in this country, it would mean putting the industry upon the other side of the line. It wauld mean putting the people who make their wages in this industry on the other side of the line. The capital and the employment would go out of Canada. That is what is involved by the attack upon the tariff on the claim that it affords protection to particlular industries."

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

JOHN BULL'S MOTTO.

(Kingston Whig.)

The people of the United States seem to be receiving the self-appointed president of the Irish republic with open arms, but they will have to understand that John Bull's motto in regard to Ireland is, 'No interference.'"

WARNING TO PROFITEERS.

(Buffalo Courier.)

The Italian protest against the high cost of living has taken a primitive form, mobs looting the stores at Foril. That is a possibility all profiteers would do well to keep in mind when they are considering raising prices.

SARCASTIC.

(Brantford Expositor.)

Sir Thomas White enlightens the country by declaring that the solution of the problem of the high cost of living is thirft and greater production. Such sagacity. But will the Minister kindly tell an eager people how to save at present prices of all the necessaries of existence?

UP TO CANADIANS.

(Galt Reporter.)

Unless Canadians get down to business, investigate the conditions of the market, appoint business men to help in the campaign, this country will get very little of the huge trade that Germany controlled in the British Empire before the war.

AN INHERENT RIGHT.

(Toronto Times.)

The right to organize is inherent. Workmen have never protested against the employers' associations, which are legion. Employers should realize that they cannot deny to their workers the right they exercise themselves. Industrial leaders have no basis for suspicion of Organized Labor. Their property has been saved for the rightful owners merely because the labor leaders refused to be the tools of the destructivists.

AMERICA'S OPPORTUNITY.

(London Advertiser.)

America can touch democratic principles as no other country can. It has had no "entangling alliances." It based its future on sound lines, and together Canada and the United States form an island continent many times the size of Great Britain, and if the power they together possess is exercised for the common good of all mankind, it will form a great proportion of all that is needed to insure a happy future for the world.

THE FEELING EXISTS.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

The committee on the high cost of living admits in its reports that there are individual cases of profiteering. Well, why not get after these individual cases? It might not lower the cost of living materially to do so, but it would be an evidence of good will toward the consumer. The reason why there is so much dissatisfaction at present is not merely that the cost of living is so high, but there is a general belief that it is unnecessarily high and that the sympathies of those in authority are with the profiteers rather than with their victims. There may be no foundation for that belief, but the fact that the feeling exists shows the necessity of doing something to allay it.

TO-DAY'S STORY

A young Canadian lady went over to England from Alberta early in 1914, and has been doing splendid work for our cause throughout the war. Living in London, she underwent all the horrors of the air raids. She made light of them at the time, described them humorously in her letters home, even when a bomb dropped in her garden and broke all her windows that had not been left open.

In her last letter, however, she says, "My hair is all turning grey!"

This seems to be a common experience.

A lady's hair dresser says that ever since the Zeppelins and air-planes began their murderous work he has been consulted by increasing numbers of young women, often mere girls of 18 or 19, about their hair turning its color.

"A certain military hospital," he says, "two or three times was nearly hit. In the end every one of its nurses had grey hair."

"One of my customers had his house hit and his wife killed, and the shock made him grow grey all at once."

After this, it will not be so hard to believe when we read "his hair turned white in a single night."

There is one industry that will benefit by this misfortune, anyhow; the making of hair dyes. Long before the war, it was notorious that able-bodied men whose hair was turning grey were constantly refused jobs as "too old," until they dyed their hair. Even since the armistice, the hair-dresser says he has known a man discharged because the air raids and other war worries have turned his hair quite grey. So now, more than ever before "it is necessary to dye in order to live."

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says it's a mighty good thing air-brakes were invented if aviation is going to become common.

Anniversary Dates During July

(By O. N. E.)

The townsman, country-bred, kicks himself in 80 and 90 weather, and wishes he was back on the farm. The clothes insisted on by town customs make life a burden. The white collar is worst of all; the cause of more discomfort than all the rest of the clothes put together.

Out on the farm, it matters little what you wear, so long as your overalls hold together. You can work as hard and sweat as healthily as you like, and be happy. In town, when you perspire (being too genteel and elegant to "sweat" in plain Bible English) you are all the time miserable for fear of the consequences to your linen.

Why the hot spell of July should be called the dog days well, I was taught to believe it was because the heat sent dogs mad. That notion appeals to me (knowing nothing about it) more than the ancient superstition that Sirius the Dog Star mysteriously warms up the weather for this poor little earth which no Sirian could see with the strongest telescope.

If your birthday comes in the Dog Days, perhaps you would like me to play fortune-teller and spin out a creed of nonsense about the effect of some particular star on your character and career. Like any other fortune-teller, I could deduce the most contradictory conclusions from one and the same fact. "Born in the Dog Days, you are hot-blooded, warm-hearted, generous, impulsive, capable of getting up much steam, and sure to go far."—or, "Born in the Dog Days, and suffering from their depressing heat, you are inclined to be indolent and lethargic, and will not go far without a great effort.'

Both are equally sensible; that is, both are nonsense. So I shall not turn fortune-teller, even to please you; but, hoping the future will be kind to you, simply wish "Many Happy Returns" to the thousands of our readers whose birthdays fall this week, July 16 to 22.

What Happened This Week.

Some very interesting anniversaries besides your own occur this week.

Sir Joshua Reynolds, the great painter, was born on July 16, 1723. John Martin born July 19, 1789, was not nearly such an able artist, but you are much more likely to have his pictures on your walls, especially his wonderful and lurid imaginations of the Last Judgment.

Thackeray, the "Vanity Fair" novelist, was born on July 18, 1811. That was also the Rev. Gilbert White's birthday in 1720. White of Selborne, the charming writer on Natural History.

And what a series of tragedies these July days have produced!

The Pied Piper, as the tale goes, on July 22, 1376, bewitched the children of Hamelin and led them into a mountain.

In real life, Peter III of Russia was strangled, probably by order of his own wife, the masterful Catherine, on July 16, 1762. The Marchioness of Brinvilliers, great dame as she was, was beheaded in Paris on July 17, 1676, for poisoning her father and two brothers. On the same day of 1793 Charlotte Corday was guillotined for slaying the bloodthirsty Marat. On July 21, 1683, William, Lord Russell, was beheaded in London, on a trumped up charge of treason against Charles II, his real offence being his attempt to have the King's brother James excluded from succession to the throne.

"Hotspur," otherwise Sir Henry Percy, famous at any rate to all readers of Shakespeare, fell in the battle of Shrewsbury, July 22, 1403,—according to the poet, by the sword of the Prince of Wales, afterwards Henry V. The Battle of Bull Run in the American Civil war was fought on the same day in 1861.

Last and greatest of all, comes Robert Burns, the poet of the people, who died on July 21, 1796, at the age of 37.

The Dogged Doctor.

Talking about Dog Days reminds me of dogged people, and especially of a Quaker, Dr. Rutty, who kept a curious diary from 1753 till his death in 1775. The thing somehow got published when he was dead and powerless to protest against the unveiling of his private confessions. Here are some of the entries:

Oct. 23—"Indulgence in bed an hour too long."

Dec. 17—"An hypochondriak obnubilation from wind and indigestion."

Sept. 28—"An overdose of whisky."

Sept. 29—"A dull, cross, cholerick day."

Jan. 22—"A little swinish at dinner and repast."

Jan. 31—"Dogged on provocation."

Feb. 5—"Very dogged or snappish."

Feb. 14—"Snappish on fasting." (on Valentine's Day too, though, of course, the good Quaker never thought of such frivolities.)

Feb. 26—"Cursed snappishness to those under me, on a bodily indisposition."

March 11—"On a provocation, exercised a dumb resentment for two days instead of scolding."

March 22—"Dogged again."

April 29—"Mechanically and sinfully dogged."

There, if ever we are inclined to scold or be dogged, to be "swinish" in eating or "snappish" in fasting, let us think how the fact would look in print, and pull up in time.—O.N.E.

WIT AND WISDOM

"Listen to this, Maria," said Mr. Stubb, as he unfolded his scientific paper. "This article states that in some of the old Roman prisons that have been unearthed they found the petrified remains af the prisoners."

"Gracious, John!" exclaimed Mrs. Stubb, with a smile, "them's what they call hardened criminals, I expect.

OUT OF HIS LINE.

Mrs. Gushing (at a private view)—I suppose you are greatly interested in the cubists and futurists, Mr. Maulstick?

Mr. Maulstick—My dear madam I'm a painter—not an alienist.

RIGHT WITH THE TIMES.

"Madam, you have had three husbands now," said her legal adviser "and every one of them either went crazy or turned out to be worthless. And yet you are thinking of marrying again!"

"Yes sir," answered the fair client; "what I think I've got now is a safe and sane fourth.

THE SOLDIERS PROTEST.

Bishop Flipper said in Atlanta:

"A colored chaplain was addressing a squad of colored men back of Bar-le-Duc.

" 'Boys,' he said, 'Satan is powerful, but he is not omnipotent. He is bound with chains, yet he can get at you'—and the chaplain pointed to a Mobile soldier—'and he can get at you' and he pointed to a soldier from Washington—'and he can get at you'—and he pointed to a soldier from Paint Rock.

"The Paint Rock soldier gave a grunt.

" 'Why, boss,' he protested, "the old cuss might as well be loose.' "

QUERY.

'The word 'highbrow' used to mean someone excessively intellectual, but now it apparently means someone who is disagreeable."

"Well, what's the difference?"

SIMPLIFIED READING.

The governess was listening to the children's reading lesson says the Philadelphia North American,' and her attention was, perhaps, wandering a little when suddenly she was brought back to earth by hearing young Timothy exclaim:

"This is a warm doughnut. Step on it."

"Timothy, whatever are you reading?" she exclaimed. "Let me see your book."

She looked and this is what she found: "This is a worm, Do not step on it."

A full grown moose was seen on the streets of Moncton, but escaped into a marsh.

Float Domestic Loan Next Fall

NO TAX EXEMPTION BUT A HIGHER RATE OF INTEREST.

Ottawa, July 17.—Preliminary preparations for the Dominion loan which is to be floated in the fall are under way. Now that the war is over and financial conditions are more normal, it is regarded as probable that the loan will not be tax-exempt, as was its war-time predecessors. Should the Government decide to follow this course, therel s little doubt that the rate of interest yield will be made quite attractive as compared with the rate at which Victory bonds can now be bought in the open market.

The tax exemption feature has added materially to the value of the previous issues and was, it is believed, the means of attracting a much larger volume of subscriptions than would have been otherwise obtained. During the last two years of the war, for instance, securities of Great Britain, France and other countries could be bought in New York to yield seven and eight per cent.

The terms of the new loan and getting the organization together for making it a success will be one of the first problems to be taken up by the new Minister of Finance when he is appointed.

Paganini used to electrify his audiences by playing music of incredible difficulty on one string of his violin. A Parisian cabby once attempted to overcharge him for a short ride, pleading as his xecuse, "You charge a great sum for playing on the string." To which Paganini retored, "I will pay you the fare you demand when you drive me on one wheel."

About $900 was collected in St. John, N.B., for the True Blue Orphanage at Picton.

Health and Happiness

Women of today seem to listen to every call of duty except the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. Home duties, church duties, war activities, and the hundred-and-one calls for charitable enterprises soon lead women to overdo. Nervousness, headaches, backaches and female troubles are the inevitable result.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt [illegible] most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which, added to my weak condition, kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness. Health and happiness? Yes, I have both now."—Mrs. J. W[illegible], 2[illegible] North Taylor Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The majority of women nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. Avoid them by taking in time

STRONG DRINK WAS ONE CAUSE OF WAR

THAT IS OPINION OF HENRY FORD, STATED UNDER OATH.

Mount Clemens, Mich., July 18.—Court had been in session nearly three hours before Henry Ford, plaintiff in a $1,000,000 libel suit against the Chicago Daily Tribune resumed the witness stand. The opening hours were consumed with testimony by Kirk E. B. Alexander and the reading of a magazine article on Mr. Ford by John Reed in 1916.

"The article says you live in a million dollar house," said Attorney Stevenson, representing the Tribune. "More than that, I guess."

"A million and a half?" "Well, I don't really know."

"Maybe you don't want to know." "I told them not to tell me," said Mr. Ford laughing.

"Mr. Reed paints you as a very democratic person, who loves to sit on a neighbor's back porch and talk. The neighbors don't sit on your back porch, do they? Guards keep them away, don't they?"

An objection was sustained. Mr. Ford said that Reed gathered practically all of the statements in his story elsewhere than from the witness. Witness suggested that Reed borrowed some of it from an article by Henry A. Wise Wood about disbelief in national boundaries and proposing a flag of all people.

Mr. Ford opposed the use of alcoholic drink, and Mr. Reed pointed out that the Germans thrived on beer and the French on wine.

"Yes, and I think that was one of the causes of the war," said Mr. Ford.

"How?" asked the lawyer.

"It made them suspicious of each other."

EFFORTS ARE MADE TO MEET EVERY SITUATION CREATED BY THE WAR

No Trouble Spared by Civil Re-establishment to Take Care of Dependents of Men Who Have Died.

"Yes, I would go to the front," said many a young fellow in the early days of the war, "but if anything should happen to me who would look after my old mother or my wife and family?"

Today that question is being answered in Canada in hundreds of instances by the activities of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment

For the men who are returning from the least to the greatest, there is provision to meet all situations created by the war. No effort is spared, to help put a man upon the high road to civil content again, nor are the efforts less zealous on behalf of the dependents of those men who are left sleeping overseas.

Follow up officers of the Department are sent to all parts of Canada, whose duty it is to render whatever assistance they can to any returned man or to any dependents of soldiers who may be in need of advice or a helping hand. Reports of all undertakings of this character are substituted every week to the Deputy Minister

Two instances taken at random from such reports will serve to illustrate the value of services so rendered

Private F. of the 102nd battalion a patient of Strathcona Hospital, died as the result of wounds on the 31st day of December, 1918. He had been married in England but a short time previously and his wife had no idea as to his standing with regard to private property. In his will, made in hospital, he left everything he possessed to his wife, but no enumeration was made nor was any mention made of the location of his property. The only fact known was that the man had resided at Pakan, Alta. The Inspection Officer for this district made a trip to the Estates Branch of the Alberta Returned Soldiers' Commission and found that the deceased had half an interest in a grist mill at Pakan and half an interest in eighty acres of farm land. The Estates Branch Office at his request obtained a valuation of the whole affair which amounted to $8,000 but the mill had been idle for five years and worth half that amount if sold. Pte. F.'s partner, however, who was discovered on the spot, was anxious to carry on so the D.S. C. R. official took the initiative in inviting him to buy out the widow, as otherwise the entire property would have to be sold at a loss.

The partner thereupon made a straight offer of $4,000 to be paid in the sum of $500 yearly with interest this to be secured by first mortage on the mill and farm, and the offer was submitted to the widow for her consent. The official of the Department also had all documents complete by the executive for probate of the will

The second case of interest was Pte. F. J. H., 1st C.M.R., who enlisted in Decmber, 1914. During the Edmonton flood of 1915, this man's house was washed away and his home completely destroyed. Under these circumstances he naturally considered he should have to pay taxes. The D. S. C. R. official took the matter up with the Mayor of Edmonton who was of the opinion that the commissioners had no power to remit soldiers' home from taxation, but upon producing a copy of the act, passed by the Provincial Legislature and assented to April 26th, 191?, with an amendment in 1919, he convinced the mayor instantly that the city had full power in this respect and the man's taxes are being remitted from the time he enlisted up to the present year

These are only two instances of many in which officials of the Department are able to relive burdens from the backs of both dependents and returned men which otherwise might cripple their usefulness and retard their progress in returning to full civilian happiness.

MEAT CAUSE OE KIDNFY TROUBLE

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers you, Drink lots of Water

When your kidneys and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract Keep yaur kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active

Drink lots of water you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache

THE OBSERVANCE OF VICTORY AND PEACE DAY AT THE POSTOFFICE.

There will be no delivery by letter carrier. The outgoing mails will be closed for dispatch at 12 o'clock noon. Two collections only will be made from the street letter boxes, one beginning at 8:30 a.m. and the second at 8:30 p.m. There will be no afternoon collection.

Home to Care for Orphan Children

MEMORIAL TO THOF WHO MADE THE SUPREME SACRIFICE

Local Orangemen are collecting funds to aid a proposed new Memorial Building for the Loyal True Blue and Orange Home and this project should commend itself to citizens generally. The objective is $300,000 and that objective should be reached

Twenty five years ago, the Loyal True Blues established a Home at Picton, Ontario, to take care of as many children as their resources permitted. A farm of one hundred acres was purchased and the large house upon it was remodelled and fitted up to accommodate about seventy children

The Work has grown beyond the resources of the True Blues and Orangemen, and now the Board of Management is appealing to the Protestant public to raise the funds for the erection of a new home, to be known as a Memorial to those who gave their lives for King and Country in the late war. The new building will provide accommodation for from three to four hundred children. It is the first time the True Blues and Orangemen of Ontario have solicited outside assistance. There are now, as a result of the Great War and the terrible epidemic that has recently swept over the Dominion, hundreds of Protestant children, who have been bereft of father or mother. Numerous applications for admittance of such little ones have been received, and more will certainly follow, and to be in a position to meet this pressing need, a new building is needed.

Since the Home was first opened over four hundred and fifty have found shelter within its walls. Many a mother's last moments have been brightened with the knowledge that the True Blue and Orange Orphanage would watch over, educate, and care for their loved ones. The Institution is not exclusive, being open to all, and over sixty-five per cent of the children that have been taken care of, had parents, who were not members of either Society. A child in need of asistance is the first consideration and in their name hearty support and generosity in the Christ-like object is bespoken.

PICNIC ON OVAL FOR RETURNED MEN, THEIR WIVES AND FAMILIES

Under Auspices Local S.A. Corps—Decidedly Non-denominational—All Welcome—Splendid List of Sports—$150 in Prizes—Good Time Assured.

The picnic for returned soldiers, their wives and families, which is to be held at Nicholl's Oval on Saturday, the 19th inst., promises to be one of the biggest events of the season.

This outing will be held under the auspices of the local Salvation Army Corps, and is open to all returned men and their relations.

It is felt that some recognition should be shown to those who have helped in so great a measure to bring about the great day of peace which we shall be celebrating on Saturday, and so an invitation is extended to all men who enlisted to come and join in the big program of sports and general good time. If the soldier cannot come then the wife and family will be made entirely welcome. The gathering will be undenominational.

A splendid list of sports and speeches has been prepared, and prizes to the extent of about $150 will be given away. Below appears a program of the sports, etc.

Meals will be provided free to all returned men and their families only, also some ice cream. All other visitors are requested to bring baskets.

All Salvationists are requested to make an efforts to be present and help to entertain the visitors. Colonel Bettridge, of Montreal, will be present, and will act as chairman of the gathering.

If you want a real good time, come and join us at the Oval at 1.30 p.m., on Saturday, July 19th. If the day is wet, the social will be held at the Temple on Simcoe street.

All S. A. bandsmen please be sure and bring your instruments.

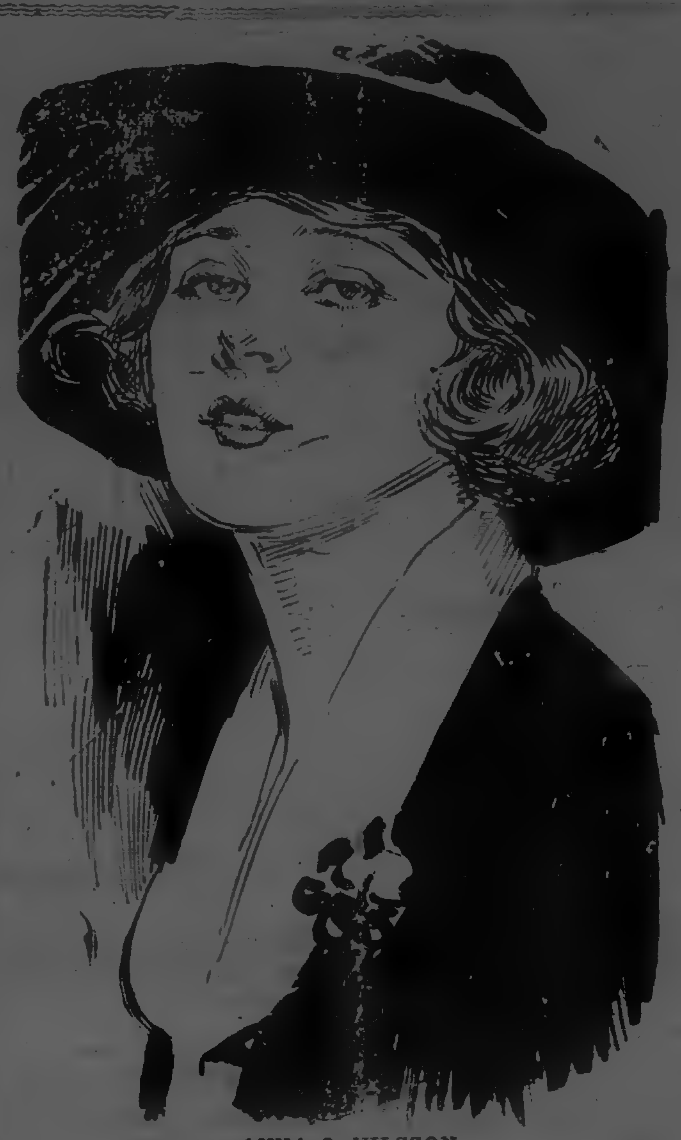
THEATRICAL



ANNA Q. NILSSON.
AT THE GRAND TODAY AND SATURDAY

AT THE GRAND

Two of the best moving pictures ever seen in this city are the attraction at the Grand for the rest of this week, the opening presentation having been made last night. The stars are those well known and popular film artists, Bertha Clayton and and Anna Q. Nillson.

In "The Soul Without a Window" Miss Clayton is said by competent critics to have achieved her highest artistic tiumph. The plot of the play intensely interesting, the characters fill their various rolles to perfection and the lesson taught is an excellent demonstration that eventually all things work out for the good of humanity.

"The Way of the Strong," the dramatization of a popular novel, in which Miss Nillson stars, is a story the opening chapter of which is worked out in a cabin in the Yukon and the sequel of which is staged in the upper circles of New York. One of the most remakable pictures of all is that of a blizzard in the far north, a picture so realistic as to almost cool the atmosphere of the theatre.

There is by way of variety a comedy skit that deals with the diversions of a young man whose wife is out of town. Another feature of the bill is a picture story of the shipbuilding industry in British Columbia, in every stage from the cutting down of the trees in the forest right up to the time that the finished product takes to the water and becomes a part of the commercial life of the country.

HISTORY OF PETER JACKSON

The anniversary of Jackson's birth, July 16th, cheated from Tommy Sullivan the following tribute to the ex-champion boxer:

"This is the story of a man whose skin was black, but whose soul was white. He was Peter Jackson, gentleman and pugilist. It is doubtful if Peter Jackson had an enemy in all this wide world when he passed in.

"Though born in the West Indies on July 16, 1861, Jackson was later closely identified with Australia. Of gigantic physique, standing 6 feet 1 inch in height, and a very powerful frame, he naturally found an outlet in feats of strength, and while a youngster dusted up the youth of his district in a manner that won the admiration of all. Due to the fact that the color line was not so strongly drawn in Australia as in America, Jackson in the former country made himself so popular and well liked that he numbered his friends by thousands.

"However, he was finally prevailed upon the come to America, and made a highly successful debut against Con iordRan in San Francisco. Subsequently he was given his first money match, with George Godfrey, a rattling god heavyweight in his own color. His display of skill on this occasion was voted the most scientifc ever seen in the California Athletic club, and four months later $5000 was hung up for a battle between the West Indian and Joe McAuliffe. Jackson added to his deputation by beating his man in twenty-four rounds, and in the following April he knocked out Patsy Cardiff in the tenth round. Then he went to England and later back to Australia.

"The early part of 1891 found Peter once more back in Frisco, where he opened and ran a profitable saloon. About this time another aspirant for fistic honors appeared on the scene in the person of James J. Corbett, a bank clerk.

"A match was soon fixed up for a $10,000 purse for a fight to a finish which was decided on May 21, 1891. It will be long remembered as the most protracted battle ever fought between big men. At the end of sixty-one rounds it was declared "no contest." Corbett broke an arm in that encounter and Jackson broke a hand.

"Jackson's reputation did not suffer one whit in that engagement, and the crowds that flocked to his buffet made him a rich man. But Ceter was a generous fellow and it is not probable that he held on to a dollar more than a few minutes at a time. He was as charitable as John L. Sullivan, which is saying a mouthful.

"Just at this period the California club offered a purse of $10,000 for a contest between Slavin and Jackson, and the National Sporting club of London stepped in with a similar offer. Then the American organization increased its offer by $2000. Slavin, however, preferred to box in England, and as Jackson did not want to miss such a fine chance to visit Europe again, he accepted the London offer and was soon across the water.

"They met on Monday night, May 30, 1892, in the greatest fight club in the world. Nearly every man in that huge assembly was in full dress. As the giants at last stood face to face in the ring, Lord Lonsdale, the president of the club, addressed a few words of good advice to the men and assured them that nothing but the fairest of play would be accorded them.

"As for the battle, never was such a magnificent contets seen in any roped arena in the world. Every round was stubbornly fought, but hit by hit Jackson gained the upper hand, and at last his wonderful science prevailed, and half-way through the tenth round Slavin was counted out.

This was undoubtedly the greatest battle of Jackson's career. He was of course afterwards the hero of the hour and feted wherever he went. He remained in England for some time and then came back to the land of the stars and stripes, where he starred with Parson Davies nd Joe Choynski in Uncle Tom's Cabin. On March 22, 1898, six years after he fought with Slavin, Jeffries knocked him out in three rounds. Subsequently he was also beaten by Jim Jeffords at San Francisco, August 23, 1899. This was his last appearance in the ring, for consumption had claimed him as its victim. After trying the invigorating air of California for a while, he again crossed the Pacific ocean, to die in Australia.

"A fellow often draws from memorys' sweet, sad hoard enough to make him sigh. Sad thoughts come to me when I think of good old Peter Jackson. He was a man among men."

CON TES TENDED IN THE THIRD ROUND

BOARD OF BOXING CONTOL SETTLES DISPUTE OVER WILLARD-DEMPSEY FIGHT

The American board of boxing control in an official statement issued last night announced that only forty-seven seconds of the third rest period had elapsed in the Dempsey-Willard bout when Willard's seconds tossed a towel into the ring as a token of defeat. The board also decided that the bout at Toledo on July 4 ended in the third round. These decisions were made as a result of numerous inquiries received from all parts of the country.

The statement, which was signed by Adam Empie, secretary to the board, is as follows:

"A report having widely circulated that Mr. Warren Barbour, timekeeper appointed by this board for the Willard-Dempsey contest, had written to Mr. Pecord, the referee, stating that the interval of one minute between the third and fourth rounds had expired before Willard's seconds threw a towel into the ring, I beg to state that Mr. Barbour has written no such letter and further that the statement reported to be contained in the alleged letter is contrary to the fact as only forty-seven seconds had expired in the interval referred to, when the signal of defeat was given by Willard's seconds.

"The board is in no way concerned with wagers that have been made on the contest, but as a number of inquiries have been received it has considered the question of when the contest terminated, in all its bearings, and the board has decided that it should be regarded as having ended in the third round."

BRESNAHAN SUCEEDS ZEIDER

Toledo, O., July 18.—Rollie Zeider, formerly with the Cubs, today announced his resignation as manager of the Toledo club of the American association. Roger Bresnahan will take charge of the Mud Hens temporarily. Failure of Zeider to brace up the team after a poor start, together with injuries which have prevented him from making the expected showing in the Toledo infield, are responsible for the resignation.

ANOTHER MATCH WITH DEMPSEY

Pittsburg, July 18. Jack Dempsey, new heavyweight champion, has consented to a bout with Frank Moran, according to local fight promoters who want the match. It is said that this match would create more enthusiasm than that with Willard.

Rufus Earl was re-appointed chief of police for Blenheim after being dismissed for neglect of duty.

Never Trimmed by Man of Own Weight

WRESTLER JOE SMITH DENIES HANSEN' CLAIM OF VICTORY FOUR YEAR AGO

Chicago, July 18. Joe Smith, world's champion featherweight wrestler, instructor at three institutions on the south side, is on the war path. He is out hunting the fellow who spread the information that Joe was downed, pinned or otherwise trimmed by a human being of his own weight.

Joe, who easily captured the national amateur championship and then turned pro because he couldn't find opponents, has never been pinned by a person of his weight. Joe admits this himself and the records prove this contention. Sergt. Oscar Hansen, just out of the army, was quoted yesterday as saying he had defeated Smith. This is all wrong, very wrong and impossible, says Joe.

"I defeated Hansen about four years ago and I defeated him decisively," said Smith in The Daily News office today. "He never saw the day he could pin me. Furthermore, I don't imagine he wants to meet me now. I don't know how heavy this fellow is now, but I had to go out of my class to get matches and I gave Johnny Billeter, the lightweight champion, about all he wanted. Like Johnny Kilbane in boxing I couldn't find opponents. I had cleaned up all the fellows like Hansen, and he isn't the best featherweight I met either."

AUSTRALIAN TENNIS PLAYERS IN CANADA

RETURNING HOME BY AMERICA —INVITED TO VISIT TORONTO

The Australian lawn tennis players now in England are to return home by way of America. They have accepted an invitation by the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club to make a visit to Toronto.

The celebrated Norman E. Brookes, one of the greatest players who ever stepped on a court, is captain of the team, and with him will be Gerald L. Patterson, who only a few days ago wrested the championship of England from Mr. Brookes at Wimbledon in three straight sets.

The two other members of the team are Messrs. Lycett and Thomas, who as double players have no peers.

The date of their visit to Toronto has not been fixed, but owning to their engagements in the United States it is doubtful if they can reach here before the end of August or early in September.

Premier Borden Is On His Vacation

SIR GEORGE FOSTER IS NOW THE ACTING PRIME MINISTER

Ottawa, July 18.—Sir Robert Borden has left Ottawa for a couple of weeks' holidays. Sir Robert will proceed to Montreal where he will take a boat this evening for a cruise down the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Sir George Foster, senior member of the Privy Council, will be Acting-prime Minister in his absence.

It is understood that the Prime Minister made energetic efforts to arrange the appointments to the board of commerce before his departure but that he was obliged to await consideration on the part of the proposed chairman. While no official statement has been made there is a surmise, apparently well grounded, that Judge Hugh A. Robson, of Winnipeg, a former public utilities commissioner for the Province of Manitoba, has been asked to undertake the duties of chairman.

POLACK BROTHERS MAMMOTH MIDWAY

TO FURNISH ALL ATTRACTIONS AT VICTORY JUBILEE AT EXHITION GROUNDS ENTIRE WEEK, JULY 21st.

As one enters the big midway, one's attention is attracted to the feature attraction, the La Rose Electric Fountain, a remarkable fire, water and electric production, that has featured the New York Hippodrome. It is indeed a wonderful sight, and one that will long be remembered by the people of Peterboro. It is the only one of its kind ever presented by a carnival company and is a wonderful water, electric and pyrotechnical display, a massively constructed structure of cement and iron, and is operated by electricity and hydraulic power. It requires an extreme force of water to bring out the mystifying effects. The performers appear in the very midst of a rolling, tumbling tumultous water cascade upon a hydraulic operated stage, producing the most beautiful and realistic electrical effect imagineable. The performance is finished with a display of fireworks which is exploded from within the fountain while the water is following in fail force.

The days of the famous Buffalo Bill Shows are recalled by the appearance of Col, Lenders (Buffalo Jack) and Princess Wenona, world's champion lady crack shot. Cowboys reproduce the sports of early frontier days by displaying fancy rope spinning, trick riding, revolver and rifle shooting.

Elizabeth, who is billed as the living doll lady is indeed an attraction which seems to please the majority. She speaks over seven different languages and entertains upon various musical instruments. Then too, the Underground Chinatown proved to be a novel entertainment for many.

Fat people, tall and small, appear in the congress of Fat People, a pleasing show in which Benny Reeves, a handcuff artist, entertains by releasing himself, from straight-jackets, handcuffs, rope, etc.

Some real hair-raising events are staged in the big drome which is termed the sylodrome and in which riders performing dare-devil stunts are featured. "Over the Falls" one of the least, riding divices, is surely amusing, and it would be asking too much should we disclose the nature of the attractions.

The big circus side show, with Gentleman Joe Kramer, the original rubber skin man, and P. T. Barnum's big feature sword swallowers, fire eaters, snake charmers, are some of the fourteen big attractions on exhibition beneath the canvas.

The shows are clean, entertaining and amusing, and a night of fun, jollification and merriment confront all who enter the midway.

GERELL—EASTWOOD

St. Luke's Church was the scene of a very pretty, but quiet, wedding on Wednesday, July 16th, at 2.30 p.m., when Nursing Sister Eva Pearl Campbell Eastwood became the bride of Lieutenant Clarence John Gerell. Miss Ivy Anderson of Toronto, was bridesmaid, while Mr. Dal Score, Toronto, assisted the groom.

The bride, who looked very pretty in her uniform, carried a large bouquet of sweetheart roses. The groom wore the uniform of the Royal Air force.

Rev. W. H. White, rector of St. Luke's Church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who went over with the C.M.C. in 1918, did splendid service "over there", returning to Peterborough two weeks ago. Lieut. Gerell, who went over with the first division of artillery, was transferred to the Royal Air Force later, returning home some months ago.

The young couple left amid the hearty good wishes of all on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and other points, after which they will reside at Newport News, Virginia.

Miss Helen Lane and her friend Miss Mollie Scanton, nurses in training at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, are spending their vacation with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Lane, 243 Hunter street.

RAILWAY'S COMMITTEE TO MEET AT ALD. EDGAR'S HOME

The City Council's Railways Committee will meet tonight at 8 o'clock to discuss a proposition from the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario whereby the city may acquire the street railway and operate it as a municipally owned public utility.

The meeting will convene in Ald. Edgar's home on Sherbrooke street and a little bird whispers that the chairman o fthe Railways Committee and his good lady are preparing for their home's invaders, berries and cream, and so forth.

Stores Open This Evening Close Tomorrow

Peterborugh will observe National Peace Day, tomorrow, as a public holiday, after all.

At 3.45 this afternoon, after an eleventh hour meeting, the Retail Merchants' Association decided to close tomorrow, in keeping with the observance of business houses elsewhere in the Province.

The stores will be open tonight till ten o'clock, as on all evenings before public holidays.

The C. G. E., Bonned-Worth, Quaker Oats and De Laval factories had decided earlier in the day to comply with His Majesty's Proclamation.

The Review and the Examiner will not publish tomorow, of course.

Mayor Duncan has been called out of the City, or, undoubtedly he would have endorsed the action of the Retail Merchants' Association and factories.

So, the public in a general way take it that they are justified in celebrating tomorrow as a public holiday in company with every other Canadian town.

Peterborough, Ont., July 18th, 1919.

In view of the Proclamation proclaiming Saturday, July 19, as a Public Holiday to celebrate the signing of peace, I have, after consultation with the secretary, reached the conclusion that it is desirbale that the members of the Legal Profession should, above all others, give heed to the proclamation.

I therefore ask the members of the Profession in Peterborough to close their offices on Saturday.

SIR ADAM BECK WOULD UNLOAD HIS LAME DUCKS ON PETERBORO

Anxious to Sell Street Railway and Gas Plant to City Because They do Not Pay—R. R. Hall Suggests Buying Something Worth While.

Speaking of the proposed purchase of the street railway and the gas plant by the city, Mr. R. R. Hall said today:

"The Railway Committee of the Council went to Toronto to interview Sir Adam Beck, with the view of having much needed and overdue extensions made to the street railway system. Sir Adam made a counter proposition that the city buy the railway and make its own extensions.

"Sir Adam knows full well that the street railway and the gas plant are the "lame ducks" of the Hydro Commission's property in this portion of the Province, that have not paid and will not likely pay for years to come, and that it would be good business on his part 'to load' these unprofitable enterprises on the city of Peterborough.

"Sir Adam knows that his Hydro Commission derives a gross revenue out of the sale of power in Peterborough of upwards of $60,000.00 per year. He does not suggest that the city take over any of the dams under his control and take the benefit of this profitable investment, but he wants the city to take over the street railway and gas plant, which are the losing end of his business.

"If Sir Adam succeeds in this he will make a better showing for the Hydro in this district and add more glory to his name and both at the expense of the city.

"If the city really wants to embark in a profitable enterprise, let our Council apply to the Minister of Railways and Canals for a lease of dams 4 and 5 on the Otonabee.

"These dams will develope as much power as the Quaker Oats dam. The estimated cost of the development and equipment of this power given to me before the war was $210,000.00. Now it would cost more, and still be a very profitable investment, because the city has control of its own market, consuming annually $60,000.00 worth of power "It is true that Sir Adam acquired the lease of dam No. 5 but he can be forced to give up his rights. In fact he has already abandoned his rights to this dam, because he has already removed its electrical equipment and has ceased to make use of this power.

"I know the terms of his lease of this power at dam No. 5. If he ceases to operate it for one year and six months all the rights of the tenant are forfeited and all the rights of the Hydro in this valuable power have long since been forfeited.

"All our Council has to do is to apply for a lease of dams numbers 4 and 5. The Government offered it to private investors at $2300.00 per annum and, no doubt, our City Council could do better. Dr. Reid, the Minister of Railways and Canals, some time ago at the Empress Hotel intimated as much, because, he said, if Sir Adam did not develope these fine waterways on the Trent River basin, the Dominion Government would have to take steps to do so.

"This investment on the part of our city would be one of the safest and best in the Province and would pay for itself in a few years.

"Sir Adam is neglecting this city. It is well located to secure cheap power, but today, it is not as well off as Cobourg and Port Hope. If this city owned and developed its own power at dams number 4 and 5, it could then at a later date purchase the Auburn power plant when the city got ready to buy it on its own terms.

"In the meantime, let Sir Adam keep his street railway and his gas plant. He wants to keep the fat and let us simps take the lean."

Pilot of Dirigible That Ran Wild in Chicago, is Arrested

Balloon Crashed Through Skylight of Bank Killing Eleven Persons and Injuring Twenty-Six Others—Official Investigation Started.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, July 22.—An official enquiry was started today by the States Attorney to fix the responsibility for the explosion and collapse of a dirigible which crashed through the roof of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank yesterday afternoon, killing eleven persons and injurying twenty-six others.

Counsel for the Chicago corporation as a result of the accident have today commenced to frame ordinances to govern and control air flying over the city.

Seventeen employees of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio, owners of the airship, have been detained pending a decision as to whether charges of criminal carelessness should be filed against them. Among those detained were Jack Boetner, pilot of the dirigible, who escaped by jumping with a parachute, and W. C. Young, in charge of aeronautic department of the Goodyear Co. Of the eleven dead nine were employees of the bank, two being passengers in the airship. Five persons were in the airship at the time of the accident and three escaped. When the balloon crashed through the skylight of the bank at 5 o'clock more than two hundred employees, mostly girls, were at work.

Wheat Prospects On the Prairies

GOOD YIELD IN MANITOBA BUT POOR OUTLOOK IN OTHER SECTIONS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, July 22.—Good but not bumper crops in Manitoba, thirty to forty per cent. of an average in Saskatchewan and about twenty-five per cent. in Alberta. This is the summing up this morning by The Free Press, regarding the wheat prospects in the Prairie Provinces, as gathered by correspondents at all points. The cattle feed situation in Southern Alberta, while showing some improvement from recent rains is still very serious, according to report. Oats, grain and roots crops in Manitoba will give fair yield and harvesting will be fairly general in the Provnice between August 1st and 5th.

Windsor Cars are Running as Usual

STRIKE DECLARED YESTERDAY SETTLED BY REINSTATEMENT OF MOT. THORN.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Windsor, July 22.—Street cars are again running. Motorman Thorn, whose suspension for violating the company's rules caused the strike yesterday, has been reinstated and the employes have signed a statement to abide by the spirit of the agreement and not to be so hasty in future in striking for real or fancied grievances until their case has been taken up by the authorities.

Fire of incendiary origin destroyed thousands of dollars' worth of huckleberries on Government marsh land near Kalamazoo, Mich.

PETERBORO MODEL OF CLEANLINESS

ALSO A LEADER IN PROGRESS, IS OPINION OF A PETERBORO OLD BOY.

Mr. Ernest Hodgson of Springfield Mass., who has been visiting his mother, Mrs. L. Van Every, this city, since July 12th, leaves for home tonight on the C. P. R. midnight via Montreal.

Mr. Hodgson is an old Peterborough boy who left here seventeen years ago, and is now established at Springfield with a remunerative machine business. He is also a musician of some repute, and when living here conducted a then well-known dance orchestra under his own name. He belonged to the 57th regiment (and in those good old days when it was conducted by Finch Miller, Archie Freeman and finally by its present bandmaster, Rupert Gliddon. He also led a Sunday School orchestra for Charlotte street methodist church.

Mr. Hodgson showers unstinted proise on Peterborough as the cleanest of clean cities, and is also astounded at its industrial progress in the past 17 years. He commends the work of our municipal governments in the way of public improvements and in securing new industries, and congratulates Peterborough on its marked trade and business development generally. Peterborough, he says, leads progressively and for beauty, any city of its size he has visited in the course of extensive travels in Canada and the United States.

Mr. Hodgson reports a very happy visit to his old home town, where he has been warmly welcomed by friends of long ago. He was greatly surprised at the readiness with which he has been recognized by his old-time acquaintances.

Thank you, Mr. Hodgson. Peterborough needs a few kind words now and again.

Mr. Allan Studholme Suffers a Stroke

Hamilton, July 21.—Allan Studholme, Labor member in the Legislature for East Hamilton, suffered from a slight stroke Sunday evening, and for a time his condition was considered serious. Dr. Mullin, his physician, said today that Mr. Studholme's condition was greatly improved, and that he was in no immediate danger.

Prince Will Spend Three Months Here

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS EXPECTED TO REACH CANADA AUG. 15TH.

Ottawa, July 22. So far very few of the details of the itinerary in Canada of his Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, have been definitely fixed. It is known that he will arrive in the Dominion on August 15th, that he will be in Quebec city about August 21st, will open the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, on August 25th, and will open the new Parliament Buildings at Ottawa on September 1st. It is now cetrain that the Prince will not visit Montreal until toward the end of October.

From Ottawa he will go to the western provinces, and will see Montreal on his return journey to the sea coast to embark for England. It has been thought that the early autumn would be the best time during his stay in Canada for him to go to Montreal.

The Prince will be in Canada nearly three months.

MAY VETO DRY BILL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, July 22.—The prohibition enforcement bill, described by members opposing it as drastic enough to invite the presidential veto, was finally passed today by the House.

NEW HOSPITAL QUARTERS

Queen's Military Hospital is leaving Grant Hall at Kingston which will be taken over by the university for educational purposes in a few weeks' time. As soon as the new Sydenham Hospital is finished the military will be moved there.

HENRY FORD STILL UNDER HEAVY FIRE

COUNSEL PRESSES HIM FOR HIS IDEA AS TO ANARCHY.

Mount Clemens, Mich, July 21.—Henry Ford resumed the stand at noon in his suit against The Chicago Tribune, to meet a heavy assault of questions from Elliot G. Stevenson, opposing counsel, who sought to lead the manufacturer into admissions that the very things he complained were damaging to his reputation were, in fact, Anarchistic and therefore justified publication of the editorial for which he desires $1,000,000. The earlier part of the morning was taken up with legal arguments, during which the court warned the attorneys that the jurors are fretting under the length of the case and want to get back to their farms.

Mr. Stevenson conducted a verbal duel with the witness, with Alfred Lucking and Alfred J. Murphy, the plaintiff's counsel, interjecting frequent objections. Mr. Ford did not answer questions as freely as he did last week. Questioned whether he thought conditions in Mexico and in Texas in 1916 constituted Anarchy he declined to answer directly and insisted that he did not understand some of the questions.

Mr. Ford's Interview

At this morning's session an attorney for Mr. Ford sat in the witness chair and read a series of articles by Charles N. Wheeler in The Chicago Tribune in May, 1916. The Tribune had sent Mr. Wheeler to interview Mr. Ford. The first article referred to Mr. Ford as a "mushroom Croesus" who was willing to talk about anything ande everything. Mr. Ford sat with his head in his hands during the reading. The manufacturer laughed at an assertion that "he knew the Ten Comamndments and dressed them in gingham overalls instead of in silks."

"Mr. Ford talked of everything, from dishwashing to war."

Mr. Wheeler wrote: "He did not discuss anything. He expressed his views on any subject in about seventy five seconds." In the second instalment of The Tribune interview Mr. Ford was quoted as saying he didn't believe in churches, banks or newspapers as they are now operated. He said "special privileges" of the rich were the cause of industrial unrest. He said he was the only man in the United States who dared say what he thought on any topic, the reason being that he was dependent on no banks or "interests."

The conrt admitted a deposition of John Reed, magazine writer, taken since the opening of the trial. As a correspondent of The Metropolitan Magazine he talked to Mr. Ford in 1916. "I don't believe in boundaries. I think nations are silly" was one of the essertions Mr. Reed said Mr. Ford had made.

Cost of Living is Issue in France

DEPUTIES ARE OPPOSED TO GOVERNMENT'S POLICY ON THE QUESTION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 22.—Readiness to hear the Government's declaration of its policy on which it had been announced a vote of confidenee would be asked, Chamber of Deputies met this morning. Premier Clamenceau, it developed, was not ready to make his statement at the morning session and the Chamber adjourned until the afternoon to await the Premier's pleasure. There was much in the expected developments of the day, to which great importance was attached, as it was anticipated that a motion for an interpellation of the Government on its general policy which Francos Fournier, Independent Socialist, had given, might precipitate an animate debate. The agitation against the Government has been most marked on the question of the high cost of living, feeling of members on this issue having resulted last week in a vote adverse to the Government. The issue was met, temporarily at least, by the withdrawal of Victor Boret, as Food Minister, M. Noulen, former Ambassador to Russia, taking his place.

CANADA MUST KEEP MOTHER COUNTRY

GREAT BRITAIN THE BURDEN-BEARER FOR EVERYONE IN THE WAR.

Lindsay, July 22.—At the Hotel Benson here this evening Sir Joseph Flavelle delivered an address before the members of the Board of Trade on the financial situation in Europe, and especially in Great Britain.

Referring to conditions in the British Isles, he said the evidences of prosperity which greet a visitor to Great Britain were only artificial. England had been the burden bearer in the war for everyone; she would have a debt at the close of the war of fifty billion dollars, and an annual charge for interest of over two billions. In that tight little isle all must join to make the best out of the worst situation that ever confronted the nation.

Canada, Sir Joseph said, could not get rid of the responsibility to Europe. It needed — help, and we had no right to say, "Let Uncle Sam do it all." There are millions starving in Europe, their transportation system had been broken down, their currency had depreciated, and their markets had disappeared, and yet 400,000,000 people had to be fed daily. "We will not have them over here," Sir Joseph said.

St. Car and Motor Delivery Collide

BUGGY ALSO IN THE MIX-UP—ALL THREE VEHICLES DAMAGED.

A street car and Jopling's motor delivery rig came into collision at 9.30 this morning opposite Cressman's store.

The delivery rig's front fender and axle were badly bent, the front spring broken and the water connection with engine damaged, but the running parts escaped serious injury. A buggy, against which the delivery rig was forced by impact with the street car sustained damage to one of its wheels and was taken to Fitzgerald's shop for repairs. The street car's fender was put out of business for the time being.

The collision was purely accidental and occurred in this way:

A truck was running south down George street, near the centre of the street, and Jopling's rig tried to pass it. As the driver turned toward the right hand side of the street car, No. 33, coming north, struck him on the front fender giving the truck a hard blow and knocking it against a buggy standing at the side of the street.

Fortunately no one was hurt.

Auto and truck drivers should take warning by this mix-up and keep well to the right, especially on a busy thoroughfare, where street cars are operating.

YORKSHIRE MINERS STILL ON STRIKE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 22.—Sir Eric Geddes Minister without portfolio, named as Government commissioner to try to settle the strike of more than two hundred thousand miners in the Yorkshire district, conferred with the mine inspectors there today, but at last reports not one of the mines in either West or South Yorkshire coal fields was operating.

PRESIDENT FAILS TO CATCH SENATE

TRIED TO PUT ONE OVER UPPER HOUSE ON TREATY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, July 22.—In response to President Wilson's request that it approve the provisional appointment of an American representative on the reparations commission to be created under the peace treaty, the Senate foreign relations committee today adopted a declaration that until the treaty is ratified no power exists to carry out its provisions.

TREATY RATIFIED BY BRITISH COMMONS WITHOUT AMENDMENT

Motion by John Devlin to Reject it as Protest Against Treatment of Ireland—Anglo-French Alliance Also Approved of—Lloyd George Defends Measure.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, July 22. At what was virtually an all night session, the House of Commons completed its consideration of both the German peace treaty and the Anglo-French convention. The bill carrying the approval of the German treaty was considered in committee of the whole, exciting a lengthy debate in which Premier Lloyd George took an active part. The bill was then placed before the House and passed its third reading, after a motion by John Devlin to reject it as a protest against the Premier's attitude towards Ireland had been defeated by 163 to 4.

Then at 3 a.m. the Anglo-French pact was taken up and a bill approving it was unanimously passed after a short but sharp debate, in which the argument that the treaty was not consistent with the League of Nations, failed to find any substantial echo.

The German treaty passed through all its stages without amendments. In concluding his speech on the treaty, Premier Lloyd George, while making no claim of perfection for it, expressed confidence that any defects would be remedied by the League of Nations. Despite its imperfections, the Premier declared the treaty would stand "as a lighthouse in the deep and a warning to nations and rulers of nations against the perils which the German Empire shattered itself against."

FIVE KILLED, HUNDREDS HURT IN RACE RIOTS AT WASHINGTON

Military Law May be Proclaimed to Suppress Negro Mob in Capital—Police Officer Among the Slain—Scores of Rioters Under Arrest.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, July 22.—The proclamation of martial law may be necessary to end the race rioting here which resulted last night in the killing of five persons and the injury of at least fifty others. Several days of disorders, following in the wake of attacks of white homes, robberies and assaults by negroes culminated in a series of race battles during the night hours with which the police were unable to cope, despite the aid of the military provost guards. Several of the injured were reported fatally hurt this morning and at least two hundred rioters were under arrest. The dead included Detective Sergt. Harry Wilson, shot through the heart by a negro girl when he entered the house from which she was firing indiscriminately into the street.

To Separate Races.

A bill for the separation of the races on street cars in the district of Columbia, was introduced today by Senator Harris of Mississippi, who said he was prompted to offer the measure because of race riots.

When some 175 cases of men arrested during the rioting were tried today in the police courts, maximum sentences of a year's imprisonment and fines of five hundred dollars were imposed on all found carrying concealed weapons while these charged only with disorderly conduct escaped with $35 fines. In most cases jury trials were demanded.

Why Not Prepare For An Election

In all parts of Ontario the members of the various political parties are preparing for the general election for the Legislature that everybody believes is pending. The papers every day contain reports of conventions at which candidates are selected, whether those candidates represent the Conservatives, the Liberals, the Farmers or the Independent Labor Party. There is no reason to believe otherwise than that there will be a general election this Fall. It has been given out that the lists of voters soon to be prepared by the enumerators will be used not only at the referendum but at the general election as well. It is generally believed in Toronto that an election is near. The newspapers make the statement, some of them with a show of authority, and if the members of the Government are non-committal when asked directly, they at least make no official denial. Whether or not the election is to be held on the same day as the fate of the Ontario Temperance Act is decided is not yet settled.

They are preparing everywhere for the approaching fray, that is everywhere, apparently, but in West Peterborough. Some of the electors are beginning to grow uneasy over the apparent local apathy and are beginning to urge the executive committee to call a convention for the purpose of selecting a candidate. The riding is to be redeemed, and some time must be allowed for preparation.

Election Thursday in Prince Edward

Charlottetown, P. E. I. July 22. The election campaign is nearing a close. Polling takes place on the 24th inst. The meetings have all been well attended and much interest is being taken in the contest. There are thirty straight Conservatives, twenty-eight Liberals and two Independents running, the latter having a leaning towards the opposition.

A Wilkesbarre, Pa., woman, who threw her 7-months-old baby into the river and watched it drown was found to be insane.

Open Prison Door For All Objectors

Kingston, July 22.—Officials at the penitentiary are up in arms because they were not given a holiday on peace day. The regulations of the department of justice forbids the warden to close for holidays which fall on Saturday and Monday as this would keep convicts confined for 48 hours. There are 522 prisoners in the penitentiary. All the conscientious objectors have been released.

CIVIC HANDICAPS.

THERE IS SOMETHING the matter with any city that holds a peace celebration and yet no announcement of the event is made in the Toronto press. All the towns and cities that celebrated peace on Saturday, even to the extent of declaring a public holiday, were given credit for their patriotism in the metropolitan newspapers. The single exception was Peterborough. Perseverance in such a camera policy can have only one result. This city will eventually disappear from the map. There are events staged here that are worthy of publicity. Making them known is one way to bring creditable outside notice to the municipality. No community can hope to be considered as a serious factor in the national economy if all the attention directed to it is by the chronicler of an occasional violation of the Ontario Temperance Act.

THE S. A. AND THE VETERANS.

THE LOCAL CORPS of the Salvation Army have made an enviable record in military service ever since the breaking out of the war. No organization in the city raised so high a percentage of recruits among its members. This was proved to a satisfactory demonstration when the draft went into effect and not one member of the army eligible for the service could be found. All those of military age were already in uniform.

No organization has taken such an interest in the returned soldiers, either in helping them back into civil life or in providing them with healthful entertainment. In this work the Salvation Army, as usual, recognizes no distinction. Members and non-members of the corps are treated alike. Nothing counts but the fact that they wore the King's uniform.

It was only to be expected that the Salvationists would put on a special program for Peace Day, and as usual it was a success. The fact that one thousand veterans, their wives and children were the guests of the Salvation Army on that day at a picnic at Nicholls Oval tells the entire story.

CANADA IN THE MOVIES.

THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT recently placed an embargo on moving pictures that featured American life. It was felt that the business in this regard was being overdone. Canada was being given no place on the films. The United States was getting all the honor, all the publicity, as regards the war, industrial development and scenery.

If the proprietors of the moving picture theatres sinned in this regard it was not through lack of patriotism or public spirit. No other pictures were available, and they had to use the American films or close their houses. But now an excellent opportunity to boost their own country is offered these places.

As announced in The Review yesterday, a party is now at work under the auspices of the Government making pictures of the many points of interest that abound in Canada. The Trent Canal is the present field of their labors, and the results of their work will soon be apparent in the moving picture houses. Canada has a history that is worth repeating, worth teaching, a history the most thrilling chapters of which have been written during the past four years. tI has scenic wonders that are unsurpassed anywhere on earth. That these assets have been neglected in the past is simply due to a lack of business enterprise. This is now to be remedied. There is no better possible medium for teaching the history of a nation, for advertising its potentialities or present development than the moving picture. The well-managed theatre should be the great institution for popular education.

There are scenic effects in and around Peterborough which are to be preserved in picture and presented to the public. The chances are that when they appear on the screen there are people who have lived among the originals all their lives who will have some difficulty in identifying the representations. But these people will be sure to appreciate their home surroundings as they never did before and to have a pride in their country simply because its advantages have been brought home to them in a manner that they cannot fail to understand.

THE MAKING OF WILLS.

FINDING HIMSELF threatened, while at work in his office, with sudden death, a New York business man hastily scribbled on a scrap of paper six words that disposed of an estate of $200,000. He called in two associates to witness his signature, then passed from life.

But the will, said to be the shortest on record, has been admitted to probate and will stand the acid test of legal investigation. The wishes of the testator in this matter were clearly and tersely expressed. There was no array of verbiage to invite a dispute as to the intention of the maker of the document. Why, then, in such matters as these, is it not possible for every man to be his own lawyer? Why insist on high-sounding formulas and puzzling technicalities?

PROPOSED UNIONIST PARTY.

THE LETHBRIDGE HERALD, edited by a Liberal-Unionist member of Parliament, and which is representative of the sentiment of the people of Alberta, says that it might be better to wait until the weather is cooler before discussing political problems. Yet, warm as it is, it is easy to conclude that the political parties in Canada are in a state of chaos. The Liberal convention in August may clearly define the issues, so that men can form up in support of principles and leaders that express their thoughts on the problems of the day. If the Liberal convention should hesitate and compromise and elect a reactionary leader of the type chosen by the Ontario provincial Liberals, a third party, a progressive, radical element, may emerge in the political arena.

It may be possible to form a Unionist party in name, but that it will gather much Liberal support is hardly likely. If it is a protectionist party, certain protectionist Liberals could very well remain with it. If it is a compromise party on the tariff issue, it will force the revival of the Conservative party. The old National Party Conservatives may support a Union party, provided it does not abandon adequate protection or compromise on protection.

The Toronto Mail and Empire sounds this warning in these clear terms:

> "A Union Government policy must be as positive as the policy of any political party. If it is not, no Union party will come into flourishing existence upon it. A policy that is a compromise, that is the outcome of giving and taking, that is the irreducible minimum upon which the component parties can agree, will not last long and will not be a bond to unite Conservatives and Liberals. Take the National Policy, for example. Any great toning down of that would be out of the question. If the price of union were the giving up of the National Policy, then Union would have to go."

Just as strong is the view of the Montreal Gazette, another of the old-time Conservative papers:

> "The Unionist party is heir to all the traditions and accomplishments of the Conservative party, in which will be found its best inspiration and its surest guide. Sir Robert Borden should take early opportunity to formulate the policy. Of all the outstanding issues, none is so vital as the fiscal, and upon that the Premier must needs take a definite stand. He is expected to adhere to the National Policy of 1878 in essence and principle, modified though its details may be changed by circumstances. The very verbiage of that policy as enunciated by Sir John Macdonald in the session of 1878 is as appropriate now as then to the only fiscal system conducive to the unity and prosperity of Canada."

There may be a permanent Union party, but it can exist only as a National Policy party. It must have protection, not for revenue, but for real protection, as its outstanding principle. Otherwise it will lose its Conservative wing and quickly collapse.

There must be some party for the low tariff element to support. It won't be the Union party and it ought to be the Liberal party if it is wisely guided at its Ottawa convention. Should that convention be dominated by reactionary, compromising elements, then the low tariff advocates will need to operate by themselves and create a new party. We look to progressive Liberals to swing the Ottawa convention to low tariff and place a strong man at the head of the party. There will then be a clean-cut issue between the parties, high protection vs. low protection. The Union party cannot be the latter; its very existence depends upon the other. Should it compromise it will operate to revive the Conservative party.

FORD AND THE ARTISTIC.

(London Adertiser.)

BECAUSE HE DECLARES that he has no personal use for music, poetry or any of the arts, Henry Ford is being made the target for a lot of cheap wit and highbrow comment. One writer goes so far as to call the flivver king "hopelessly vulgar and commonplace." Because he frankly admits that Bach, Browning and Rodin mean nothing to him he is dubbed "impossible." But how many of those who have joked over his "sad lack" have any real appreciation of music, for instance? Many millions thrill to a jazz tune who would consider Beethoven discordant, if they told the truth. But they call themselves musical. The fact is that Ford's confession is delightfully refreshing in a world of poseurs. True enough, one who heads a hundred-million-dollar organization can afford to be eccentric by telling the truth, but a lot of people who pose as artistic, with no more license to do it than Ford, might, if they are afraid to admit the lack, at least refrain from inflicting their pretensions on others.

As a matter of fact, there is a good deal of the poet about Henry Ford, although apparently he doesn't know it. He loves wild animals and flowers. Grace, color and fragrance provide him with the same simple direct pleasures they give the poet. And is there not something beautiful in the amazing efficiency of his titanic plant?

MRS. CHURCH WORKER'S PRAYER

Oh Lord! I come to Thee in prayer once more
But pardon me if I do not kneel before
Thy gracious presence, for my knees are sore
With so much walking. In my chair instead,
I'll sit at ease and humbly bow my head.
I've labored in Thy vinyard, Thou dost know.
I've sold ten tickets for the minstrel show,
I've called on fifteen strangers in our town,
Their contributions to our church put down.
I've baked a lot of beans for Saturday's spree,
An old-time supper it's going to be.
I've dressed three dolls for our annual fair,
And made a cake which we must raffle there,
Now, with Thy boundless wisdom so sublime,
Thou knowest that these duties, all take time.
I have no time to fight my spirit's foes.
I have no time to mend my husband's clothes.
My children roam the streets from morn till night,
I have no time to teach them what is right,
But Thou, oh, Lord, considering all my cares,
Will count them righteous, and will heed my prayers,
Bless Thou, the bean supper and the minstrel show,
And put it into the hearts of all to go.
Induce the visitors to patronize.
The men who in our program advertise,
Because I've chased these merchants till they hide
When they saw me coming, yes they did.
Increase the contributions to our fair,
And bless the people who essemble there.
Bless Thou, the grab bag and gypsy tent,
The flower table and the cake that's sent.
And when Thou hast bestowed these blessings, then
We pray that Thou will bless our souls. Amen.

THE GRAND OLD BANK OF ENGLAND

(Written From London)

Slowly but steadily the spot light is swinging from militarism to finance. It is focussing on that grand old institution which is now the Gibraltar of European solvency—the Bank of England.

The central man in Europe is no longer Foch, but Sir Brien Cokayne the new governor of the Bank of England.

Upon him, more than upon any other man, rests the monstrous responsibility of maintaining the financial stability of practically all the world outside the United States. He is the Atlas of Finance.

As for chancellors of the exchequer they come and go. They are usually unskilled in the art of finance and they do what they are told. But the Bank of England goes on forever.

Never before has any bank had such a task as now confronts the Old Lady of Threadneedle street. The financial situation is much more dangerous than it was during the war, because there is less unity and team play among the allied nations. Many disintegrating influences are at work.

Everyone realizes now that a dangerous financial policy has been followed—that we financed the war mainly by short-term loans—that we have now a floating debt of $27,000,000,000.

The urgency of the situation is shown by the fact that $8,500,000,000 of this debt matures this year. If this is raised by the new "Victory Loan," all will be well; if not, then the Bank of England will have to shoulder the burden.

We owe the United States $4,000,000,000 more than the States owes us. That is a stagering fact to Threadneedle Street—a problem for which no one is offering any practical solution.

In view of such figures, the statistics of gold look like a petty cash account. The total output of gold for instance in 1917 was only $435,000,000, and 64 per cent of it was produced in the British Empire. But it would take all the new British gold for the next 14 years to pay our debt to America.

It is credit, not gold, that British bankers are concerned about, and several bankers have publicly admitted the dangers ahead. Sir Robert Kindersley, the head of Lazard Bros. said last week that we have temporarily lost "our unequalled reputation as the money center of the world."

Sir George Paish went still further and said that there is "great danger of a complete breakdown in the world's credit system." This, he said would disorganize trade and commerce and reduce the purchasing power of all nations.

In the matter of real assets, Britain is safe enough. If she were sold up tomorrow, she would pay $2.50 on the dollar. But she has never before had to face such totals.

Not one Briton doubts that every penny will be paid, and the source of his confidence is not the government, but the solid old Bank of England—"the bank," as everyone calls it.

The bank carried the government safely through the Napoleonic wars and the American Revolution and the Crimean War and the Boer War and the Great War.

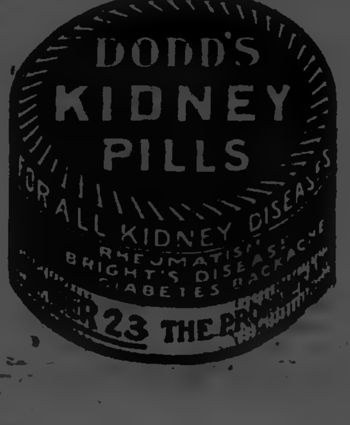
It has gone through every war and every panic for 225 years. It was founded July 27, 1694. It fought down the South Sea Bubble. It came safely through the world wide panic of 1857, when 150 American banks went down. It has survived all the Black Mondays and Black Fridays for seven or eight generations.

Its supremacy in Britain is acknowledged by all bankers. There is no rivalry—Not even serious competition, between the Bank of England and the five or six great joint stock banks that cluster around it. No other bank can ever have its place or its power.

The Bank of England, bear in mind, is not a government bank. It is a private bank which has had governments for clients for more than two centuries. The government does not hold a single share of its stock. Yet it is the central and only national treasury. It is the bank of the banks—the custodian of the gold—the basis of British credit.

The Bank of England is a money power that has no enemies. It has never been attacked by agitators, either violently or verbally. Even the socialists are proud of it.

It disarms criticism by regarding itself as a trustee of the public good. It refuses to be a profiteer. Recently, for instance, it announced that all its excess profits had been handed over to the government. "We prefer to congratulate ourselves," said Sir Brien Cokayne, "on having rendered considerable service to the state during the war at a minimum cost to the exchequer."



TORONTO CARRIERS WAITING FOR WORD

HAVE NO IDEA AS TO WHAT THEIR WAGES ARE.

Toronto postmen are still on duty awaiting the results of their ultimatum to the Government demanding definition of the orders which have been made regarding their wage schedules. The chief cause of the discontent, according to officials of their union is the uncertainty of the orders or rules under which they are working. Reports from Labor newspapers are to the effect that the bonus of $350 has been cut off, but so far no official word has come to the local men as to what schedule of salary they are working under.

"To my knowledge, nothing has ever come up which has created so much and such widespread discontent among the letter carriers," said Mr. R. H. Cox. "Moreover, this is in a department of a public utility which is thriving and which has surpluses, and which is really the people's department. The postmen are demanding a living wage which will in some way meet the contingencies created by the present increased cost of living."

Montana copper mines were given an increase of $1 a day.

TO-DAY'S STORY

The modest looking man elbowed his way to the second counter in aisle 2, got the clerk's attention after much effort, and spoke.

"Will you show me a bathing suit?" he asked. "Something for about $5, and something quiet and conservative."

The clerk looked curiously at the modest looking man, for here, indeed, was something out of the ordinary, a little change from the general run, a man who wanted something quiet and conservative.

"And," pursued the modest looking man, "I wish to purchase a woman's suit that is a match for mine."

"You don't mean to say that you want a quiet, conservative bathing suit for yourself and your wife?" said the astonished clerk. "Man, they don't make 'em any more. We may be able to dig one or two out of the store room, but I doubt it. We had some early models of the kind you want and tried to give them away, but those we offered 'em to felt insulted."

"Ah, but I want to be different," said the modest looking man. "When I go down to the beach I want to attract attention. If I get into one of the old time outfits and my wife does the same thing we'll have a crowd around us in no time.

"If we rig out in the new style bathing togs we'll be like everyone else—and how we hate to be common! I'm not buying an out-of-date outfit because I am not up to date. No; it is because I can't make a hit in one of the new fashioned rigs.

"All our neighbors have been rioting with rainbow hues, trying to outdo one another. Jones has a suit that looks like a sunflower gone mad with the heat. Brown and his wife have twin suits that suggest a goulash in a fatal smashup with some chilee on came. Casey and his wife have theirs in a color scheme that looks like a combination salad just off the ice.

"I had a scenic artist design suits for my wife and me. He daubed with a wicked palette and the result was a delirium of pigments. We had the suits made up and strolled on the beach, expecting to start a tidal wave or something. But we did no such thing. We were outdone. Other suits had ours faded. We were'nt in the picture at all. We stood alone where we expected a crowd around us.

"That's why I want two old-fashioned bathing suits, mine to be one of those dear old plain blue things they used to wear before the world went loony, my wife's the kind with the long skirt and sleeves and stockings, the kind one could wear to church with strict propriety. I'll be darned if we won't be different."

"Do you think they'll let you on the beach if you are respectably dressed?" asked the clerk.

WIT AND WISDOM

While George Ade, the slang man, was spending a holiday at Palm Beach he ventured into a barber shop and got shaved. When he was finished the barber handed him a tag for 65 cents. Ade regarded it thoughtfully. Then turning to the barber, he asked:

"Do you happen to know the significance of that red and white striped pole in front of your shop?"

"Yes, sir," said the barber. "You see, in olden times barbers were surgeons as well as tonsorial artists. When a man had to be bled he came to a barber."

"And we still get bled," retorted Ade, as he paid the check, adding, "whatever you do, don't take down that pole."

A Montreal boy told his teacher that his sister had the measles.

"You go right home, Johnnie," she said, "and don't come back until your sister is well."

Johnnie left in a hurry. After he was gone another little boy held up his hand and said:

"Teacher, Johnnie Dolan's sister what has the measles lives in Toronto."

"Madam," announced the new maid, "your husband is lying unconscious in the reception hall with a large box beside him and crushing a paper in his hand."

"Ah," cried her mistress in ecstacy, "my new hat has come!"

Phrayed Phil—Dis paper says dey's quite a lot of people dat thinks it's unlucky ter begin any work on Friday.

Weary Walker—Well, dat's encouragin'. Mebbe after er while people will be dat sensible about every day er the week."

BRIDE MIGHT BUY THE WEDDING RING

BUT CUSTOM HAS LONG MADE THAT DUTY OF THE GROOM.

It's a long, long way from the iron ring to the golden wedding band, and yet one ultra-modern idea has been suggested by a young bride-to-be which may cause the dim, dark ages of the past to sink further into the land of things forgotten, says the Toronto Telegram.

When The Telegram's letter box was opened this morning the following little query from "Daily Reader" was revealed:

> "Does it make any difference whether the girl buys the wedding ring and pays for it, or must it be a gift from 'him' to 'her' in the wedding ceremony? Is a ring essential?"
>
> DAILY READER."

Nowhere since the world began is there anything recorded as to the girl buying the ring.

Recorders of the hard facts tell us that "it was an old Roman custom for the wife to wear an iron ring to indicate that she was the chattel of her husband."

Things improved in the second century, however, for the head of the house suddenly decided that "the missus" would look better if she wore gold on her finger instead of "that ugly black iron thing that makes you look so clumsy," as no doubt he pointed out in one of their friendly little talks.

Two Instead of One

The modern girl even though she can't entirely forget the strange traditions surrounding her ring, has much to be thankful for. For instance the Roman lady only had one ring to show that somebody loved her very much, and the one she got was given to her without any expressed wishes on her part.

But today! Why, there is the diamond first, ordered most carefully after She has stated her wishes and considered and deliberated till He is worried half out of his mind. He has the expense and the mental strain, while She merely goes into ecstasies in gloating over the $500 (more or less) stone.

Only Two Styles

Then comes the day of choosing the wedding ring. Tradition has it that there must be the golden circlet to place on the third finger which has sported a lonely diamond, but on the day of days it must be presented jewelless. This is the one time when the twentieth century bride-to-be is very sweet and modest.

"The girls are very shy about choosing the wedding rings," said a prominent jeweller, who probably sells more wedding rings than any other firm in the city. "We have never had a girl come in alone to buy a wedding ring, but they invariably come in with their prospective husband to choose between the two regular styles. The English ring is wide and flat and the American narrow and thick.

H. C. of LOVING

"Has the price of wedding rings soared in keeping with other household necessities?" The Telegram asked.

"Well, yes, a little," said the jeweller. "But the average man pays ten or twelve dollars for a wedding ring. The very best can be had for $12 or $16."

If The Telegram's correspondent would take a tip, we would advise her to let Him buy the ring. But if he has been a munitioner and he a soldier boy, why there's no reason on earth why she shouldn't go fifty-fifty on the ring if she wants to, because it's a sure thing he couldn't have saved an awful lot from that dollar-ten a day.

Eyeless Oysters.

The oyster has a good-sized stomach, which is connected with the mouth by a short gullet; two pairs of gills for breathing, an intestine, a dark green liver, a two-chambered heart and an elementary nervous system, but is minus ears, nose and eyes. It also lacks the footlike appendage that many mollusks possess for the reason that it has no need of an organ of locomotion.

Mixing Tobacco.

The mixing of light and dark tobacco is a thing of comparatively recent date. A man from London found his pipe tobacco was nearly exhausted, so he cut up a cake of chewing tobacco and made a mixture. He continued to smoke the blend, and, meeting a friend who was in the trade, he gave him a sample, with the result that the first smoking mixture was soon before the public.

Lure of Victory.

Willis—I am organizing a regiment for service in this war that will make them all sit up and take notice.

Her Father—You have been paying attention to my daughter. You haven't proposed yet?

His Lordship—Not yet, sir.

Her Father—Now let us come right down to business. What will you take not to propose?—Brooklyn Eagle.

Calling the Roll in Congress.

There are 435 members in the national house of representatives. It takes forty-five minutes to call the roll. In order to avoid the tedious delay, an electric voting device will probably be installed before the next session begins in December. It is estimated that it will cost $20,000 to establish the system.

Indispensable but Undesirable.

What is that which I have not, which I do not wish to have, and yet if I had it I would not part with it for anything?—A bald head.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Classifying Time.

That man has great tomorrows before him who has great yesterdays behind him and is trying to put a great deal of greatness into his todays.

Undoubted Proof.

An eminent pianist was about to give a recital in a large hall. As the audience was filing in a man staggered up to the door and presented a ticket. "You cannot go in," said the official in charge; "you are not in a fit condition." "Didn't I pay for my ticket?" asked the man. "Isn't it in order?" "It's all right," was the reply, "but you—you are all wrong; you are intoxicated!" "Intoxicated? Of course I'm intoxicated! If I wasn't do you think I would come to a piano recital?"

Doomed to Wretchedness.

Let a man choose what condition he will, and let him accumulate around him all the goods and gratifications seemingly calculated to make him happy in it; if that man is left at any time without occupation or amusement, and reflects on what he is, the meager, languid felicity of his present lot will not bear him up. He will turn necessarily to gloomy anticipation of the future; and unless his occupation calls him out of himself, he is inevitably wretched.—Pascal.

Worse Yet.

"There's nothing so hard to ride as a young broncho," said the westerner.

"Oh, I don't know!" replied the man from back east. "Did you ever try the water wagon?"—Toledo Blade.

Keep Sweet.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. One may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment he is crossed and gives way to temper the clean feeling vanishes: and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon the heart. Be the master of your temper and you hold the key to joy and contentment.

Whence "Dutch."

The name Dutch is derived from Dietsch, meaning the vernacular, as distinguished from Latin. It is the same word as the German Deutsch. Dutch belongs to the Frankish division of the Low German, and is closely related to the Flemish, with which it is now practically identified in its written form. The Dutch language is one of the Germanic group of dialects, and is practically the same in its structure.

Evidently No Lover of Cards.

It is very wonderful to see persons of the best sense passing hours together in shuffling and dividing a pack of cards with no conversation but in different figures. Would not a man what is made up of a few game-phrases, and no other ideas but those of black or red spots ranged together laugh to hear any one of his species complaining that life is short?—Addison.

Endurance.

Endurance, not fleetness, wins the race. Never give up. Keep pegging away even though everything looks hopeless. Many a man has failed to achieve both fortune and fame because he lost courage just as he was within reach of them. What you desire may be only one step ahead. Keep going.

Curiosities of the Calendar.

It will be found that January always begins on the same day of the week as October, and the same is true of April and July, September and December. Again February, March and November also begin on the same day of the week. This, however, is only true in years of 365 days.

OLD JUAREZ.

It Was Once the Gayest City in Mexico.

If there was ever any doubt that Juarez has let big chances go by in the past just because Juarez was fond of revoluting, there can be no doubt that just at present Juarez has been very short-sighted, indeed. If Juarez only had the divine capacity of keeping still, if the citizens of Juarez could only be induced to pack their predatory instincts and their hardware permanently away in their timeworn and shell-shocked adobe domiciles, Juarez might be the rightest, tightest little town that ever blossomed south of the Rio Grande. Juarez has stood to have all the glitter that once was Babylon's and all the glory that once was Greece's, and enough gold or legal tender of the same to stack up against the personal property of the Montezuma himself. Juarez might have been the centre of all the sporting life of America, the home of the forty-round prize fight, the roulette wheel, the fugitive cocktail and all other forms of spirituous liquor, not to mention light wines and beer. Hotels and high mansions might have adorned the unpaved streets. Irrigation ditches might have run far back toward the stark hills which loom up gold and purple to the south.

Think of it! On one side of the Rio Grande stands El Paso, with its villas, its perfect streets, its high office buildings, its huge smelting plant and its imposing hotel — El Paso, the city beautiful of the southwest, and yet bounded with all the restrictions of restrictive legislation. And on the other side of a river, shallow and narrow and muddy, not a quarter of a mile away, stands Juarez, in another country that holds delightfully broadminded views as to [illegible].

And Juarez has found out that Villa and Utopia cannot rest side by side. Somewhere out in those purple and gold mountains Villa is always waiting to visit Juarez, and when Villa visits Juarez death follows in his wake. You can see an example of one of Villa's former calls on Juarez close by the railroad that runs into the town from the south. Once Villa captured the town and two hundred Maderistas to boot. He caused them to dig a trench beside that railroad of suitable length and depth. Then, having lined them up in front of the trench, he turned the machine gun on them. When they had all fallen into the trench, he caused a team of mules and a road scraper to drive by and cover up the grave. The prospect of a visit of Villa to Juarez hardly promotes business enterprise on one side of the river. El Paso grows daily. On the other side of the river Juarez, once one of the brightest, gayest and most licentious cities of Mexico, has lapsed back into pitiful [illegible] in the brightest days of sunshine, a cloud of impending tragedy has rested over the adobe town. Murder has been rampant in its streets, for human life has become very cheap in Juarez. Its graveyard is lined with the graves of political offenders, who have stood in front of the white wall. Its houses, even its cathedral, with its famous wood carvings and its sturdy towers, are pitted with bullet marks and torn by light artillery.

Yet not so very long ago every man who watched the horses run knew of the race track at Juarez. It was one of the best in the western continent, where fortunes were won and lost each year. The horses and the stables were of the very finest. It is years now since any race was run there. The track is a wood-grown wilderness and the grandstand and all the other buildings are falling to pieces. The same is true with all the rest of the town. Every house has a curious unkempt look.

Even the bullfight, if there is any, is not worthy of the name. The costumes of the toreadors are gone, and they bait the bull, a very poorly fed bull, in overalls, which is hardly romantic. And the bull ring, once a very imposing structure indeed, has a gaping hole in its side where a shell tore through in yester-year's battle.

Juarez bears all the marks of a deserted city, but what makes it worse, Juarez is inhabited. Socialists who wish to see a limit set on wealth can find it there. It does not pay to be rich in Juarez, or even to have the appearance of prosperity. The bright colors of Latin America are faded and covered with Chihuahua dust. The faces are coarse and stupid, for nearly every one of wealth and position has left years since.

Once the gayest city of Mexico, Juarez lies quiet and exhausted, while its greatest chance for fame slips by.

A Great Man.

A great man is he who chooses the right in invincible resolution, who resists the sorest temptations from within and without, who bears the heaviest burdens cheerfully, who is calmest in storms and most fearless under frowns, whose reliance on truth, on virtue, on God, is most unfaltering. I believe this greatness to be most common among the multitude, whose names are never heard.—W. E. Channing.

On Life's Journey.

I do not say we ought to be happier as we grow older, but we ought to be calmer, knowing better what life is, and looking forward to another, which we believe to be a reality though we cannot tell what it means.—Exchange.

Common Gain.

The cause of freedom is identified with the destinies of humanity, and in whatever part of the world it gains ground by and by, it will be a common gain to all those who desire it.—Kossuth.

Learn From Mistakes.

If you make a mistake don't look back at it long. Take the reason of the thing into your own mind, and then look forward. Mistakes are lessons of wisdom.—Hugh White.

Happiness Easily Attained.

Those of us who ever stop to reason or think along profitable lines know that there are "sermons in stones, books in running brooks, and good in everything" as the poet sings. We do not have to be either rich or famous to procure happiness. If we try to keep cheerful, forget our woes and "look pleasant," our narrow sphere will take on a broad and pleasing aspect. Furthermore, this view will make us see lots of good in the folks around us and many fine attractions in our home and old "home town."

Sheep Bone Toy of Small Orientals.

Without the bone of a sheep, that eternal, ubiquitous playtoy of all the East, the children of Asia would be absolutely without an amusement device. Go wherever children play—Osmanlis or Kurds, Armenians or Arabs, Druses or Greeks—and you will see the sheep bone represents everything from a doll to a sword, from a pasha's horsetail ornamented standard to a British gunboat, from a mosque to a church.—Red Cross Magazine.

Cosmetic Art.

From the looks of some of the women when it turns cold, it would be a good proposition to sell different shades of powder for hot, warm, cool and cold weather. They say that they sell different shades for day and night—white for the daytime and blue for use under artificial light, so, why not for different degrees of temperature as well? However, probably some bright genius has already thought this up and patented his compound and it may not be well advertised as yet.—Grit.

MAN AND WIFE MAKES TRIP FROM TORONTO TO PETERBORO IN CANOE

Also Crossed Lake Ontario-Has Travelled 2,900 Miles on Lake and River in Peterborough Built Canoe.

Mr. P. W. Bryant, a colored canoe expert, and wife, of Toronto, arrived in this city yesterday from Toronto by canoe. They travelled from 6 to 8 miles out in Lake Ontario to Port Hope, covering the distance of 78 miles in 14 hours. From Port Hope he portgaged to Rice Lake, crossed the lake and up the Otonabee River to Peterborough. Mr. Bryant and wife made the entire trip of 117 miles in 20 hours and 30 minutes.

Crossed Old Ontario.

On July 5 Mr. Bryant, in company with Mr. J. Clarke, also of Toronto, made a record canoe trip, crossing Lake Ontario from Toronto to Niagara-on-the-Lake. He states that 12 miles of this trip was travelled in what has been reported the worst storm of the season. They were out of sight of land for 6 hours and 40 minutes, having to depend entirely on the compass for their sense of direction. While they were labouring in mid-lake they were passed by the steamer Chippawa, also bound for Niagara-on-the-Lake, and received encouragement from the passengers on board.

Mr. Bryant states that he used the same Canadian canoe made in Peterborough on both these trips, in spite of the fact that last year this canoe covered a distance of 1,500 miles. He says that his canoe has never needed repairs in all these voyages.

A Safe Craft.

One of his trips last year was one which tested the quality of both canoe and paddler to the full. He started at North Bay, shooting the dangerous rapids of the French river, and on to Georgian Bay. Then he proceeded down the Penetangine River to Midland, and thence through the Severn River to Lake Simcoe and then to Lake Ontario, where a distance of over 30 miles had to be covered before he reached Toronto.

Born in America.

Mr. Bryant was born in Omaha, Nebraska, and since then has travelled much. He is regularly a violin player, but has engaged in canoe travelling for the purpose of showing the value of the canoe as a means of travel. He states that his object is to travel 4,000 miles in two seasons in the one Canadian canoe. He has already travelled 2,900 miles of this distance and he is certain of making the 1,100 miles remaining this season.

He praises the Canadian canoe greatly and certainly so capable a padler must be a good judge of canoes. A canoe, if half properly handled, is, he says, the safest craft that floats.

RUSSELL-TOWNSEND CO'S CHEQUE HAS BEEN MAILED TO THE MAYOR

His Worship Called Out of Town to Important Radial Meeting.

Mayor Duncan this afternoon received word from the Russell-Townsend Co. that their marked cheque for $10,000 in guarantee of the proper fulfilment of their contract to build the new Hunter street bridge had been mailed and would reach him tomorrow. On receipt of this cheque the Mayor will sign the contract, and an early start on the work may be looked for.

But his Worship was notified by telegram at 3 o'clock this afternoon to attend an emergency meeting of the Provincial Radial executive on University Avenue, Toronto, at 3 o'clock tomorow afternoon to confer with the officers of the Hydro Commission of Ontario. Important matters are to be discussed, and the Mayor, being a member of the radial executive, is expected to be present. He will leave on the morning local, and should the Russell-Townsend guarantee cheque not have reached him between now and that hour he will lose no time in signing the contract on his return.

CAPT. MORRISON RESIGNS POSITION AS HEAD OF THE G.W.V.A.

At the meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association held last night, Mr. Harvey Staunton was elected president to succeed Capt. Morrison, who owing to the fact that he holds a government position, was not eligible to hold office in the G.W.V.A.

Beyond this fact nothing could be learned on enquiry at the Veterans' rooms. Secretary Whatley referred the press representative to the newly formed publicity committee which in future will hand out all matters for the press. Even the names of this committee were withheld.

Thoroughbred for Peterboro County

ALLAN B. MANN OF THE HAWTHORNES MAKES ANOTHER BIG INVESTMENT.

Peterborough county is rapidly coming to the front as one of the leading producers of high class stock in Canada and no farmer has done more to build up this reputation than has Mr. Allan B. Mann, of the Hawthornes, near Bridgenorth. Mr. Mann is the popular secretary for the Board of Agriculture for West Peterborough, now in his sixth term of office. He has recently purchased from a stock raiser near Guelph the thoroughbred six year old shorthorn bull, Gainsford Select. This animal, sired by the famous Gainsford Marquis, took third prize in his class in the Toronto Fair, the first prize two years in succession at Ottawa and won the grand championship at Sherbrooke, Quebec. A half brother, of Gainsford Select, raised at Elora, was recently sold in the United States for $12,000.

Ask Habeas Corpus Writ for Aliens

WINNIPEG LABOR LEADERS OBJECT TO STAR CHAMBER COUNT METHODS.

Winnipeg, July 22.—Application has been prepared for habeas corpus to save Oscar Schoppelrl, ordered deported as a revolutionary alien enemy, from his sentence. Five minutes' discussion of the board was sufficient for sentence to be pronounced, and, as the evidence is similar in the other three cases, it is certain they will be ordered taken out of the country next week. Bail was refused, of course, pending applications for habeas corpus, and, in any event, counsel for the accused say they will not be deported until the Privy Council passes on the sentence, but Crown authorities assert if that is the case they will be kept in prison until that time.

Secret Information

The evidence generally submitted has been that the accused have been active at revolutionary meetings, opposing conscription, and generally trouble making in recent disturbances and back for two years, but there is a graver aspect which came up today when Crown counsel asked permission to introduce secret service documents and reports bearing on the men in confidence, as it would be contrary to interests of state to have the secret agents placed on the stand.

Watched Closely

Counsel for the prisoners strenuously objected and the board decided not to go further, but unquestionably the members are familiar with these docments, as it is no secret many secret service men have been watching these leading alien enemies for some time, compiling reports of their activities, especially during the strike.

When the Crown referred to the men being general revolutionary characters their counsel objected and said they were merely asking to have same laws they considered bad repealed. To call that revolution he said, was to give a dog a bad name and have it stick.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bother

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat form uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts fro many pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

DULUTH WOMEN GAINS 15 POUNDS, SHE SAYS

TANLAC MADE MRS. NORMAN WELL TWO YEARS AGO—GOOD HEALTH CONTINUED SHE STATES

"Although it has been two years now since Tanlac relieved me of my suffering and built me up so wonderfully every day is still a well day for me," was the statement made by Mrs. Liddia Norman, Route 4, Box 242, Duluth, Minn while in Abbett & Company's drug store recently.

"For three years," she continued "I had suffered agonies with rheumatism all over my body. My feet were so swollen I could hardly get my shoes on. I had to wear gloves to keep down the swelling in my hands as much as possible. I was in so much pain that I was all bent over and had to use a cane in order to get about. My stomach was in a very bad condition, too, and what I would eat seemed to lump up badly and lie in the pit of my stomach and ferment. I would bloat up terribly with gas and have such depressed feelings in my chest and around my heart that it was difficult for me to get my breath. My appetite was very poor there were many things I couldn't eat at all and at times I was very dizzy. I couldn't get any sound sleep, had fallen off a great deal in weight and just felt miserable most all the time.

"When I read and heard so much about Tanlac I made up my mind to try it and it was the wisest decision I ever made. By the time I had finished my third bottle I discarded my cane and could eat what I wanted without the least trouble afterwards. After taking five bottles the rheumatism was gone entirely and I could walk as well as I ever could, and I also found I had gained fifteen pounds in weight. Well, I haven't had an ache or a pain to this good day and I still eat and sleep like a child and feel fine all the time. I have related my experience with Tanlac many time and am willing to keep on telling it as long as I can help other people out of their suffering. I am getting a bottle of Tanlac now to take as a spring tonic and I hope what I say in this statement will start many others on the road to health.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

IT DOES NOT AIWAYS PAY TO HOG THE ROAD

CONDIGN PUNISHMENT SUFFERED BY PARTY OF CHEAP SPORTS.

There is a class of motorists, and in this city at that, who take a delight in subjecting others to annoyance, not to say insult, on their quiet trips by car into the country. Ladies as well as men are their prey, and 'tis a pity an example cannot be made of those joy-riders who go out of their way to make others "take their dust," no matter what the circumstances may be.

On the road to Cobourg a family of two men and two ladies, with chauf., motoring between Peterborough and Bewdley, at a moderate [illegible] overtook a car also from Peterborough, carrying a party of young men. All decent motorists know the breed—the cheap sport six-to-a-four-passenger-car brand whose main object when out for the day is to annoy other people. Well, these cheap sports would neither give the other car passage by nor get ahead themselves. No, they took delight in hogging the road, and so adjusting their speed that the rear car must keep in their dust, whether or no. This was mighty unpleasant, especially for the ladies, and one of their companions remarked that it would serve their annoyers right were something to happen their car. And just then something did happen—the beautifullest tire blowout one ever did see—and something continued happening those dust-giving fiends all the way to Cobourg, for between the scene of their first blowout and the lake they suffered no less than six exasperating mishaps. All of which goes to show that it does not always pay to hog the road.

If two motorists choose to race on a narrow country road, the giving and taking of dust may be a legitimate part of the sport, but no one has a right to wilfully and deliberately govern the pace of their car to subject a car following to dust annoyance, especially so when the rear motorist slows up to keep out of the dust.

BRICKLAYERS ASK INCREASE

The ranks of the industrially discontented in Toronto were augmented yesterday by the entry of the bricklayers and stone masons, who have resolved to demand an increase in their present wage scale of 72 cents per hour for a 44-hour week, alleging that in some parts of the United States brother craftsmen are receiving as high as $1.25 per hour.

ONTARIO FARMERS TAKE LEAD AS OWNERS OF AUTOMOBILES

More Than One Third of Cars Owned in This Province Belong to Men Who Till the Soil.

Farmers are coming into their own insofar as the possession of motor cars is concerned. During the last five years the increase in the number of cars owned by farmers has been phenomenal. Statistics contained in the report of the Department of Highways for last year testify as to the many farmers that are replacing the horse with the motor car for pleasure and utility.

The report of the Department shows that of 131,599 passenger cars owned in the Province last year, 64,900 of them were owned in towns, villages and townships, and only 36,699 in the cities. Of the number owned in cities less than half were in Toronto, or 17,171. There was a total registration of 109,374 cars in the Province, including 7,539 motor trucks. There was an increase of 25,684 in the number of cars of all kinds registered in the Province in 1918 over the previous year.

Analysis of Occupation.

It is also interesting to note in an analysis of the occupations of the owners that 37,758 of them are farmers and drovers, which far exceed the number owned by any other class. The others are owned as follows: skilled trades, 6,634; business firms, 2,106; merchants and manufacturers, 27,144; physicians, 2,712; other professions, 3,529; commercial travellers, 2,507; agents, 2,833; liverymen, 1,784; soldiers, 634; government and corporations, 569; military departments and units, 365; unspecified and unoccupied, 13270.

The classification of cars shows that 91,866 are touring; 7,114 are runabouts; 2,758 are coupes, sedans and limousines; 49 are taxi-cabs, and 58 are buses and ambulances. The great bulk of the cars are 25 h. p., and less, 84,018 being listed this way, while 31 are 51 h. p. and over. There are 4 steam cars and 162 electric cars. There are 18 trucks of six tons and over.

Decrease of Motorcycles.

Of motorcycles there were 5,002 last year, a decrease as compared with 1917 or 178. There were 10,629 chauffeurs' licenses issued during the year, an increase of 8,214.

Another interesting sidelight is the number of mootrists who were summoned to the police court on various charges under the Motor Vehicles' Act. There were 10,086 all told, and 8,367 of this number were before the court on charges of speeding.

The report makes a comparison between the first three months of this year when there were 2,435 convictions as against 1,032 for the same period last year. These figures show an increase of 143 per cent. in speeding charges this year; an increase of 151 per cent. in "no lights" charges; an increase of 321 per cent. in "no rear light charges," and an increase of 600 per cent. in "dirty markers" charges.

During 1918 $71,476.75 was collected in fines, and $16,458.80 in costs. Motor fines it is pointed out by the Department, are payable to the treasurer of the municipality in which the offence is committed when an officer of the municipal corporation lays the information.

New Policemen Will Cost City About $78,000 in 1919

Toronto, July 22.—The decision of city to put 125 more men on the police force, thus bringing it up to pre-war strength, will add something less than $78,000 to the civic wage bill for 1919. The total, if the men had been placed on duty at the beginning of 1919, would have been $156,000, but less than half a year remains.

PROPOSED CHANGES IN SCHOOL COURSE

DR. CODY, MINISTER OF EDUCATION, MAKES SEVERAL IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENTS.

With the object of relieving the pressure of work in Continuation Schools, High Schools and Collegiate Institutes, the Minister of Education, Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody, announces certain changes in the lower school course of study. The history of the Great War, which has added 30 to 40 per cent. to prescribed courses in history, will henceforth be studied in suitable perspective in connection with British, Canadian and modern history. Contracted methods in decimals in arithmetic are omitted and will not figure in examination papers. Art courses will be lessened in both years; and the course in business forms will be made more practical.

In elementary science, physics and chemistry are to be amended to correspond with the new courses in middle and upper school classes. The method of approving schools for the examinations in lower school science is to be changed, making the approval of the school dependent on the character of the equipment and of the teaching rather than making this approval contingent upon the inspector's approval of the character of the pupils' notebooks in science.

To Reduce Homework.

It is also the intention of the Minister to reduce homework in the second schools, particularly those of the lower forms. Certain modifications will also be made in the High School system to relieve the over-pressure of work due to the fact that pupils carry too many subjects at one time. The Department divides the examination for entrance into Normal Schools, and into the Faculties of education, into two parts, which may be taken in different years. The pressure in the schools is more directly due to University requirements for matriculation where ten subjects are required as a minimum for pass standing. There is also the fact that two different sets of examination standards in the same subjects and courses have been established, one for Normal School entrance and another for pass and honor university matriculation.

Dr. Cody hopes to lessen the rigidity of these requirements by giving greater freedom to teachers in the organization of their schools. Regulative restrictions are to be removed and more flexible examination requirements established. A combination of the Normal entrance and faculty entrance examinations may be effected upon the pass and honor matriculation examination of the universities. A more or less thorough revision of the whole High School system may also be brought about.

IS YOUR TIME VALUABLE?

If your glasses break, will it interfere with your work? Would a long wait for repairs inconvenience you? When it happens, remember Dr. Fowler's modern repair department, where breaks are mended as good as new and so quickly that you hardly have time to miss the glasses. Having a second pair of glasses for emergencies is still better.

Exposition of Wonders From Whole World

NOTABLE CURIOSITIES AND FEATURES AT EXHIBITION GROUNDS.

Owning to the fact that the Polack Brothers 20 Big Shows experienced great difficulty in getting off the circus lot at Montreal, the big show train did not arrive in this city until this morning, thereby being unable to exhibit last evening, their opening advertised date. The circus lot at Montreal was in bad shape, it requiring from ten to twelve horses to pull the heavy wagons off into the street.

The big doings here are to take place during the week at the Exhibition grounds under the auspices of the Peterborough Exhibition Board.

The circus grounds will be transformed into an exposition of wonders in which natives from all parts of the earth, from a part of the inhabitants. There is the Garden of Allah with it's camels, it's strang dwellers with its entertaining custom and features of the Far East. Then there are the cowboys and Indians from the American Far West, who display unusual ability with the lasso, ropes, revolvers and rifles. The La Rose Electric Fountain, considered to be the world's greatest fire, water and electricity display, will be the feature attraction. It is a Hipprodrome feature and the first time in its history of the invention that it has ever been shown by a travelling organization, although it did feature the Canadian Exposition in Toronto, 1918. The circus annex with its notable features and curosities gathered from all parts is an entertainment that is bound to please the outdoor amusement seeker. "Over the Falls", a cool refreshing ride, and Coney Island latest riding sensation is numbered among the many attractions, it is a real hummer.

All the attractions of the exposition will open promptly at six-thirty this evening, and at two-thirty each afternoon. Band concerts will be given by Victor's Concert band every afternoon and evening in the city.

Owing to the failure of Congress to provide sufficient funds to retain officers in the army air service, 94 per cent of these experts will be dismissed before Sept. 30.

Serious Accident To Fishing Party

YOUNG MEN FROM HASTINGS MEET WITH MISHAP AT HEALEY FALLS.

(Special to The Review.)

Hastings, July 22.—A serious accident occurred at Healey Falls on Saturday which might have proved fatal. A party from town, comprising Messrs. Chas. Fowlds, Walter Thomson, John Thomson, Lieut. Currie and Chas. Doughty had gone for a two days' fishing expedition and had camped at the Falls for the night. Early in the morning while making preparations for the day's outing, something went wrong with the engine of their launch, causing it to back fire, and catching the gasoline tank, which exploded and blew some of the men into the water, after which the yacht went to the bottom. Some of the party were badly burned and one had to be removed to the hospital in Ottawa where he is lying in a critical condition.

The men were attended to as well as possible and motored to their homes where Mr. Charles Fowlds has been confined to bed. His condition is much improved.

THEATRICAL

JUDGE RECOVERS HIS STOLEN CHILD

INTERESTING STORY IN WHICH THE EXCHANGE OF BABIES FIGURES.

The pictures at the Grand yesterday were of a very high order. Mabel Normand starring in "The Pest" and Mae Murray in "Danger, Go Slow" were both greatly appreciated.

"The Pest" was a young girl who lived very humbly on an island. She dressed very shabbily, and it was her duty to carry passengers across to an island on a ferry. The old judge who owned the island was a kind man and asked this little girl to a party he was giving to some of his guests from the city. While at the party the judge recognized the ring she was wearing and which she had taken from a box of her mother's. The fiancee of the judge's daughter was connected in the stealing of the ring. The private secretary of the judge, who was an island lad and a friend of the Pest, was very earnest about his work and immediately endeavored to find out about this ring. In order to have him dismissed the fiancee of the judge's daughter steals some bonds from the judge's safe and [illegible] in the trunk of the private secretary. The Pest has overheard their plans and although she was [illegible] up in a small cottage, [illegible] to tell her story to the judge. One of the band of islanders then tells the whole story, and it turns out that while the judge was away his child had been stolen and one of the native babies of the island put in its place. The Pest is his real daughter.

"Danger, Go Slow."

Danger, Go Slow" is also a very clever plot. A group of robbers are raided by the police and one of them was caught and sent up the river for a year. The youngest of the gang escaped in a box car to the country village of Cottonville. At this village he was fed by a kind old lady who turned out to be the mother of the fellow who had been sent to prison. Influenced by a picture of George Washington, she takes off her cap and shows the long curls of a young girl. She stays with the old lady for a year, paying off her mortgage by tricking the hard old judge of the village. She also tricks a rich young man to pay $10,000 for the old lady's useless piece of ground, pretending she knew there was oil there. When the year is ended she goes to the prison and rescues her old pal from the gang and brings him back to his mother to go straight.

Besides these two big pictures there is a very amusing Charlie Chaplin comedy—a real screamer.

Powerful New Explosive.

A new and very powerful explosive which may be used in mining and for other purposes, is lead azide, a salt of hydronitric acid. Can You Do It?

This sentence, President Eliot of Harvard university is said to have given to Doctor Lowell, his successor as head of the university, stipulating that the words all be spelled correctly: "It is agreeable to view the unparalleled embarrassment of a harassed saddler or peddler sitting on a cemetery wall, gauging the symmetry of a skillfully peeled potato."

The Fantom Diver

By GEORGE W. LEWIS

(Copyright)

Big Harkinson stepped off the raft and disappeared downward. The gray-green water lapped above his head, a few blister-like bubbles danced and exploded in the tiny swirl that marked his exit. That was all. The sepulchered Helena was about to receive a second visitor from the land of the living. The slender conduit that linked the diver with life paid out rapidly, then suddenly stopped, and we knew that Harkinson was aboard the wreck.

"Seventy-one feet," drawled Garrick.

"A little pale, wasn't he?" queried Wenry, keeping a watchful eye on the line.

Garrick looked over to the speaker as though he had expected the question.

"What d'you s'pose is wrong?" he said. The faintest trace of anxiety was in his great, slow voice.

"It's Connors—I mean the mysterious way Connors' air-tube parted," returned Wenry. "I don't believe in spooks, 'specially submarine ones; but there ain't no more cause for the Atlantic cable coming in two at this minute than there was for poor Connors' hose—a brand new one, too, mind you—separatin' as it did. It's queer."

Garrick, listening, spat reflectively at the last remaining bubble. Watching from my seat in the dingey, I knew that the two men, whatever denials they might make, were at last impressed with the gruesomeness of their chosen profession—dallying with dead things under the sea. Mayhap it was because Connors had been their tutor, their companion. Indeed, the old diver had been pretty nearly everything to them; but he had been even more to his employers. In his unaccountable death the world had lost a master-diver, and the company had lost money. But because John Connors had been a faithful servant, the company had paid hard money that the diver's harness-weighted remains might be the first brought up.

Harkinson's signal "up" was of that nervous, hurry-up sort that tells of sudden distress. He had been down but three minutes. At a similar depth he usually remained thirty or more, for he was a Hercules, and for him water-pressure had no terrors. I knew that Wenry, at least—though for no good reason—fully expected to see the big diver come up limp and dead. I read his white face like print. But when big Harkinson's helmet bobbed out of water a moment later, both his big red hands were clutching at the raft as frantically as if some pursuing monster were about to drag him down to death.

When his helmet was off, his face showed mottled and chalky. The spluttered-out, meaningless fragments of speech, and his eyes were fixed in a terrified stare. Garrick forced half a pint of whisky down his throat before anything like coherency could be restored.

"He's down there—boys—Connors!" The diver clapped his hands over his eyes as if to shut out some hideous recurring vision. "Oh, Lord!" he wailed, "think—think of the harness—Connors, dead sixty—sixty hours—walking and beckoning—"

Harkinson's great strength snapped like a reed under the strain, and he dropped forward upon his face, unconscious.

When Garrick consented to go down to the Helena, I knew that it was because he needed money—needed it badly. Garrick, unavoidably, had long been idle; besides, he was engaged and the girl was pretty and [illegible], and the big, slow-spoken diver [illegible] that he must prepare a suitable [illegible] for her. He was of a good, honest [illegible] was Garrick, and courageous, [illegible] his face as [illegible] re- [illegible] ex- [illegible] was in [illegible] though he [illegible] up.

"There was a lot of wreckage piled up about the cabin door," Harkinson [illegible] told us, "and I had to squat as low as I could to pass under it. As I raised up, inside the cabin—Connors—dead sixty hours—got up off a bench fixed to the opposite wall of the cabin, and came to meet me. Seventy-one feet under the sea with a ghost! Connors—yes, it was him, all right—suddenly stopped and threw up his hands as though recognition of me startled him. He wore his same diver's outfit—the kind we all use. After a moment his arms fell limply by his sides; but immediately he made a hand and passed it over his brow perplexedly. Then he seemed to gesture to me; and I found that I was also beckoning to him, signaling to him to follow me up. But he backed away in a manner almost of despair, I thought, and resumed his bench at the farther side of the cabin as I bent low under the wreckage at the door and backed out on deck, signaling to be pulled up."

Wenry's face was chalk-white, as big Garrick went over the side and dropped out of sight in the green swell that rocked our raft and dingey. As for me, I confess my nerves were strangely shaken. But I was scarcely more than a green diver as yet, whereas Wenry thrilled his listeners—and himself—with well-told tales of raised treasures and strange submarine encounters in which, be it known, he spared himself little of the commendation due to achievements.

Within twelve minutes after Garrick went down, the body of Connors had been recovered in a fair state of preservation. Harkinson, an old timer, too, had after all allowed himself to be frightened off the job by some fool, subaqueous phenomenon whose phases he had been studying all his precious life.

Wenry's superstitious mind was infinitely relieved. A semblance of color came back into his face, and I had begun to feel less of the anxiety experienced by one at work with a near-maniac for a companion, when all at once Garrick startled us with a fiercely tugged "up" signal. He was mumbling strange sounds before we got his helmet off, and when the light fell on his face it revealed a mask of terror unspeakable. His features were drawn and seamed unbelievably, and speech had deserted him altogether. Some awful emotion shook his great body like an aspen.

It was two long hours before we knew his story. All that Harkinson had seen in the Helena's cabin, Garrick, too, had beheld—the same in all its blood-chilling details.

The affair began to nag my nerves with a vengeance. I would have staked my very existence on the grip of Garrick's big jaw. I almost wished that I had done so; for Wenry and I were the only availables now, and I knew beforehand that Wenry, if detailed, would refuse to go down. It was a time when one must be a man or a mouse; when a white feather becomes a white flag, and a white flag means the surrendering of a career. I am a natural coward, but possess underlying qualities of resolution. I could live without this job, I thought; and, too, I, unlike Garrick, was blessed with no woman's love save a mother's; but her comforts were my pleasures, her self-denials my heartaches. I went down.

I went down, down, down, down until my cumbrous feet met the slimy, slanting deck of the ill-fated Helena. The water was as clear as might be at a like depth. Everywhere was a confusion of wreckage. It had been a smashing gale that wrought all this demolition. I made out the cabin, half hidden under a tangled mass of wreckage, and worked my way to the debris-barred door. I avoided the keen edge of a long knife which some whim of the storm's fury had fixed firmly in a piece of broken mast. The edge turned outward, menacing my lines, and I gasped. The mystery of Connors' death was laid bare. His hose had doubtless caught on the knife blade; he had tried to haul it after him, and—!

I had to crouch low to pass under the barrier at the door. The cabin windows were clear, and in the ceiling was a huge, spar-torn hole which admitted light. I stood erect inside the cabin, and—! At the opposite side of the room a second diver in full dress had risen before me, motionless, but erect with the confident poise of life. A nervous, insane curiosity seized me; a yearning to know if the diver that faced me were of flesh and blood, or—or something else. I advanced toward the apparition; and then my nerve all but broke, for it followed my example and came forward to meet me! I hesitated only for the space of a heart-beat; then I threw myself forward wildly, hands clutching, but on the greasy, slime-coated floor my feet flew from under me with the effort, and I crashed down.

The fall dazed me. I only knew that my hands, in the instant of my falling, had slipped over a smooth, [illegible] surface exactly where the apparition had stood. From the floor I turned my eyes upward. The [illegible] diver had disappeared. I got [illegible] to my feet; and then the [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] panel. My [illegible] nerves went [illegible]ck, and my knees swayed weakly from the sudden relaxation as the light of understanding broke upon my groping senses.

"The deuce!" I ejaculated in the close confinement of my helmet, "a mirror!"

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

Early English Coffee Houses.

In an age when newspapers were unknown, or consisted only of official or strictly licensed prints containing only what the court desired to have known, the coffee house became the great exchange of news and politics, and so marked did its influence become that the government attempted at one time to suppress it. The attempt merely served to bring out the importance of the function this unique institution had attained to, for so widespread was the protest of all classes of business affected, and of opinion roused, that Charles II was forced to abandon it.

Gen. John Brown Kerr, [illegible] born in Kentucky [illegible] ago, was the hero of what the late General Miles declared to be the most daring exploit in the history of Indian warfare. In 1891 Kerr, at the head of a brave band of 20 men, found himself surrounded by more than 100 South Dakota Sioux Indians. Outnumbered five to one, Kerr and his men fought so valiantly and handled their guns with such effect that many of the braves were killed and the remainder surrendered.

German Siege of Paris.

The siege of Paris began on September 15, 1870, and ended on January 28, 1871, when the city surrendered, German troops entering the city on March 1, 1871, and remaining 48 hours. The eastern part of Paris was bombarded by the Germans on January 8, 1871, and about a week later there was a general bombardment, in which many buildings were damaged and a number of persons killed. After the latter bombardment France appealed to the neutral powers, but received no response.

$1,000,000 OFFERED FOR PURCHASE OF RED SOX

LOOKS AS THOUGH BOSTON BALL TEAM WILL BE SOLD—CLUB OUT OF RACE.

Boston, Mass., July 21.—It is practically a certainty that the Boston Red Sox, present world's champions, will change hands soon. Information coming to light here today makes it probable that the present owners have had enough of the game and are ready to toss up the sponge. Several lucrative offers are said to have been made for the club. Two of these come from local syndicates. One is from New York. It is said the sum offered by the New York syndicate is $1,000,000. This would cover players, franchise and property interests.

The immediate cause for the proposed sale is the failure of the Red Sox to repeat their successes of 1918. The club is hopelessly out of the pennant race this year and the stockholders will suffer heavy losses, it is said.

The Boston club also is said to be torn by dissension. The players are said to be up in arms against Manager Ed Barrow. The recent trades depriving the club of stars and the action of Mays in quitting the club is said to have hastened the owners in their determination to sell out.

CRACK WAR CANOE CREW NOT TO RACE?

FAMOUS TORONTO RACERS HANDICAPPED BY LACK OF FUNDS.

The Balmy Beach, Toronto, war canoe crew is credited with being the best in the western division, and yet it looks as though this crew may not go to the Canadian association championships at St. Johns, Quebec, Aug. 2. The finances to cover this trip are not forthcoming. It will be a downright sporting crime if this strong war canoe crew is left at home for want of money to defray expenses. The war canoe crew has a royal chance to win a championship. Bill Smith is a strong candidate for single blade honors, and the Beaches have a strong double and four.

Parkdale Canoe Club is sending down a contingent of 30 for the C.C.A. regatta and T.C.C. will have a score or more.

Second Chapter In the Regatta

POSTPONED RACES TO BE RUN OFF NEXT THURSDAY EVENING.

The regatta committee that made such a marked success of their venture on Peace Day, held another meeting last night to arrange for running off the rest of the program which was postponed for lack of time to finish. These races will be held Thursday evening beginning at 6.30 and are as follows.

Swimimng race, boys under 15
Canoe, (single) boys under 14.
Canoe (single) boys under 18.
Hurry Scurry race.
Tilting race.
Canoe boxing.
Canoe race, lady and gentleman.
Launch races, one for eight and another for 12 horse power or under.

It was decided to put on a special race, double canoe, to be manned by employes in some local factory or store.

Two Baseball Clubs Claim One Pitcher

TORONTO PROTESTS THOMPSON PLAYING WITH THE BALTIMORE TEAM.

The National Commission advise Toronto that they decline giving a decision in the case of Pitcher Harold Thompson, now with the Baltimore club, on the ground that business relations have been severed between the major and minor leagues.

The Toronto club claims Thompson's services and has protested to President Fultz against Baltimore using him, claiming that all games in which he has played should be thrown out. Thompson has won four straight games for the Orioles.

Toronto's claim is based on the draft law. The Thompson draft was not exercised by Washington until March, 1919, and under the baseball law Toronto should have had first option on his services. The Toronto club put in a claim for him, but Connie Mack who had bought Thompson from Washington, turned him over to Baltimore.

GOLF BALL KILLS CROW

While playing golf over the Rosedale links, Toronto, Larry Thornton, assistant to the professional of the club, killed a crow in flight. He played a hard iron shot. The ball rose up in its flight, and the crow flew directly in front of the ball. There was a sqawk and a thump, and the crow and ball fell to the ground. The bird was mortally wounded, and died as they ran up to it.

A short while afterward the player who killed the crow was also struck by a played ball, but happily he was not hit in a vital place, and so continued his game.

BASEBALL TONIGHT

The Orientals and De Laval teams will clash this evening in a City League fixture. These two teams are fighting all the way, and an exciting contest is expected.

HOCKEY STAR BACK IN WINNIPEG FROM OVERSEAS

Winnipeg, July 22.—J. W. (Jocko) Anderson, the well-known local hockey and soccer star, has reached here from overseas. He starred as a member of the 61st Battalion team, which won the Allan Cup in 1916, and also as a member of the Scottish soccer team, which won the Connaught Cup in 1915.

JACK JOHNSON IS IN THE RING AGAIN

CHICAGO RECONSIDERS DECISION TO QUIT — WILL FIGHT FLYNN IN MEXICO.

Boston, July 22.—Announcement has been made that Jack Johnson, former heavyweight boxing champion, who is exiled from this country, will box Dan ("Porky") Flynn of Boston at Monterey, Mexico, next Sunday. The report comes from Galveston, Texas, and is the first intimation that the Chicago negro has reconsidered his determination to quit the ring forever.

Since Johnson fled from the United States he has been shunned in England, France and Spain, and has finally landed in Mexico. Monterey, where the bout will take place, is the capital of the State of Nuevo Leon.

Champ. Soccer Series Final at Montreal

CERTAIN TO BE A CLIMAX OF THE CONNAUGHT CUP COMPETITION, AUG. 1.

Winnipeg, July 22.—A championship soccer series final between the champions of Eastern and Western Canada, to be fought out at Montreal in August, is almost certain to be a climax of the Connaught Cup competition, judging from the latest manoeuvres made by the representatives of the six provinces competing in the soccer classic. Manitoba champions will meet Pascoes of the New Ontario League in Winnipeg on August 1 or 2. On the same dates Longshoremen of British Columbia will oppose the Hillhurst eleven, champions of Alberta, at Calgary. The winners of the latter game will journey to Winnipeg to play the winners of the previous game here. This game will decide the championship of Western Canada.

Ian Hay's Anecdotes.

Among the amusing anecdotes recounted in Ian Hay's "Last Million" is one showing how much the Yankee recruits had to learn under the officers of the British and French armies even after their preliminary training at home. A young American officer wittily describes to a Red Cross nurse the emphasis placed upon the proper method of saluting. "There was an English sergeant—well, the boys used to come running a hundred yards to see him salute an officer. I tell you it tickled them to death at first. Next thing they were all trying to do it too." Here the American gave a very creditable reproduction of the epileptic salute of the British guardsman. "Like that," he said. "I'm not surprised they ran," commented the nurse. "Still," continued the officer appreciatively, "that sergeant was a bird. At the start we regarded him as a pure vandeville act. He talked just like a stage Englishman for one thing. I shall never forget the first morning we held an officers' instruction class. There were about forty of us. Old man Duckett—that was his name, Sergeant Inspector Duckett—marched us around and put us through our paces. We meant to show him something — we were a chesty bunch in those days—so we gave him what we imagined was a first-class West Point show. (Not that any of us had been at West Point.) When we had done enough, he lined us up and said: 'Well, gentlemen, I have run over your points, and before dismissin' the parade, i should like to say that I only wish the President of the United States was here to see you. If he did catch sight of you, I know that his first words would be "Thank Gawd from the bottom of my heart, we've got a navy!"'"

The First American Cent.

Vermont was the first state to issue copper cents. In June 1785, she granted the authority to Reuben Harmon, Jr., to make money for the state for two years. In October of the same year, Connecticut granted the right to coin 10,000 pounds in copper cents, known as the Connecticut cent of 1785. Massachusetts, in 1786, established a mint and coined $60,000 in cents and half cents. In the same year, New Jersey granted the right to coin $10,000 at fifteen coppers to the shilling. In 1781 the continental congress directed Robert Morris to investigate the matter of Governmental coinage. He proposed a standard based on the Spanish dollar, consisting of 100 units, each unit to be called a cent. His plan was rejected. In 1784, Jefferson proposed to Congress that the smallest coin should be of copper, and that 200 of them should pass for one dollar. The plan was adopted, but in 1786, 100 was substituted. In 1792 the coinage of copper cents, containing 264 grains, and half cents in proportion, was authorized; their weight was subsequently reduced. In 1853, the nickel cent was substituted and the half cent discontinued, and in 1864 the bronze cent was introduced, weighing forty-eight grains and consisting of 95 per cent. of copper, and the remainder of tin and zinc.

Count von Zeppelin.

Count von Zeppelin, inventor of the airship which bears his name, was not killed in the war, but died of pneumonia at Charlottenburg, near Berlin, on March 8, 1917. He was born in 1838 and was a lieutenant of cavalry at the age of 25, when, in April, 1963, he was sent to the United States as Prussian military attache of the Union army in the civil war, being attached to the Army of the Mississippi, in which Gen. Carl Schurz commanded a brigade. It was at that time that Count von Zeppelin had his first experience as an aeronaut, going up in a captive balloon belonging to the corps to which he was attached.

GLORY ENOUGH FOR ALL ALLIES

PRINCE OF WALES SPEAKS AT BANQUET TO THE COMMANDERS.

London, July 22.—The Prince of Wales presided at a banquet at the Carlton Hotel in honor of the allied commanders. Four hundred were present and the prince sat between Generals Foch and Pershings. Other guests include Premier Lloyd George and Lord Curzon. The prince, who was given ovation when he proposed the health of the allied generals, said:

"Here are gathered together comrades in arms from many nations and from every part of the world who have been engaged in a long and desperate struggle against the most powerful military combination the world has ever known and who emerged from the struggle completely victorious. I must mention the fact that this gathering includes several of our principal leaders, who bore the awful burdens of responsibility in the field and executed tasks of the greatest difficulty and most vital importance.

"Just now we are celebrating our overwhelming victory in the British way. To me, as one of the younger generation, yesterday's memories will be particularly vivid, as during my periods of active service in several theatres of the war I often had the privilege and good fortune of being closely associated with many of our allied armies. I can assure all our allied guests that it has given the British people enormous pleasure to have them and their glorious contingents with us in London. The last and greatest of the world struggles has broken all world's records, from every point of view, but I venture to point out that never before has so large a number of allies been fighting and working together. Certainly never before have allies been so whole-heartedly loyal to each other as we all have been, the only rivalry that existed among us being to see who could do the most for the common cause and who could win the greatest share of glory."

MOST CRIMINALS ARE MERE YOUTHS

EVEN THE TORONTO HIGH SCHOOLS ARE TURNING OUT OFFENDERS.

Toronto, July 22.—"Nine-tenths, perhaps a greater percentage of our criminals today are young men of eighteen or nineteen years of age." By no means do they come from the poorer localities of the city. In many cases we have found that they were lads whose parents were willing to provide them with education and keep them well dressed," said Detective Inspector William Wallace last night, in commenting upon the number of automobile thefts and the petty crime which seems prevalent at the present time. He said that the majority of the young lads who are falling into the hands of the police with increasing frequency come from good homes. Some of the recent offenders have been high school students.

Are Plumbers, Too In Big Combine?

COST OF LIVING COMMISSIONER McFALL SAYS THAT THEY ARE.

Ottawa, July 22.—That an elaborate combine is responsible for advancing prices in all kinds of sanitary and plumbing supplies is the statement in an interview with the Cost of Living Commissioner, Dr. McFall who has prepared evidence which, in his opinion, leads to that conclusion.

"At this time," he said, "when the excessive prices of building materials is working such hardship, the activities of this combine are particularly pernicious."

In Peterborough the Master Plumbers' charges are 90 cents an hour, said to be as high as those which prevail in any city in America. The scale paid the Journeymen is sixty cents an hour.

OBITUARY

JAMES MURRAY

There passed peacefully away at his home in New Liskeard on July 18th, 1919, Mr. James Murray, a former resident of this city, after an illness of four weeks. He was born in Hillsboro, Ireland, in 1842, and came to Canada when three years of age where his mother and the family settled in Otonabee township later moving to Haliburton. In 1882, he was married to Margaret Catherine Beavis, only daughter of the late James and Martha Beavis of Otonabee. He then came to Peterboro, and resided here until 1904, when he and his family moved to Northern Ontario, where he has since lived.

Mr. Murray was an honorary member of L.O.L. 931, having joined the Order when seventeen years of age and continuing active membership ever since, not missing an Orange walk in sixty years.

He was a faithful member of the Methodist Church and the service at the home was conducted by his Pastor, Rev George Lawrence. The last rites of the Orange Order were carried out by the local lodge.

The remains were brought to this city on Monday and were taken to Comstock's Parlors, where many old friends had gathered to pay their last respects to the memory of the deceased and where the service was conducted by Rev. F. E. Malott of Trinity Methodist Church. Interment took place in beautiful Little Lake Cemetery, the remains being borne to their last resting place by life long friends of the deceased.

There are left to mourn his loss besides the widow, one son, Leslie, and one daughter, Martha, who cherish the memory of a kind, loving husband and father whose consistent Christian life made him honored and respected by all those with whom he came in contact.

JAMES E. HOLCOMBE.

The death occurred late last night of James E. Holcombe, 470 Park St. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife, a step son, Mr. L. W. Oke, Ashburnham, three sisters, Mrs. P. W. Reynolds, Mrs. Thos. Donnoghan, and Miss Mary Holcombe, and two brothers in the United States. The funeral will take place from his late residence Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

HIGH PRAISE FOR "Y"

Sir Edward Kemp in his official review of the Canadian forces generally, has given high need of praise of the work of the Canadian as of all "Y's," and pointso ut that the organization which attended to both the material and spiritual needs of the men at the front faced almost insuperable difficulties with that resource which has won admiration on all sides.

BUILD THEIR OWN HOUSES

Twelve Toronto young men are given credit for forming a novel plan for beating out high labor costs in house contruction. They all want houses and can't aoffrd present labor prices, so they formed an association, including one plumber, one electrician, painters, carpenters and bricklayers. In their spare time they are going to build houses for each other. The first permit taken out by the association is one for a $2,700 house on Ashland avenue, near Coxwell.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE LEO. LYNCH

VICTIM OF DROWNING ACCIDENT AT HASTINGS WAS BURIED YESTERDAY.

(Special to The Review.)

Hastings, July 22.—A sad drowning accident occurred here on Saturday evening whereby Mr. Leo Lynch lost his life. A party of four, consisting of Messrs. Walter Turner, Geo. Stevenson, H. Lambert and Leo Lynch had gone up the river in a yacht landing at Fowlds' cottage where the afternoon was spent. In the evening while pulling out from the shore, where there was a great bed of weeds, Mr. Lynch, who was using a pike pole to push the yacht from the weeds, was unfortunate enough to drop into the water unobserved by the rest of the men, who were standing with their backs to him at the time. Mr. Turner on hearing the splash, looked around and exclaimed "Boys, Lynch is in the water!" The men then did their utmost to push the yacht back to the scene of the accident, but the engine, not being working, they found it difficult to manage the boat.

Upon arriving at the place they used every available means to locate the unfortunate man, but their efforts were unsuccessful. They then went to shore and summoned help from the near-by farmers, also phoned to the village and soon several men were on the scene. A hasty search was made and the body was found among the weeds.

The remains was brought down by Dr. Stewart and placed in Mr. Howard's undertaking rooms and later conveyed to Mr. Lynch's late residence.

The funeral was held on Monday morning to the R. C. Church where service was held and afterwards the body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Deceased, who was only 33 years of age, leaves to mourn his untimely demise, a sorrowing wife and one little girl about two and a half years of age, who have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

The negro race are accredited with sensitiveness in regard to their color in contrast with the whites, but one colored man with Polack's big shows is evidently an exception to the rule. ALL MINERS AT COBALT WENT OUT ON STRIKE AT NOON HOUR TO-DAY

Manager Refused Proposal for a Board of Conciliation to Settle Dispute.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cobalt, July 23.—As threatened for some time and definitely decided upon last Sunday, miners of the Cobalt camp generally went on strike at noon today, after the refusal of the mine managers to consent to the proposal of Senator Robertson, Minister of Labor, for a board of conciliation to adjust the grievances of the men regarding wages, working hours and conditions.

This afternoon all the mines in the camp are affected, although some of them may keep their pumps going by steam. A parade of the strikers is called for this evening. The street railway, power and light services are being operated as usual and municipal and company officials are conferring as to the continuance of these public utilities, which the strike threatens to disrupt. So far as the miners' walkout is concerned, neither side is swaying toward a settlement, according to official reports.

Pleased with Vote

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 23.—All newspapers, excepting those distinctly hostile to the government, comment today upon the great success of Premier Clemenceau when he won the vote of confidence in the chamber of deputies yesterday. Some papers make the point that the result shows that the vote on Friday, in which the government was in the minority, was not aimed at the government, but was intended to obtain a more energetic economic policy designed to end the high cost of living, which it was declared threatened to paralyze the country. The papers express pleasure that Premier Clemenceau had pledged himself to consult the country soon through the coming elections.

James McIntyre, mail carrier on the Brantford-Burtch route for 27 years, is dead.

LENINE WANTS PEACE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 23.—A Polsheviki delegation has arrived at Kissineff, with an offer of peace to the Commander of the Roumanian Dniester troops on behalf of Nikolai Lenine, Bolshevik Premier, according to a Berlin Government wireless despatch.

Lenine offers to cede Bessarabia to Roumania on condition that Roumania shall prohibit Ukranian citizens and bands of Admiral Kolchak, head of the all-Russian Government in Omsk, from crossing the Roumanian frontier. An armistice, to last eight days has been concluded on the Bessarabian front and the declaration has gone to the Roumanian headquarters.

Japanees Say There Was no Compromise

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 23.—The Japanese delegation to the Peace Conference today issued a denial of the assertion that the Shantung settlement in the German peace treaty was in exchange for the withdrawal of the Japanese contention regarding the racial clause in the League of Nations' Covenant.

TEN PERSONS SHOT IN BERLIN RIOTS

MEETING OF RADICALS WAS BROKEN BY THE GOVERNMENT FORCES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, July 23.—Ten persons were shot during the disorders which attended the breaking up of a Majority Socialist meeting by Communists and Spartacans here Monday. Those attending the meeting, which was held in the Trades Union building, attempted to lynch the man who fired the shots, but he was saved by his helpers, who were in the building.

WELSH MINERS REFUSE TO JOIN STRIKE MOVEMENT IN YORKSHIRE

That is Most Hopeful Feature of Situation To-day—Sir Eric Geddes Will Protect Naval Men Sent to Work Pumps to Save Mines

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 23.—The most hopeful feature of the coal strike situation is the decision of the Welsh miners at a conference at Cardiff not to join the Yorkshire movement. There was no great accession of strength to the strike movement today. The men on strike total about 275 thousand, Yorkshire, Derbyshire, Nottingham and Monmouth being the counties mainly affected.

Sir Eric Geddes, Minister without portfolio, who on Monday was appointed a commissioner to settle the strike, is at Leeds, and according to Government statements, will confine himself to affording protection to men willing to work at the pumps and will not interfere in any way with the actual strike movement. The strikers, however, appear to be in a rather bad mood and seem to fear that troops will follow the naval men in an attempt to break the strike. The conference of the Triple Alliance, which will be held at Westminister tomorrow, may have an influence on the situation. The conference will be followed by a meeting of the executive of the Miners' Federation at which the situation will be discussed.

Shipping Tied Up.

Liverpool, July 23.—The strike among the dockers, which broke out here early this week, has resulted in bringing about chaos in the arrangements for handling more than two hundred ships at this port, their sailings being cancelled or indefinitely postponed. The steamer Scotian with two thousand passengers was ready to sail for Montreal yesterday but was unable to leave.

The Adriatic, due to leave on Thursday for New York, and the Orduna scheduled to sail for New York on Saturday, have had their sailings indefinitely postponed. It seems unlikely that these two liners will be able to leave on time and perhaps not until the strike is settled. There were no apparent prospects today of an speedy settlement of the difficulty.

WORK ON NEW HUNTER ST. BRIDGE STARTS IN FEW DAYS

ALD. HARRY PHELAN
Chairman Hunter Street Bridge Committee, and of the Board of Works.

Some of Plant Already Here---Contract Signed, Sealed and Delivered---Work for From One Hundred to Hundred and Fifty Men---Will Take Eighteen Months to Build---Alderman Phelan Feels Relieved.

The City's contract with the Russell-Townsend Co., of Toronto, for building the new Hunter street high-level bridge has been signed, sealed and delivered. H. T. Navin, of the contracting firm, arrived in the city last evening, bearing with him a marked cheque for $10,000 in guarantee for the proper execution of the work. He communicated with Mayor Duncan, who then signed the Contract at once, on the eve of his leaving this morning for Toronto. His Worship was anxious to get this vexed question clinched at last, and not to cause further delay by his going out of town.

This morning City Clerk Armstrong attached his official signature to this document, the signing of which a large portion of the community has awaited quite keenly, always in fear of some unlooked for intervention cropping up.

Much Plant Here Now

Two car loads of bridge building plant and machinery reached Peterborough this morning, via the Grand Trunk ready to unload, and Mr. Navin states that work on the bridge will start within a few days. From 100 to 150 men will be employed most of the time for eighteen months, and Peterborough help, at that, of course, if obtainable.

Mr. Navin is registered at the Empress Hotel, and Charles Townsend, the company's superintending engineer, will reach this city tonight. Russell-Townsend Co., engineers are consulting with consulting engineer Barber in Toronto, and planning proceedings.

A Great Work

Apart from satisfaction at landing this big contract Mr. Navin and his partners are delighted at the opportunity of building this structure the centre, 235 ft. span of which will be certainly the longest concrete arch in Canada, if not in America. However, it is optional with Council whether they substitute this big concrete span with one of steel or not. And Mr. Navin declared today that in his opinion, a steel arch would come considerably cheaper. But he hopes and expects cost results up to the time of constructing the centre span will warrant building it of concrete which would enhance the whole structure's beauty.

Traffic as Usual

The public may rest content, says Mr. Navin that traffic will be continued over the present bridge all this summer, with a temporary access thereto; and that even when the centre span is being built, the present bridge will be available for use. The contention is to move it temporarily, further north or south, as circumstances allow.

Ald. Phelan a Happy Man

Ald. Phelan, the indefatigable chairman of the City's Special Bridge Committee and Board of Works is a happy man today. He feels, he says, as though a ton load had been removed from his shoulders and they are pretty broad shoulders at that. Night after night, the past six months, in sessions long and short—mainly long, he has presided over a committee who could not agree definitely on any one tender or plan, or principal of tender, and whose three recommendations for the acceptance of tenders only fell to the ground eventually from one cause or another. Tempted, naturally, to throw up the chairmanship in disgust, he still stuck, optimistic that with extraordinary patience some sort of an agreement would be reached, work commenced and unemployed engaged this summer after all. And patience, and diplomacy perhaps, won out.

Chairman Ald. Phelan, in his position, had to, in the public eye, assume the onus of the bridge proposition and he felt keenly his position, and always advised conscientiously. He consistently advocated a lump sum contract, but in the absence of an acceptable one to the majority of the committe, he switched to the next best proposition which would pass council, rather than see the bridge proposition postponed for another year. Ald. Phelan also the first, advocated plans for both a steel and a concrete centre arch, so that steel, if cheaper, could enter into the construction, if advisable. And the Russell-Townsend contract allows for this. He now has the satisfaction of, in unity with other tenacious colleagues of his also willing to switch their vote in the interests of the people as a whole, realizing that the Hunter Street High-Level Bridge has now advanced beyond the dream stage to the realms of construction really.

FRENCH PREMIER IS STRONGER THAN EVER

DEPUTIES GIVE HIS VOTE OF CONFIDENCE BY BIG MAJORITY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, July 23.—Premier Clemenceau, who won for his Cabinet a vote of confidence late yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies, emerged from the conflict stronger than the test vote showed. The final vote of confidence on a resolution by Deputy Simyan approving the Government's declaration of policy, showed confidence in the Government by 289 to 176, a majority of 113. The first vote, which was on a demand for priority for the resolution of Deputy Chumet, gave the Premier a majority of only 91.

REVIEW WANT ADS. MOST SURELY PAY

TWENTY-FIVE CENT NOTICE RECOVERED LOST PURSE AND MONEY.

To lose a purse and find it again after three days seems most improbable but such was the experience of a lady visitor to Peterborough recently. This lady arrived arrived in town last Friday and was unfortunate enough to lose her purse containing a sum of money, on the street shortly after reaching the city. She ordered a small twenty-five cent advertisement inserted in The Review and this morning a young gentleman returned the purse to this office, he having seen the advertisement. This bears out the argument that Review want ads pay.

Race Track Betting Is Still Prospect

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, July 23.—Government authorities are not inclined to seriously consider the prospect of race track betting starting immediately, notwithstanding the expressed opinions of Sir Allen Aylesworth, former Minister of Justice that such would be legal on the proclamation of peace. It is felt here that racing associations will make no move toward betting for some time.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 23.—Troops were moved today into the Yorkshire mining district. Sir Eric Geddes explained that this action was taken to protect the navy men engaged in pumping operations in the mines.

CANADIAN WOOLLENS LTD., START WITH NO BONDED INDEBTEDNESS

EX-ALD. EDGAR WORTH,
manager of operations of Canadian Woollens Limited in Peterborough.

No Mortgages Will be Placed Ahead of Preference Shares—Special Redemption Features.

Toronto, July 23.—There are several unique features about the Canadian Woollens Limited issue of $1,750,000 7 per cent. cumulative preferred shares now being offered to the public. In the first place the company is starting operation with no bonded indebtedness standing in front of the preference stock; and, moreover, covenant has been entered into that no mortgages will be placed ahead of the preference shares unless with the consent of more than two-thirds of the issued preferred shares. In the second place a sinking fund of 2 per cent. on preferred share issue a year will be established commencing with the 1st of July, 1921, and this will provide for the redemption of a goodly proportion of the preference shares, and accumulated profits should easily provide for the balance. Redemption can take place after the 1st of July, 1922, by drawings at 110 or in the open market at a price not in excess of 110.

$3,500,000 Capitalization.

The total authorized capitalization of the company is $3 500,000 made up equally of preferred and common $100 shares. The aggregate earnings of the Auburn Woollen Company, the Standard Woollen Mills Company and the Bonner-Worth Company, the three firms now amalgamated under the name of Canadian Woollens Limited, have averaged nearly a third of a million dollars a year for the past five and a half years, or over two and a half times the total annual preferred dividend on the present capitalization.

Strong Directorate.

An unusually strong board of directors is associated with the company, Mr. I. Bonner, of Paris, is general manager of Penmans Limited; Mr. A. O. Dawson, of Montreal, vice-president and managing-director of the Canadian Cottons Limited; F. R. Sweeney, of Hamilton, president of the Zimmerman Reliance Limited; Mr. J. D. Perry, of Toronto, vice-president of Barrymore Cloth Company, and Messrs. J. B. Ferguson, W. K. George and F. B Hayes are well known in connection with the development of important Canadian industries.

Orders in Excess.

The organizers of the amalgamation estimate that net profits will be considerably larger under the merger as present orders are a great deal in excess of all previous records, and the quite considerable saving in administration expenses will increase the surplus available for shareholders. The preference share are being offered at par and carrying a 25 per cent. bonus on common stock. A syndicate made up of the Canada Bond Corporation, Ferguson & Ormsby and Hanson Bros. are handling the issue.

ASSAULTED SMALL BOY AGE 10 YRS.

PAYS $2.00 FINE AND $3.10 COSTS INTO POLICE TREASURY.

Sam Dancy appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning charged with assaulting Melleville Foley, aged 10. Mr. Dancy pleaded not guilty.

The mother of the boy was brought into the witness box and swore that she had sent her son for water to a pump at the back of her lot and adjoining that occupied by Mr. Dancy. Her son returned home crying without either pail or water, and with a red ear. He told her that he had rinsed out the pale and pumped a fresh one. In this pail there was a worm, so in spite of the demand from Dancy, he threw it out on the ground. Then Dancy snatched the pail from him and hit him on the ear with the back of his hand. He came to his mother crying, and she immediately went to see Dancy. She asked him if he had slapped her boy and he replied that he did and would do it again. She returned home with the pail without saying anything more to him.

The story of the boy was the same as that told by his mother.

Dancy pleaded not guilty, saying he had only pushed the boy away from the pump to stop him from making a mud hole.

The magistrate took the view that he had no business to interfere, and besides a man should not hit a small boy, because he could not tell the weight of his blow. Dancy payed his fine of $2 and $3.10 costs.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23, 1919

CIVIC HANDICAPS.

THE MAN WHO DOES NOT advertise the pursuits in which he is engaged stands like a dead wall between his business and the sun of prosperity. While he perseveres in this course the chances are that he injures no one but himself.

But when a number of such men band themselves into a trust, all solemnly obligating themselves to avoid printer's ink as they would the smallpox, then such an aggregation becomes a dead weight fastened to the neck of the community that affords the members living space. No city can prosper where secret conclaves of business men hold dark lantern sessions to block the wheels of progress. The one inevitable destiny under such circumstances is commercial perdition.

It is true that it takes all kinds of people to make a world. It is just as true that while some are leaders and preceptors of their fellows, there are others useful only in the role of terrible examples.

ONE WAY TO BOOST PETERBOROUGH.

THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE recently put on a film giving in pictorial form a history of the little town of Wallaceburg, in Western Ontario, its past, its present, with an optimistic forecast as to its future. Wallaceburg is in the centre of the greatest sugar beet producing section of the Dominion. These moving pictures were prepared at the expense of the business men of that community, a community whose welfare is linked up with that of the contiguous farmers. The film will be shown in one or more of the picture theatres in every town and city of Canada that boasts of such an institution. The public spirited business men and residents of the little sugar beet centre will receive their reward many times over.

Some weeks ago "Rob Roy," a well-known writer on agricultural topics, had a long article in the Sunday World, describing the alsike industry in Halton county, with especial reference to the small fortune cleaned up by William Cook, one of his neighbors, who devotes considerable acreage to the raising of this crop. Mr. Cook has, since that article appeared, received letters from all over Canada asking him to name his price for his farm. Prospective buyers have come all the way from Montreal to see for themselves, and, like the Queen of Sheba, admitted that the half had not been told. It certainly pays to advertise, the silence conspiracies among some of the dealers in Peterborough to the contrary notwithstanding.

The managers of the Toronto Exhibition every year take one hundred moving pictures of scenes at the Fair. These are sent to the United States and make the circuit of the moving picture theatres from one end of the country to the other. This is a cheap and popular method of reaching the public, and thousands of American visitors attend the big Fair every year, visitors who but for the pictures would never have heard of the annual event.

What Wallaceburg, the little town with the sugar beet fields its one hope of prosperity, has done, Peterborough can accomplish on a far larger scale and with even more practical results. It is unfortunate that the members of the Government party taking pictures of the Trent Canal were not met by members of the Board of Trade during their brief visit here Monday. They could have been taken to the leading places of interest in the city to make pictures which would have become part of the Government's stock in trade soon to be placed on exhibition. The Quaker Oats Company's plant, one of the greatest of its kind in Canada, the C. G. E., any of the leading manufacturing outfits in this city, are worthy of a place on the films.

Last Saturday a commercial traveller from Hamilton, a man who has travelled through Western Ontario for the past ten years, representing one of the largest stove firms in the country, was the guest of a local resident. His host, thinking he would be interested in such an establishment, took him to the O'Neill shoe store on George street. It was a holiday, but Manager Kidd happened to be there at the time and showed his interested visitor through every part of the store. The Hamilton man was amazed. In all his travels he declared there was no such retail store establishment to be found anywhere else, and he left Peterborough with an exalted idea of its commercial importance in the line in which he is specially interested.

What the management of the Toronto Exhibition have done and are doing, the directors of the local Fair can do likewise. Why not use the moving picture theatres as a medium for advertising to supplement the use of printer's ink in the home papers. Local films will reach millions of people. Put on the circuit, these films will be shown in 15,000 picture theatres in Canada and approximately the same number in the United States. What is an outside manufacturer likely to think of Peterborough as a manufacturing centre if he is given a view of such a plant as the Quaker Oats, or is made familiar with the city's priceless possession with regard to power?

Let Peterborough break through this crust of silence and assert itself before the world. The man with a gold dollar in his possession is a dead weight in the community unless he invests that money for his individual good, which cannot be achieved without benefiting those around him. The owner of a mine flourishes only when he makes his treasure known. The man who invents a machine profits himself or the public nothing unless he gets his invention on the market. A gift for music is of no avail unless the possessor consents to make melody for his neighbors.

AND WHY NOT?

THE AMERICAN Civil War was over, and the victorious Northern troops, ragged and emaciated from the field, were passing in review before President Lincoln in Washington, prior to being mustered out of the service. One regiment was passing the reviewing stand when its band broke into the tune "Dixie's Land," the national air of the South, the melody that had sustained the valient Southerners in many a bloody and disastrous engagement.

President Lincoln led in the applause that followed when the crowd had recovered from its surprise. Calling a halt in the march, he addressed a few words to the band commending their action. "We conquered that tune with the South," he said; "it is ours now." From that day to this "Dixie" is played everywhere in the North at all military functions, invariably so at the annual decoration of the graves of veterans, to many of whom the famous air meant a dirge.

At the peace celebration in London on Saturday, amid laughter and applause, one of the bands played "The Watch on the Rhine," the national air of Germany. And why not? That tune has been conquered with the Teutonic host and should be prized as one of the greatest trophies of the war.

FROM NO PLACE TO NOWHERE.

ACCORDING TO Mr. R. R. Hall, Sir Adam Beck is considerably like the Grand Trunk Railway Company, being willing and anxious to dispose of the property under his jurisdiction that does not pay, while holding on to the portion that promises a dividend. It cannot be claimed that the Peterborough street railway system, under public ownership for the past two years, has shown any improvement, either in service, in equipment—save in the latter regard by the addition of a couple of bob-tailed cars—or in the matter of extension. It has not, it seems, been on a paying basis, either.

Sir Adam has, however, a sovereign remedy for the latter condition, a remedy which he hesitates to apply himself but which he freely recommends to his prospective purchaser, the city. He would raise the rate until the income balanced the outgo, a method which savors of nothing of the original.

Perhaps it is not low rates so much as lack of patronage that has stumped Sir Adam in the local branch of his public ownership field. A street car system to be popular with the citizens must not only give continuous service, eliminating delays and exasperating transfers so far as possible, but should start some place and proceed somewhere. There must be some objective, and every district must be given a fair show in the arrangements. If the local railway system, for instance, was so arranged as to land the residents at that greatest of all local resorts, Jackson Park, without a series of hop-offs during the trip, if the line ran to Crawford's Grove or to Chemong, patronage during the summer months would increase at least one hundred per cent. Sir Adam Beck's sovereign remedy for present conditions might not then be required.

However, the present situation as regards local transportation is intolerable. Under the present ownership there unfortunately appears little hope for relief. Sir Adam wants to unload his lame ducks upon the city. Probably the Public Utilities Commission could solve the problem. The reputation of that body for successful civic administration is of the highest. They have the confidence of the people. They could at least do no worse than the big commission at Toronto, that in this particular instance has registered and admits a failure.

(Watertown, N. Y., Times.)

The West is keen to see through the ways of the East. A Hutchinson, Kansas, man, recently in Buffalo, saw this sign across the front of a big building: "Methodist Centenary Drive." Immediatly below was another sign: "Dodge Brothers."

NEGROES FLOCKING TO THE NORTH

Every Lynching Down South Means an Exodus of the Race to Promised Land of Safety.

Chicago is a receiving station that connects directly with every town or city where the people conduct a lynching.

"Every time a lynching takes place in a community down south you can depend on it that colored people from that community will arrive in Chicago inside of two weeks," says Secretary Arnold Hill of the Chicago Urban League. "We have seen it happen so often that now whenever we read newspaper despatches of a public hanging or burning in Texas or Mississippi town, we get ready to extend greetings to people from the immediate vicinity at the scene of the lynching. If it is Arkansas or Georgia, where a series of lynchings is going on this week, then you may reckon with certainty that there will be large representations from those states among the colored folks getting off the trains at the Illinois Central Station two or three weeks from today."

Why Negroes Come North

Better jobs, the right to vote and have the vote counted at elections, no Jim Crow cars, less race discrimination and a more tolerant attitude on the part of the whites, equal rights with white people in education—these are among the attractions that keep up the steady movement of colored people from southern districts to the north.

"Opportunity, not alms," is the slogan of the educated, while the same thought come over and over again from the illiterate in their letters, saying, "All we want is a chanst," or, as one spells it, "Let me have a chanch, please."

Hundreds of letters written to The Chicago Defender, the newspaper, and to the Urban league reflect the causes of the migration. Charles Johnston, an investigator for the Carnegie foundation, now a lieutenant overseas with the 803rd infantry, believes the economic motive is foremost. He says:

"There are several ways of arriving at a conclusion regarding the economic forces behind the movement of the colored race northward. The factors might be determined by the amount of unemployment or the extent of poverty. These facts are important, but may or may not account for individual action.

Little Actual Misery

"Except in a few localities of the south there was no actual misery or starvation. Nor is it evident that those who left would have perished from want had they remained. Large numbers of negroes have frequently moved around from state to state and even within the states of the south in search of more remunerative employment. The migrations to Arkansas and Oklahoma were expressions of the economic force.

"A striking feature of the northern migration was its individualism. Motives prompting the thousands of negroes were not always the same, not even in the case of close neighbors. The economic motive was foremost, a desire simply to improve their living standards when opportunity beckoned. A movement to the west or even about the south could have proceeded from the same cause.

"Some of the letters reveal a praiseworthy solicitude for their families on the part of the writers. Other letters are an index to poverty and helplessness of home communities.

"In this type of migration the old order is strangely reversed. Instead of leaving an overdeveloped and overcrowded country for undeveloped new territory, they have left the south, backward as it is in development of its resources, for the highly industrialized north. Out of the letters from the south we listed seventy-nine different occupations among 1,000 persons asking for information and aid. Property holders, impecunious adventurers, tradesmen, entire labor unions, business and professional men, families, boys and girls, all registered against their homes and sought to move."

WIT AND WISDOM

The Doctor Knows.

"I don't like your heart action," the doctor said, applying the stethoscope again. "You have had some trouble with angina pectoris."

"You're partly right, doctor," said the young man sheepishly; "only that isn't her name."

Author Too Particular.

The Manager: "I haven't noticed it."

The Star: "Why, he objects to my wearing diamond rings in the scene where I pawn my hat to buy food for the children."

Cheap Bargains.

"My husband has the queerest ideas of economy."

"Indeed."

"Why, he actually seems to think I could save money by staying away from the spring bargain sales."

The Only Help.

When the railroads were tied up with the worst glut in history, one severe winter, one train was fifty-seven hours late, and a passenger became wearied.

"Get me something so that I can figure out when I will get to New York," he said to the colored porter.

"Yes, sah, I'll get you a time-table, sah," replied the porter.

Hard For Chaos.

The wholesale grocer was carefully explaining matters to the commercial traveller whom he had recently engaged, and the C.T. was making himself as nice as he could.

"Mr. Binks," said the boss, "your predecessor was not up to his job. His affairs were all tangled up. He was a muddler."

"Yes, sir," replied the new hand meekly, as though he was sorry, but couldn't help it.

"That being the case, Mr. Binks," said the wholesaler pompously, "it is up to you to get order out of chaos."

For a moment the commercial looked puzzled. Then a beautiful smile spread itself across his countenance.

"Sir," said he, eagerly, "I don't happen to know Mr. Chaos, but I'll get an order out of him, if I have to go and live with him."

The life story of Sir Marcus Samuel, who has purchased from the Earl of Berkeley for the sum of $25,000,000 a parcel of the fashionable residential section of London, known as Berkeley Square, furnishes one of the real romances of the business world. Sir Marcus, in his early days, kept a little shop in one of the poorer quarters of the British metropolis, where he made and sold for a shilling or two, ornamental boxes made of shells from the sea-shore. Later, he invested his savings in oil, made money and started a company called the "Shell," thus identifying his big new ventre with his original struggling business. Since those days he has accumulated a fortune of many millions and has been honored with a baronetcy. And all from selling shells from the sea-shore—mixed with an abundance of brains and energy.

TO-DAY'S STORY

(By James J. Montague)

The great American Indian is not, like some folks, lightly to be thrust from his purpose by such trifles as penal statutes. When the west went dry the noble red man didn't worry. He had to have booze or he didn't feel like fighting, and if he didn't feel like fighting all the light in a bright world died for him.

So he got the booze. He got it at drug stores, where he found that booze by any other name would do the work if it had the proper percentage of alcohol.

He didn't get substitute booze or disguised booze or bootleg booze. He got perfumery! Yes, sir, just perfumery. He had learned that a lot of delicately scented fluids had a kick in them like a muzzle loading rifle.

So poor Lo, having in his pocket his allotment or rent money, bought lavishly of sweet smelling waters and got lavishly drunk.

Now, the white man is different. Parched though his palate may be, he draws the line at perfumery, furniture polish, shellac, varnish and the like. But he, too, is resourceful. If he cannot buy booze he can make it—or thinks he can.

"What the thunder do I care about prohibition?" said my neighbor Judson one afternoon in early July. "See this package? Know what it is? I'll bet you don't. It's the makings of a still.

"What do I do with it? Why, I make my liquor with it, that's all. It's the easiest thing in the world. When I want brandy, I put in peaches and grapes, light the lamp, say presto a couple of times and when I turn on the tap out flows the drink. For whisky I put in grain—oats for Scotch, rye for rye, corn for bourbon, etc., and she costs just about a cent a drink. Oh! I guess I don't know anything, I don't."

That night there gleamed a light in an attic window of his house, and now and then I would hear Judson rambling about the cellar and calling up the stairs to ask Mrs. Judson what in the deuce she did with those cans of peaches.

Next morning Judson issued gayly forth from his home.

"She's a wonder," he told me. "All she's got to do is to set—just set for five hours and when the boys come up for that game of draw tonight they will have no complaints about my hospitality. And to think of these poor suckers that have been buying it at mining camp prices and storing it, when they can make it themselves as easy as a fire cracker makes a noise."

The boys assembled at Judson's for the poker party. The night passed and part of the day and they remained within his house. It looked like a good party. At 5 p.m. the family doctor drove up. At 5.15 two other doctors arrived. At 6 came a specialist, at 7 a boy with an oxygen tank.

By that time the neighbors had begun to take notice—especially the children. There was a throng about the Judson residence. We could hear the tread of hurrying feet through the hallways, the short sharp commands of the doctors and the low moan of the sufferers.

By 4 in the morning the crowd outside had dwindled. At 6 the specialists left, followed shortly after by all the others, save the family doctor. The last medico out said that the boys were, he hoped all out of danger, but that they had been very near to the valley of the shadow.

Yesterday I saw Judson on the street. He was pale and wan, but able to walk.

"Well, Jud," I said, "how's the still?"

"Oh., darn the still," he replied. "I've decided to be a good game guy and obey the law."

WOMEN REFUSE TO TIP THE WAITERS

New York restaurants and lunch rooms patronized wholly of in part by women are said to experience far more difficulty than other establishments of the kind in securing and retaining waiters or waitresses. Several explanations have been given, but the two chief reasons seem to be that the women patrons are far more difficult to please than the men—and the women don't tip. Even with large placards on the wall saying "No tips," a man will leave a dime behind him. He simply can't help it. He hasn't the courage not to. But the majority of women do not hesitate to leave the table without placing a gratuity under the plate. Minus the customary tips, the waiter who serves in an establishment patronized by women has only his small wages for his work. Consequently, he accepts employment in such a place only when he cannot find a position in a men's restaurant.

HER DAUGHTER WAS SAVED FROM OPERATION

Mrs. Wells of Petersburg Tells How.

Petersburg, Va.—"For two years my daughter suffered from a weakness and pains in her right side; at times she was so bad she could not do any work. For two years she was attended by the best physicians here, and both agreed that she would have to be operated on. I suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at first she refused to take it, but finally consented. From the very beginning it helped her, and now she is entirely well, and telling everybody how much good it has done her."—Mrs. W. D. WELLS, 226 North Adams Street, Petersburg, Va.

If every girl who suffers as Miss Wells did, or from irregularities, painful periods, backache, sideache, dragging down pains, inflammation or ulceration would only give this famous root and herb remedy a trial they would soon find relief from such suffering.

For special advice women are asked to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of forty years experience is at your service.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

(In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general. All phases of store management—buying, accounting, advertising and retail salesmanship—will be dealt with, not theoretically, but by descriptions of methods actually in use by successful merchants.)

ONE GIRL'S VOICE WORTH $50,000 A YEAR

What is a "telephone voice" worth? There is one which is worth $50,000 a year in sales to Bonwit, Teller & Co's, Philadelphia store and several which range up to this in value. They all belong to women, and their names are shrouded in secrecy.

Exactly what is a "telephone voice?"

P. J. Walsh, manager of the store, explains it this way: "Physically it is a voice which sounds pleasant and distinct on the phone. It is a voice which carries a smile with it over the wire. Very few good speaking voices measure up to the standard of the telephone voice. They may be softly modulated, distinct, appealing, sympathetic and everything a voice should be, but some little trick of the wire robs them of their individuality, and they become commonplace. A very small percentage retain these characteristics.

"On the other hand, a voice which does not seem at all out of the ordinary, when the speaker is facing one, takes on the desired qualities when heard over the wire.

"But the valuable telephone voice means more than all this. It means a high degree of selling ability on the part of the owner, who can rely only on her voice, who can bring to bear no charm of manner, no attractive appearance. It means a quick brain, and an intuitive ear, which must make up for the lack of observation of the eye in following the trend of the customer's thought and mood. It means tact in the highest degree, for the customer may be in far from a buying frame of mind when she picks up the receiver. It means appreciation and memory of the individual customer's habits and tastes.

How It Is Used.

"In putting the $50,000 voice to work, the owner does nothing so crude as running down a general list of prospects. She rarely calls up women who are not already patrons of the store. When she does it is because she has special information which leads her to believe that the sale is pretty certain. It is rather a question of increasing the volume of purchases by those who already are customers of the store.

"For instance, Miss Fifty-thousand reads the society columns of the daily papers, and learns that Mrs. Cadmalader is about to stage a triumph as a gracious hostess, or that she is on the point of going to Palm Beach as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Wexel. Then Miss Fifty-thousand runs through her card index and her memory to put herself in the mood of Mrs. Cadmalader's tastes and preferences in gowns. Then she runs through her exclusive models which have just been received or which are on the way and she makes mental pictures to herself of Mrs. Cadmalader gowned in the few best suited to her complexion and the occasion.

"Then, and not until then, she goes to the telephone. She tells Mrs. Cadmalader who is calling. Here again is an important link in the chain. Mrs. Cadmalader knows who she is. It isn't like a stranger calling up. Miss Fifty-thousand has seen to all that before she ever put Mrs. Cadmalader on her list, upon the occasions of that lady's visits to the store.

"From there on it's just straight good salesmanship, with specific interest in Mrs. Cadmalader's activity of the moment, coupled with friendly courtesy. Miss Fifty-thousand mentions the affair and she mentions the gowns. She describes them as only one woman can to another, and may she not send these four for Mrs. Cadmalader to look over at her leisure? There is no obligation to buy at all. The store is only too glad to perform this little courtesy, even if Mrs. Cadmalader is only curious to see these Parisian models. The store feels repaid just to have her judgment on them.

Really a Buyer for Customer.

"Miss Fifty-thousand has succeeded in building up a peculiar and very profitable relationship between herself and the store's good customers. Her attitude is really more that of a purchasing secretary than of a seller. She never indulges in the slightest thing that remotely suggests the forcing of a sale. She's just enthusiastic about giving them the opportunity to buy things which she knows they like."

That is why Bonwit, Teller & Telter Co. do $50,000 more a year in gowns and dresses than they would without the telephone, plus the telephone voice, plus their records of customers' tastes.

DISCOVERED "SELF-SERVE" BY ACCIDENT.

Long before the first proceteria or cafeteria was started, Lester Turner, a young man operating a shoe store in Brazil, Ind., stumbled across the self-serve idea entirely by accident.

Turner was in business with his uncle. The older man had operated a store in Brazil for a good many years and, being a merchant of the old school, insisted on holding on to stocks which should have been turned into cash at reduced prices.

When his uncle retired, Turner took an inventory, piling the older and less attractive shoes in stacks at the back of the store. Then he advertised a special sale of these shoes and the Brazilians came in droves. He and his clerks simply could not handle the crowds, so he told a number of the customers to pick out shoes that fit them out of the boxes and barrels as he was entirely too busy to find the right sizes for them.

That night he and his clerks sorted the shoes by sizes and marked the prices on the soles. When the crowd gathered the next morning they were requested, by means of hastily prepared signs, to pick out their own purchases and kindly to return to their proper boxes any shoes that did not fit.

The sale went so well that Turner decided to establish a department at the rear of the store for the handling of job-lots, reserving the front of the store. Later the self-serve department was moved across the alley, where it may be found today the first of the "eria" stores in the country.

CUSTOMERS CAN WATCH THE "MARK-DOWN MAN"

Davidson Brothers in Sioux Falls, N.D., introduced a decided novelty in reduction sales recently. They advertised, "The Mark Down Man will visit each section of the store, starting at opening hour in the bargain basement and continuing his trip through the store, visiting each department in turn till the close of the business day."

The "Mark Down Man" proved to be a real live fellow, dressed in the height of fashion, silk hat, frock coat, patent leather shoes and the rest of it, who, blue pencil in hand, visited each section and reduced goods before the very eyes of the crowd which followed him about, eager to share in the activity.

The picture of the Mark Down Man was published in all the papers so shoppers would recognize him. The store reports an increase of 125 per cent. in sales the first day of the "Mark Down Man's" work.

BRIDGING A TRADE GAP

A pharmacist in a Stillwater, Minn. found one of his most profitable forms of advertising to be plain tally cards one-and-one-half inches by three, punched with a hole in the top. On the back was printed his business card with a catchy phrase or two. During last winter he distributed between 3000 and 4000 for use at card parties.

MAKES AUTHORS HELP

To introduce his book department, the owner of a New York drug shop performed a rather daring stunt by writing to a dozen popular authors asking how they came to write their first novel. Authors dislike publicity about as much as a small boy dislikes strawberry jam, so out of a dozen he received seven replies. These were mounted on cards and conspicuously placed in his window, together with some unusual arrangement of the six best sellers.

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE DEFENDS HIS RECENT DECISION IN POLICE COURT

Takes Issue With Rev. Mr. Mackenzie, Of Lakefield, and Says That Whipping of Two Boys Was the Best Remedy That Could be Applied to Their Case.

Magistrate Dumble has addressed the following open letter to Rev. Mr. McKenzie of Lakefield, who recently published a letter in The Review criticizing the Magistrate's action in sentencing two small boys to be whipped by a policeman.

Reverend and Dear Sir:

I have read in the Peterborough Review a letter purporting to have been written by you in which you intemperately refer to a judgment delivered by me recently in the Police Court.

You are a Clergyman and an experienced conductor and teacher of a Boys' Boarding School at Lakefield, and no doubt, experienced in the ways of young boys.

Two boys, Samuel Dewhurst, aged 10 and Findlay Woodcock, aged 7 years were charged with breaking into the shop of Robt. Fair, and stealing therefrom, sums of money on two separate occasions.

The boys went to the rear of the shop. On one occasion they smashed a large plate glass window, worth $50; at [illegible] another occasion they broke the plate glass in the door. Once they entered by the broken window, and the next time by putting a hand through the broken glass in the door, unlocked it and entered.

On the breaking of the glass by four blows from an iron pipe in the hands of the small boy on the instruction of the larger boy, the larger boy says he turned his back so as not to see.

These boys, though young, are bold and daring and have robbed a number of places. Dewhurst is a son of a widow. Woodcock's father lives here.

The charge was fully proved and no part of it denied.

In such cases I never have sent little boys to jail. The parents are responsible to make good for financial damage. The plate glass in Fair's door, which they smashed was worth $50. I adjudged that the parents do pay $30.00 as compensation; Mrs. Dewhurst, the widow, $12.00; the father of Findlay Woodcock $18.00, no costs.

I consulted with the parents and suggested that I could not send the boys to jail but that they must be stopped in their criminal career; that I could not order them to be whipped, but that if they consented and wanted the boys whipped there was a constable on the staff who would judiciously apply the cat of nine tails and that that would be the best thing to be done, as I could not reach their conscience.

The smart of the cat would give them a lesson they would never forget and might save the boys.

Both parents approved the suggestion. Both stood by and watched the proceeding. The mother of the big boy, Mr Dewhurst, expressed a fear that the cat was not being applied vigorously enough. The law does not allow whipping and I never adjudge whipping, but I approve of it and recommend it.

I think the law is at fault. In all good English schools the whip is used.

Arnold of Rugby approved of whipping and whipped accordingly and I have no doubt the Reverend Mr Mackenzie finds it necessary to use a cane occasionally.

I have been 36 years on the Bench and I am satisfied that wayward criminal boys of tender years cannot be saved by imprisonment, and should not be imprisoned. I never sent one to jail. Judicious whipping is decidedly the best medicine for boys and I have seen the best results from it.

These little boys were young criminals on the high road to destruction. My hope is that the steps taken in their case may deter them from further crime until they get old enough to realize that a clean virtuous life is the best life.

The criminal law does not provide for whipping save in certain serious offences and I have never adjudged the whipping of boys yet. When satisfied that the whip is the best remedy under the circumstances, I suggest it to the parents and if they request it I allow a taws, kept at the station to be administered by a prudent, considerate constable, in the presence of the parent or guardian. In this case the parents both readily consented and they stood by and watched the operation. One of them suggested to the constable to lay on with more force, and I have since learned that the parents before the trial went to Adjutant Buntin of the Salvation Army and asked him to request me to impose whipping. I have followed this course for many years with happiest results. I believe in the whipping for juvenile offenders.

The State of New Jersey has restored its whipping post and stocks and as a result the hobos and tramps give the State a wide berth.

Many parents have so little control of themselves that they are not fit to whip a dog—but the deliberate application by an officer of the law of the cat, delivered without temper, on the shoulders of boys will be remembered when the moral lesson delivered by the Magistrate is never taken to heart and speedily forgotten. I have never had a complaint from parents because a son was whipped. I think it has saved many a boy from a bad life and I would urge the men who make our laws to legalize whipping of boys, by officers of the law, so that it may be done under the supervision of the Chief of Police. It will save many a boy from the Penitentiary.

It is suggested that Peterborough needs a Juvenile Court. The things constantly said in the Toronto papers about the Toronto juvenile court will deter all outside places from trying that experiment. At Peterborough we have a home, under supervision of the Children's Aid Society, well administered. We have a most efficient agent of the Children's Aid Society, and the Magistrate is in full sympathy with its operations.

At Mimico there is an excellent Reformatory for boys, to which I have sent many, but it must be remembered that not the best boys but the worst are sent there, and there is danger that a boy may come out worse than he went in. It is useless to send a boy there for a short time and if one is sent for say 3 years, the cost to the Municipality which sends the boy would be $500 or $600. The Municipalities don't like this. I may add that a long knowledge of the Mimico Establishment causes me to approve of it as a most admirable establishment, well conducted.

I ask that your readers may carefully read the report made to the Court by Detective Newhall, regarding the two boys and settle in their own minds what they, if in my place would have done with these boys. I was for long years a Sunday School teacher and a Superintendent. I am long past my three score and ten years. I sent out to the world my six sons, none of whom had ever a welt on his back, and never shamed me. I have done my duty before God and man and I feel that the school teacher at Lakefield was hasty in writing his intemperate letter to the Peterborough Review, from which you quote. I never fined the children. I ordered the parents to make compensation for $30.00 part of the cost of replacing the plate glass, which is estimated at $50.06 and in default of payment, imprisonment for 10 days, of the parents—not the children.

I am, sir,
Your obedient servant,
D. W. DUMBLE, P.M.

Report of Detective Newhall

Re. Samuel Wewhurst, age 10.

I beg to report that Samuel Dewhurst, age 10, makes the following statement in the presence and hearing of Findlay Woodcock and his older brother.

I am 10 years old and live on Simcoe Street. On Sunday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, July 6th, I and Findlay Woodcock, broke into the Peterborough Floral Co.'s store on Water street. We had previously broken into there last Sunday afternoon by breaking a square of glass and crawled in through the opening—so this time we found a piece of wood over the hole. Findlay kicked it out. I told him to do so. We took all the coppers we could find in the till and a lot of packets of seeds some of which we scattered on the floor. The first time we were in we also got some coppers. After we had done this job we went to the rear of Robt. Soden's Store, Hunter Street. I told Findlay to break a large glass that was in the door. He got an iron pipe that was behind an auto. With it he smashed the glass. I put my hand through the hole and opened the door. When in we stole about $1.80 each, a lot of pencils, books, rubbers and other things (all those things were on the table) —then we went to the Dominion Police Office, Simcoe street. We had to climb over some gates and when over we found a key in the back door. We went in there, but did not take anything only the key, which I gave back to Mr. McBride. We then went behind Perkins Ince & Co.'s warehouse and buried all the stuff and money that we had stolen. We showed it to the Police this morning. Then we went home to tea and after tea we went into the Oriental Hotel, Hunter street—it would be about 7.30 p.m. We got a plank and put it up to the wall, climbed up and over the wall and down behind Mr. Robert Fair's store, George street. We could not force the back door as it was locked inside so we smashed a large plate glass window. It would be about twice as big as a door. I told Findlay to smash it with an iron pipe which we found in the yard and I would not look whilst he did it. He had to strike it three times before it fell to pieces. We crawled into the store and stole $1.50 from a drawer in the office. We had previously broken into this store on Thursday, July 3rd, about 7 p.m. but that time we unhooked the fire door and then smashed the glass in the door, so as we could put our hands in and unbolt the door. That time we got $1.50 and some suppers and used the elevator, also got some bathing suits ready to take, but we did not take them. The glass in the door was half the size of the door. We would not have broken the big plate glass window if we could have got in through the door. I admit also climbing through a window in Oke's Fruit Warehouse, at the corner of Bethune and Simcoe streets. Findlay stayed outside. I got money and fruit and divided up with Findlay.

Findlay Woodcock admits that the above statement is all correct.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

French Port Regains Trade.

While Havre was still young the seafaring men of Honfleur conquered Newfoundland, founded Quebec and established numerous trading posts in India. Much of the town's commerce was gradually absorbed by Havre. At the outbreak of the great war, however, Honfleur had a prosperous export trade with England in dairy products, fruits and vegetables, and a considerable quantity of lumber was imported direct from the Scandinavian countries.

Was Last Polish King.

In 1798, on the 11th of April, Stanislaus Poniatowski, the last king of Poland, died. Poniatowski ascended the Polish throne in 1764. The condition of Poland required a strong man on the throne to keep the country from ruin, and Stanislaus lacked the necessary strength and statesmanship. Russia, Prussia and Austria divided this kingdom among them and the deposed king retired to Petrograd on a pension, where he died in 1798.

Equal to the Occasion.

"Speaking of accommodating hotel managers," said a traveler, "the best I ever met was in a provincial town. I reached the hotel late in the evening. Just before I retired I heard a scampering under the bed, and saw a couple of large rats just escaping. I at once complained at the office. The manager was as serene as a summer breeze. 'I'll fix that all right, sir,' he said. 'Boots! Take a cat to room 15 at once!'"

Stranger to Western World.

The Asiatic zoological expedition, sent into the South Chinese mountain province of Yunan to investigate its range of animal life, succeeded in securing several fine specimens of the serow, which is a stranger to the western world. The serow is a mountain dweller, somewhat like the chamois. It is wary and fleet and takes a dizzy and seemingly impossible course among its native crags.

Country's Dark Days.

The saying, "not worth a continental," came from the fact that the continental currency, issued by the continental congress, was worthless, or nearly so, during the revolution and after. As the continental congress had no power to levy taxes it was unable to redeem its promises to pay. Besides, the country was flooded with counterfeits which could not be detected.

VERA DE LAVELLE GIVES HERSELF UP TO POLICE

Girl Who Befriended Frank McCullough and Later Escaped From Jail in Toronto Tires of Hiding.

Toronto, July 23.—Vera De Lavelle, the woman in the sensational Frank McCullough case, who, while awaiting sentence on a charge of aiding McCullough to escape from the death cell at Toronto jail, herself escaped from the jail, prior to his execution, this afternoon surrendered herself to Detective Walter McConnell. Accompanied by her counsel, Mr. Wm. B. Horkins, of the firm of Robinette, Phelan & Godfrey, she reached police headquarters at 2.35 p.m. In terror of returning to the jail where her lover paid the death penalty, she chose the City Hall as the place of her surrender.

"Take me any place but to the jail. It would break my heart to put me in the place where they took my lover's life," she said. "Even now I cannot think of it without a shudder, and in my mind I can see my brave boy being led to his death.

"I just could not stand it any longer. I made up my mind yesterday that I was no criminal, so here I am back to face it all," was her opening plain statement.

Walking slowly up the broad steps of the City Hall from Mr. Horkins' motor, which had brought her back to the custody of the law, Vera De Lavelle fairly sparkled as she unfolded in her own way "my reasons for getting away as I did and my wish to play square with the authorities."

Miss Lavelle's Story.

There was romance, although it end[illegible] tragically, in the story of Frank McCullough and Vera de Lavelle [illegible] met at a dance. McCullough escaped from Toronto jail on the night of April 15th, and Vera disappeared on the same evening, and was not apprehended until seven days later. When taken she was put through a very stringent examination, but was staunch and refused to make any statement. Frank was caught on May 8th. The first inkling of the facts came out when Vera told her story. She met Frank on the night of his escape and later walked the streets, living for two days in an empty ram-shackle house, in which she was unable to sleep for the loneliness and eerie surroundings.

At her trial Harry Berman testified that he had lived with her as her husband, but that he left her. He, however, met her again after McCullough had escaped. She was found guilty of aiding a prisoner to escape, but later she wrote Frank asking him not to distrust her, and he on his part said: "If Vera came to me on her knees and said she betrayed me, I would not believe her."

The next sensation was Vera's escape from the jail laundry. She is a woman full of resources, and with no little courage. Her companion in the escape was caught, but Vera remained at large, disappearing absolutely from public knowledge, and the police were unable to find her. While her lover was under sentence of death she wrote him to be brave and asking God's blessing on him.

Mr. Horkins was inclined to believe that the case had already had too much publicity. He stated, however, that the unfortunate young woman had phoned him, with the result that, after a consultation, he had persuaded her to give herself up. He added that she would appear in Police Court today.

INDIANS FARM MORE

Increased Production Campaign Affects Reservations in West.

Ottawa, July 23.—Marked progress is being made in agriculture among the Indians on the reservations on the prairies. Two years ago the Federal Government delegated W. Graham, inspector of agencies, to urge on the reserve Indians the necessity of increasing their cultivated areas. He is able to report that this year the reserve Indians will produce 150,000 bushels of wheat and 10,000 bushels of oats in Alberta and 150,000 bushels of wheat and 40,000 bushels of oats in Saskatchewan.

GRATEFUL TO DUKE

Former Governor-General Provides For Canadians' Comfort.

London, July 23.—The Canadian Associated Press is requested to tell the people of Canada how greatly indebted many of their compatriots in London are to the kindly action of the Duke of Connaught and others which were enabled to see Saturday's great procession in comfort. The Duke, finding no special accommodation had been made for unofficial Canadians, promptly placed at their disposal the enclosure before his residence, Clarence House, while Sir Ernst Hatch and Lady Hilda Murray provided for several hundred Canadian guests.

Gives Dcision on The Betting Issue

SIR ALLEN AYLESWORTH SAYS ORDER-IN-COUNCIL CEASES OF EFFECT.

Toronto, July 23. Sir Allen Aylesworth, K.C., former Minister of Justice for Canada has given a written opinion to the effect that racing in Canada, with betting, will be legal the moment the royal proclamation issues in England that the state of war as to both Germany and Austria-Hungary ceases, and at the same moment the order-in-Council of June 7 1917, will cease to continue in force because from that moment Canada is no longer at war, no matter what either the Governor-in-Council or the Parliament of Canada might do or say.

MONTE CRISTO'S ISLAND

The Last Prisoner in the Chateau Dungeons

The famous Chateau d'If has held its last prisoner. With the end of the war the white rocky, little island off Marseilles, made world famous by Alexander Dumas in his novel "The Count of Monte Cristo," reverts to the status of a show place for tourists, a status it has held since 1872. Probably the last prisoner to taste the old air of its dungeons was the Austrian captain of a U-boat, who was interned there, for three months in 1917.

Before the present war the last prisoners condemned to the Chateau d'If were a number of Arabs seized during the Algerian revolt of 1871 and taken out in 1872 to be sent to French Guinea. Today the island's only interest is historical. When the tourists come again to Marseilles guides will show them in the old dungeons the tunnel which the Abbe Faria dug into the cell of Edmond Dantes. They will even point out the spot where Dantes, sewn up in the abbe's shroud, was hurled into the sea, and so effected his escape.

A COMPLETE TRACTOR.

Quite a large crowd gathered on Aylmer street opposite the creamery this afternoon to see Mr. G. A. Gillespie's Cleveland Tractor operate. It is a small machine with caterpillar wheels, which enable it to climb over logs and other obstacles. Those present who understood anything of tractors proclaimed it one of the most complete for rough ground which has yet appeared here.

A CITY OF PLEASURE AND BEAUTY AND THE PICK OF LIVING WONDERS

Is Pollack's Mammoth Midway at Exhibition Grounds—The La Rose Electric Fountain a Marvel of Mechanical Art—Thousands Spend an Evening of Unalloyed Pleasure.

A veritable city of amusement, marvels, living wonders and even astounding beauty, is Pollack Brothers Mammoth Midway at the Exhibition grounds all this week. A real carnival of pleasure, replete with the pick of special features such as carried by big international circuses, these novel and entertaining shows offer hours of jollification and merry-making that none can really afford to miss. Admirably conducted, free from objectionable follows, clean and irresistibly attractive, the electrically illuminated grounds offered to thousands ~~of visitors last night, opportunity for~~ amusement and sight-seeing quite "worth while." There is so much to see and indulge in that one visit is not enough; and attractions tumble over each other, so to speak, from the moment one enters the gates until one leaves for home satiated with the joys of wonderland.

It is impossible to do these shows justice in limited space; the La Rose Electric Fountain itself deserve columns. It is a marvel of electrical effects applied to oceans of rolling, tumbling, ascending and showering water, presenting all that is entrancing in motion picturesqueness, entranced by all that is beautiful in blended coloring. This exhibit is also combination of mystifiying effects, in which human statuary and allegarical presentations have a part amid a stupendous fountain of irrigated waters. And the whole exhibition terminates in a protechnical display exploded from within the fountain while playing in full force, holding one's senses in spell-bound amazement. This feature is the only one of a similar nature ever attempted by a travelling company and is only operated at considerable expense.

The Wild West exhibit commends itself to all lovers of horse and cowboy stunts, and skilful rifle and revolver markmanship. Col. Lenders (Buffalo Jack), a life-long friend of the world-famed Col. Cody, is there, as also is Princess Wenona, an Indian lady, who leads in target and fancy shooting. The latter's shots at a human target excel in thrills, and forces the beholder to catch his or her breath.

But there! the shows are full of wonders and phenomenon, the smallest of which (in size only) is that wensome little doll lady, Elizabeth, who entertains with instrumental music and charms in conversational lift. She speaks no less than seven different languages, and is perfect in approved female figure. She was a popular feature at the great San Francisco exhibit in 1915 as she proved also a favorite last evening. This little lady will be pleased to meet you. Then there awaits you a wonderful population mecory man, Barnum's favorite tatooed marvel a real rubber-neck gent, the fat lady who lives on Quaker Oats, Shotty, who cultivated a beard of seven feet in length on Scotch whiskey applied internally (so he says), a real sword and bayonet swallower, snake charmers, an electrical wonder artist, and Benny Reeves, the handcuff expert.

In the big sylodrome—a huge wooden cylinder—Motor Cyclists Bob and Dan Barclay give several hair-raising exhibits, including a life-risking race around the perpendicular inner sides of the drome.

After dipping into the above features the visitor should take a ride on the huge ferris wheel (perfectly safe), and also the whip, the merriest and most surprising of all mery-go-rounds. He or she might then wind up with a trip "over the falls." Oh, yes. By all means go over these falls—you'll not get wet, but you may meet with astonishing surprise, which will, however, give way to your subsequent enjoyment at the astonishment of others.

Taking it all in all, nothing of its kind, quite any where near so good as Pollack Bros.' Big Shows, have yet visited this city. Don't miss them!

If your glasses break, will it interfere with your work? Would a long wait for repairs inconvenience you? When it happens, remember Dr. Fowler's modern repair department, where breaks are mended as good as new and so quickly that you hardly have time to miss the glasses. Cheese at 25 11-16c On Peterboro Board

BOUGHT IN BY WM. WEIR AND GEORGE A. GILLESPIE THIS MORNING.

Last Wednesday 24c was offered for cheese on the local cheese board with no takers; this morning all the factories accepted 25 11-16 offered for either selections or the whole board, after considerable demurring and uncertainty as to whether it would be best to await settled conditions of the export market, or not. At this price 25 11-16, the cheese offered by Keene, Villiers, Westwood, Oakdale and Lang, went to Mr. Weir, for A. W. Groat the remainder of the board sold to Geo. Gillespie, for the Peterborough Milk Products, Limited. The other buyers present were Jas. Cook, of Belleville and T. H. Thompson for A. A. Ayers Company, Montreal. J. B. Muir, of the Ingersoll Packing Co., was also present.

All the cheese sold were for Canadian markets.

Export Trade Uncertain

Geo. H. Gillespie notified the board that his instructions regarding cheese for export were to offer 23¼c advanced price, subject to a change. Such cheese would be held pending a settlement of the English market, and whatever price is subsequently set would be paid the seller's. The Old Country price had been set till August 1st, but now an established and generally controlled price may be advised at any moment. He would not buy for export.

W. S. Cook replied that he would make a better offer with 24c the pound for the west, and there would be no storage expense, nor uncertain exchange charges. This price he contended equal to any were there no rumors of a general control of the cheese market.

The bidding started at 24¾c by Weir and between Coats and he ran up by points to 24 13-16c when Gillespie bid 25c and Cook dropped out. Weir and Gillespie here ran the price up to 25 11-16. Weir for selections and Gillespie for the Board, and to these men the whole offering went.

AUTO, ST. CAR, FARMER'S WAGON IN BAD MIX-UP

MOTOR CAR BADLY DAMAGED—ONE-MAN STREET CAR FIGURES IN ACCIDENT.

Dr. Halliday's car was badly damaged yesterday afternoon, when he collided with the large wooden post in front of Dr. Robinson's, on Charlotte street. The doctor was running east on Charlotte street, endeavoring to pass a farmer with a load of hay. Just then a one-man street car came along, and the farmer realizing he was too near the centre of the street turned his team away from the car and forced Dr. Halliday's auto into the curb where he collided with the post.

One back wheel of the doctor's car was badly smashed and the front wheels were considerably bent. It was towed to Duffus' garage for repairs. The accident occurred about 4.30 yesterday afternoon.

THEATRICAL

DOGS FAVOURITES WITH VIOLA DANA

Although fond of all animals Viola Dana, star of "SOME Bride," to be shown at the Grand on Thursday, Friday and Saturday next, has a particularly warm spot in her heart for dogs—not only highly bred, blooded dogs, but those of all descriptions, from the half starved, mangy tramp to the beautiful, sleek animals seen at shows.

The proof of this love is the home which the little actress always has for her favorites. A stray dog comes, she takes it in—a family is moving and do not want their pet, she takes it in. The fact is so well known among her friends that they try to steer her clear of all canines in distress—they know that she simply cannot resist them.

VIOLA DANA DRESSES AS "BABY CHICKEN"

One of the clever and amusing scenes in "SOME Bride," the Metro play in which Viola Dana is starred, and which will be shown at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is the barn dance where the players are seen in many original costumes.

The scene shows a large room "tastefully decorated" in pumpkins, cornhusks and other products of the farm while the guests are seen as "farmerettes," plough-boys and village belles and beaux and other accepted modes of the old fashioned harvest dance.

To carry out the pastoral effect, Patricia Morley, the bride with the "can't behave eyes" (played by Viola Dana), appears as a tiny chicken just out of the shell. The costume is made of the softest and fluffiest of pale yellow swansdown and to say that the effect is startling is to put it mildly, but to add that Miss Dana looks adorable is only to state the plain truth.

Other original costumes include a pleasant-looking donkey, a mild-eyed cow and a frisky dog.

Irving Cummings is seen in the leading male role and many other notables appear in the cast.

GIRL WON BY DEVIL.

Charming Love Interest in Monroe Salisbury's "The Devil, 'Bateese'."

The crisp, spicy air of the French Canadian woods will come to you in a gale of hurricane action Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Grand Opera House, where you will see Monroe Salisbury in his latest Bluebird master photodrama, "That Devil, 'Bateese'."

The star of a score of successful Bluebird photoplays plays the role of a devil-may-care French-Canadian lumberjack who blazes a trail across icy indifference to the heart of a Montreal society girl who sought the north woods as a sanctuary in which to forget a mistake in love.

There is action in "The Devil, 'Bateese'." So much so, in fact, that the murmuring pines will bring ever greater peace to your heart as you watch "Batiste" in his conquest.

Salisbury has every characteristic toward the realism of his part.

Go to the Grand Opera House tonight, take your place on the edge of the seat, and play "That Devil, 'Bateese'" for a winner.

WHISKEY, KNIFE, DEVIL.

Evil Personified by Monroe Salisbury in "That Devil, 'Bateese.'"

"Batiste Latour—"That Devil, 'Bateese,'" came down the river on a raft. On one side of his girdle hung a flask of white whiskey. On the other side a knife gleaming evilly in the yellow sun of a French Canadian morning.

Being quite pleasantly drunk and with nothing to worry him but his pay which jingled teasingly in his pocket, "Bateese" was nearing the town of Montrouge where excellent liquor was to be had and no one to bother except old Father Pierre who pestered one about hearing mass, yet was kindly in his criticism of white whiskey.

On the moss shore "Bateese" saw the twigs wave violently as though a struggle was going on in the thicket. He jumped ashore in time to save Kathleen St. John of Montreal from being forcibly kissed by Courteau, a bully of the woods.

How "Bateese" loved Kathleen and how she turned him away, and how he sought death is the theme of "That Devil, 'Bateese,'" a refreshingly good Bluebird photodrama with a hurricane of action to ruffle the feathers of boredom.

As "Bateese," a lovable French-Canadian lumberman, Monroe Salisbury does worthy dramatic work that will add his current play to the list of successes in which he has starred.

This play will be at the Grand the last half of this week.

Mac of the C. P. R.

To the thousands who pass through the gates at Place Viger Station, Montreal, year in and year out it is hardly necessary to introduce the genial official whose photograph appears above. To those who are not fortunate enough to be acquainted with him, we beg to introduce "Mac," the ever popular and courteous station master at Place Viger C.P.R. depot, the one dependable friend of the travelling public.

In a formal way, this official is registered as T. W. Maguire but to the travellers, he is "Mac". That's 'nuff. The hundreds who spend their holidays up in the Laurentian mountains; the hundreds who have their summer cottages up the line, all know Mac and he knows them, and intimately. There are lots of little things that Mac does for his travelling friends that earn their everlasting gratitude. You see, Mac is not merely a station-master, stern of mien and official in attitude, but he is an advisor—a friend—to whom the patrons of the C.P.R. turn when they are in travelling difficulties. And they always get satisfaction. Mac is known to go out of his way to help the travelling public and it is doubtful whether any C.P.R. station official has more friends than has Mac. His temper never seems to suffer, despite the trying times he sometimes has and even the most humble traveller is assured of a courteous and kindly reception at Mr. Maguire's hands.

A Popular Man.

When the trains bringing back the heroes of the war pulled in, many hands were shoved through the car windows to shake hands with Mac, who, being a veteran of 1885 himself, has always had a warm spot in his heart for the "soldier laddies." Mr. Maguire was under fire in the rebellion of 1885 and has the medal and the Saskatchewan bar. He also possesses the good conduct medal and has been thirty years in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway. As a station-master, Mac is ideal. His courtesy, his friendliness and kindheartedness have won for him the esteem, not alone of the travelling public, but of his superior officers. He can enforce discipline but still retain his friends—surely an excellent quality.

Here's to Mac! Long may he preside over the destinies of the travellers who go and come in the Place Viger Station—From The Montreal Standard.

Hohenzollerns Allowed Almost Perfect Liberty By German Government

A VERY significant feature of the European situation is the extraordinary treatment which the members of the Hohenzollern dynasty have received at the hands of the present Berlin Government. Whereas Saxony, Bavaria and several other of the non-Prussian states of the German empire have driven their former rulers and the scions of their family from the country into foreign exile, the Hohenzollerns have all, with the exception of the Kaiser himself, and of the Crown Prince—who voluntarily expatriated themselves—been permitted to remain in Prussia, where they are treated with both respect and with distinction. Thus, the Crown Princess remains with her four boys and her little girl, at the so-called Marble Palace at Potsdam, where she is visited almost every week by President Ebert, for the purpose, it is said, of discussing questions relating to the management and administration of the vast private estates and huge fortune of the dynasty, which have remained undisturbed and immune from confiscation. It is generally understood that any monarchical restoration in Prussia, and for the matter of that, in all Germany, would be in favor of her eldest boy, Prince William, who will soon celebrate his thirteenth birthday. Her proceedings for divorce against her husband, announced by her mother, the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Russia, widow of the Sovereign Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, have been abandoned, at any rate for the present in deference to dynastic considerations.

PRINCE ALBRECHT.

The ex-Kaiser's second son, Prince Eitel Fritz, is living with his gentlemen-in-waiting, at his former hunting villa Ingenheid, at Potsdam, and has been, much to the satisfaction of many who are aware of the circumstances, rejoined by his wife, who, for the same reasons which have influenced her sister-in-law, the Crown Princess, has abandoned her divorce proceedings against him. Prince Adalbert, the sailor son of the kaiser, has resigned from the navy, but continues to occupy the villa Seeblick at Kiel with his wife, Princess Adelaide, of Saxe-Meiningen. Prince August William, with his wife, a niece of the ex-empress, and his children, is enjoying the hospitality of a very wealthy merchant with whom he has long been on terms of intimate friendship, and who has placed his entire mansion on the Thiergarten, at Berlin, with all his servants, at his disposal. Prince Oscar is living with his morganatic wife, Countess Ruppin, as the guests of her parents, the Count and Countess Bassewitz, at their beautiful country seat of Bristow, in Mecklenburg Schwerin. The kaiser's youngest son, married to a princess of Anhalt, occupies a private house at Potsdam, while the Kaiser's only brother, with his wife and sons, remain at their country seat on the Baltic shore, about 15 miles out from Kiel, the only time when he was ever troubled having been when on the denunciation of a revengeful servant whom he had dismissed, his chateau was subjected to a purely formal search for concealed arms.

Account must be taken of the significant circumstance that the official description of Germany retained by the present Berlin Government, is that of "the German empire." Its chief executive, the ex-saddler Ebert, the friend, frequent guest, and "Home Socialist" of William II, is the president of the German empire. The ambassadors and ministers in foreign capitals are still the envoys of the German empire, and it is the German empire, and not the Republic of Germany, that is represented by Count Brockdorff-Rantzau and his fellow peace delegates at Versailles. Finally, it has not escaped the attention of the Germans that although President Wilson joined the Entente in the great war with the avowed purpose of "crushing Hohenzollernism," regardless of their "rights of self-determination," there is not a single word in the conditions of peace imposed upon Germany to prevent her from restoring the Hohenzollern dynasty to the throne at Berlin, in the person of young Prince William.

LEATHER FROM THE SEA.

The Product of Shark, Sturgeon and Angel Fish Skins.

It is a curious fact that many sorts of leather are got from sea creatures, some of which are very beautiful. The skin of sharks is a beautiful burnished gray or bluish color. The surface resembles finely grained leather since it shows many tiny prickles all set one way. This property of shark skin renders it especially valuable to the manufacturer of shagreen. Since the skin is at once tough and easy to work it can be used for many purposes where decorative effects are desired.

In spite of its lumpy armor the sturgeon furnishes a valuable and attractive leather. It has been found that when the bony plates are removed the patterns remain on the skin, just as the patterns of alligator scales remain on alligator leather, a circumstance that adds greatly to the value of the product. From the sturgeons that abound on our Pacific coast and in the great lakes we get a tough leather that is used for the making of laces to join leather belting for machinery. It is said that the lacing frequently outwears the belting itself.

There is found in Turkish waters a strikingly unattractive fish called the angel fish, classed among the littoral sharks. This fish yields an extremely high quality of green leather, much esteemed in the Ottoman dominions.

Orientals and De Lavals Put Up Slugging Bill Last Night

Score 10 to 9 in Favor of the Orientals—Cavanagh Makes Longest Hit of the Season

The Orientals and De Laval engaged in a great slugging bee last evenin, the former winning by 10 to 9. It was a great contest all the way, neither team having the victory until the last man was out.

Cavanagh had the longest hit of the season, when he hit te ball over Heenan's head for a home run in the third innings. It was a splendid drive, Cavanagh coming across the plate standing up well ahead of the ball. He hit safely three times in three times at bat.

The bitting of Manager Solomon of the season, when he hit the ball over vacancy at right field, was a feature, he getting four hits out of five times at bat. Head also fattened his batting average, hitting for two singles and a 3-base hit in five trips to the plate. The fielding feature fell to McCarney, the centre fielder of the Orientals, when he retired the side in the 6th on three difficult flies. Again in the ninth he went well back after Burgoine's long fly and prevented a dangerous rally of the south enders.

The construction is being proceeded with at the Clyde yards of the Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Company, of a ship 625 feet long between perpendiculars, having a gross tonnage of 22,000 tons. This ship will be known as the Empress of Canada. Three passenger ships of the intermediate class for the Atlantic service are to be put under construction at the yards of John Brown & Son, and the Fairfield Shipbuilding Company. At the end of the last fiscal year the company had in ocean service twenty-eight steamships, of a gross tonnage of 264,430 tons, and six steamships under order or purchased but not delivered, having a gross tonnage of about 88,600.

The ships lost through accidents at sea were: the Corinthian, 7,333 tons; Lake Manitoba, 9,674 tons.

The eight steamships sold to the British Government were the Montezuma, 8,360 tons; Montcalm, 5,505 tons; Montrose, 7,207 tons; Mount Royal, 7,998 tons; Mongolian, 4,838 tons; Numidian, 4,836 tons; Ruthenia, 7,208; Tyrolia, 7,535 tons. The S.S. Empress of India was purchased by an Indian Prince and presented to the British Government for use as a hospital ship. Her gross tonnage is 5,934. The total tonnage lost through enemy action and other causes is 126,552, and the tonnage sold is 59,421, a grand total of 185,973 gross tons.

Botsford, 4,782 tons; Dunbridge, 6,650 tons; Holbrook, 6,656 tons; Montezuma, 5,038 tons; Montcalm, 6,542 tons; Medora, 5,135 tons; Mattawa, 4,874 tons; Miniota, 4,928 tons; Melhaven, 4,862 tons; Mottisfont, 5,692 tons; War Beryl, 10,800 tons; War Peridot, 10,800 tons. Vessels built and added to the fleet during the same period were the Missanabie, 12,469 tons; Metagama, 12,420 tons; Melita, 13,967 tons; Minnedosa, 13,967 tons.

CIVIC HOLIDAY TO BE A BIG GALA DAY

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS AND LOCAL FEATURES—RACES AND SPORTS.

Civic holiday in the city this year is going to be a big day and it is going to be backed by an organization which knows how to spend money and how to choose attractions which are the best money can provide. The organization referred to is the Peterborough Exhibition Board, which is sparing neither time nor ingenuity in preparing a program which will be not only an attraction, but practically an historical event.

In choosing the attractions the Dominion's best offerings were looked over and the livest and most famous chosen. The program will have that pleasing variation essential in satisfying every one and the most discriminating tastes will be catered to. Some idea of what is going to be presented may be gained by a resume of the program already in hand, this includes the 91st Highland Band of Hamilton under the direction of H. A. Stares, the Macdonald London Pipe Band of London, consisting of expert pipers, drummers and dancers, a stupendous fireworks display, under the direction of Professor Hand of Hamilton, 2 big vaudeville acts from McMahon and Dee of Buffalo, an exhibition by the Y.W.C.A. girls, under the supervision of Miss Caroline Littlefield. Each of the attractions mentioned will give full programs, both afternoon and evening.

Horse Races.

With enteries of some of the best known horses horse races will be held in the afternoon with purses amounting to $1,000. The latter attraction is looked to be one of the big features of the day.

Dr. and Mrs. Ernest V. Frederick returned to the city yesterday and the doctor will resume his practice in his old office on Charlotte street about August 15. Dr. Frederick has had one of the most wonderful experiences of any officer of the allied armies during the last four years. Through his efforts the Royal Army Medical Corps applied to the Canadian Minister of Militia for the loan of the four hundred doctors on the waiting list who had volunteered and could not be sent over, as there was no need for theme in the Canadian army, although the British were short of medical men. During the war he was for one and a half years surgeon to No. 1 Canadian Stationary Hospital during its work in the Dardanelles, Egypt and Saloniki, until he was invalided to Egypt with malaria. For six months he was surgical specialist to a large Indian hospital in Bagdad, and for one month assistant superintendent to the Government and Civil Hospital in Hong Kong. He probably holds the army record for distance, having covered about eighty thousand miles which took him three times to England, twice to France, four times to Egypt, once to Malta, Crete, Italy and Cicily, twice to Mesopotamia, including six months in Bagdad, twice to Lemnos, covering five and a half months, twice to Saloniki, covering ten months; a three months' trip around by South Africa, Sierra Leone and Zanzibar, twice to India, where his work took him all over the country, a distance of some ten thousand miles, and a thousand miles in Assam, and then to Singapore, Hong Kong, Canton, and to Vladivostok and Japan. One of his best souvenirs is a book of many hundreds of photographs taken by himself during these interesting travels and experiences. Mrs. Frederick is the recipient of the Imperial Munitions Board medal, with bars, for war work. During the last nine months Dr. and Mrs. Frederick have been living in Rochester, Minn., where Dr. Frederick has been on the staff of the Mayo Brothers' Clinic. After all the cities he has seen, he says that Peterborough is one of the finest and most ideal in which to live.

MINERS READY FOR SETTLEMENT BUT NOT ON GOVERMENT'S TERMS

Conference To-day Between Lloyd George and Miner's Representatives—No Definite Dicision Yet—Further Proposals will be Submitted Stikers

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 24.—The executive of the Miners' Federation met Premier Lloyd George and other members of his Government this morning in an effort to settle disputes in the Yorkshire coal fields. The Premier was attended by Sir Aukland Geddes, Minister for National Service and Reconstruction, Sir Robert Stevenson Horn, Minister of Labor, and officials of the coal Labor Department of the Board of Trade.

Before entering conference one of the representatives of the miners said:

"Of course, we are ready for settlement, but not on Government's own terms."

No Settlement Yet.

London, July 24.—No settlement was reached at this morning's session of conferees.

The conference adjourned until this evening to allow miners' representatives time to consider further Government proposals on the question of piece rates, growing out of advance in the price of coal.

Sailors Manning Pumps.

The pumping situation in Yorkshire mines today was announced as satisfactory with the exception of one important mine. Two hundred sailors are now manning the mine pumps without interference, and attention is being given to the operation of ventilation systems in the deeper pits of South Yorkshire, where fans have been stopped since the strike began.

Sir Eric Geddes, minister without portfolio, who is on the spot representing the Government, has received satisfactory replies from the lord mayor of Ledes and other municipalities, whom he asked yesterday to see that their supply of coal was economized. The supply at Leeds is virtually exhausted, and the outlook for householders is serious.

Operations Resumed.

All mines in North Staffordshire district which were idle yesterday because of the strike, resumed operations today.

WONDERFUL WORK BEING DONE AT PETERBOROUGH PLAYGROUNDS

Little Ones Taught to Respect Rather Than Fear Their Leaders—Minor Aim to Provide Amusement, Chief Aim to Build up a Strong Character

Few people realize the wonderful works being done at the city playgrounds. There are at present three playgrounds, Central, Queen Mary, and King Edward. These three grounds give a source of wholesome pleasure to between 1,000 and 15,000 of our city children.

The Most Modern

The Queen Mary grounds are the most modernly equipped of the three. Over there they have the latest approved steel swings, a steel giant stride, two teter boards, two sand boxes, a baseball diamond and equipment for a great many games. The other, two grounds have not reached the same standard of efficiency in their equipment as this one, but it is hoped that they will acquire it next season.

Swimming Supervision

A baseball schedule has been arranged between the grounds and one game is played each week. A man and lady supervisor take groups daily to the new civic swimming place on Lake street.

All day games of baseball, volleyball tether tennis, tournaments and many other competitive sports are engaged in, as well as a great many group games of various kinds.

The smaller children are taught to play games suitable to their ages, such as drop the handkerchief, black and white, spud, grey wolf, duck on the rock and a multitude of similar pastimes.

Taught Useful Arts

At certain periods the girls are taught sewing and basketry, and very often the supervisor leads a group in story-telling.

Order Prevails

It has often been noticed that when a group of children go out to play by themselves discord usually prevails. Each child must play its own game and seldom thinks of yielding to the majority. If such a spirit of selfishness is allowed to grow it will mar the character of the child. At the playgrounds, different games are taught each day and the children grow, so eager for play that they refuse to stay out of any game. The supervisor knows the individual and from careful study and observation he learns how best to appeal to him or her to assure their getting the most good out of the sport. The minor aim of the playground is to provide amusement for the children, the chief aim is to build up a strong character, and there is no bettel way to accomplish this than by teaching good wholesome play. While playing at the playgrounds they learn fair play and unselfishness.

Keep in Touch With All

The officials have the names, denominations and addresses of those who attend. By this means they keep in touch with each person's home life, and thus learn what to expect from each one, and deal with him accordingly.

Purely Voluntary

The playgrounds, unlike the schools, are purely voluntary. A boy or girl may attend or may stay away as he or she pleases. And yet discipline is maintained without the use of any corporal punishment whatever. This is a difficult task but it is being accomplished by the supervisors in this city. The discipline is wonderful, considering the circumstances. Boys and girls are taught to respect their leaders rather than fear them.

Parents Invited

On Friday evening the Queen Mary grounds will be open from 7 to 9 o'clock, and an invitation is extended to all parents and friends to attend and see the children play their games, and to participate in the evening's program themselves. After this the grounds will be open from 7 to 9 on Monday and Thursday evenings of each week.

PETERBORO COUNTY CAN GROW CLOVER SEED

There is no doubt but the good old county of Peterborough could become a factor in red clover seed production. In fact it is not an exaggeration, for seed has been produced in former years, of splendid quality.

This year there are a number of fine clover meadows in the county. The season for haying has started early and the recent rains have [illegible] growth to come on rapidly. Every farmer in the county who will have second growth clover should save it all this year for seed if for no other reason than that they may have a supply of seed to sow next spring.

The prospects are for a great dearth of seed and an unprecedented demand. This is shown from market quotations in the seed world where dealers are bidding $28.00 per bushel for December deliveries. All small seeds may be expected to advance in price this season.

It is expected that clover hullers will be available for the use of Peterborough farmers wherever there will be enough seed worth while saved and where hullers are not already available.

Camera Eye Ryan Killed by Gunman

MOST DREADED DETECTIVE IN UNITED STATES VICTIM OF SHOOTING.

Newark, N. J., July 24.—Old "Camera-Eye" is dead. Word has been spread through the underworld for Lieut. Pat Ryan was for more that 20 years the most hated and feared detective that ever disturbed the light-fingered gentry.

"Camera-Eye" was the name given Ryan by the crooks who fear ed him. He knew and "worked" every large city in the country. Wherever crooks congregated there would be "Pat" also. He was said never to have forgotten the face of a "bad un" once he saw it.

Philip Schilling, alleged gunman and burglar is said to have fired the shot that ended Ryan's life. Schilling is in jail.

Waylayed Many Crooks

"Camera-Eye" was always on deck at Presidential inaugurals. No one knows how many thousands of dollars he kept from being dipped out of the inaugural visitors' pockets by waylaying the incoming hosts of pocket-pickers.

"If I had escaped," Schilling is alleged to have said, "I would have gone to New York and the crooks there would have paid me $5,000 for croaking Ryan. Then I would have gone to Central America and they would never have got me."

Mental Pictures Distinct

Ryan's mind was a perfect gallery of faces. When confronted with the original of any of the thousands of thieves he could instantly identify them. He at one time said that he had the pictures of 40,000 crooks, living and dead in his mind. That every human face has some peculiar characteristic by which it can be easily identified, was Ryan's memory secret.

It was this gift that brought Ryan to his death. While off duty and celebrating his 20th anniversary on the Newark police force, Ryan followed Schilling off the car and was shot to death in the attempt to arrest him.

SEQUEL TO RIOTING

Canadians Held in Connection With Epsom Affair

London, July 24.—Privates F. H. Wilkie, 102nd Canadian Battalion; J. Connors, 13th Canadian Highlanders; A. McKester, Third Canadian Reserve; A. Masse and R. A. McAllan, both of Camp D. forestry corps, who were committed for trial at Bow Street for manslaughter in connection with the death of Sergeant Green of the Epsom police, and also Bugler Robert Todd of the Canadians, who was committed on a coroner's warrant, were brought up in the Surrey assizes, Justice Darling presided. They were indicted for unlawful and riotously assembling to disturb the peace and causing damage to property. All the accused were defended and pleaded not guilty.

IT NEVER HAPPENED BUT IT MIGHT HAVE

"Will you kindly oblige me by driving your team off the track, that this car may proceed without further delay to its destination," asked the motorman with a pleasant smile, as he doffed his cap to the teamster who had blocked his car several squares.

"Certainly, my dear sir," replied the driver, as he reined his horses aside.

"Thank you very much," said the motorman, handing him a cigar.

"Don't mention it my dear friend," observed the teamster.

Aged Eighteen, Gets One Month in Jail

CONVICTED IN POLICE COURT FOR STEALING THREE OR FOUR RAZORS.

Robert Cassard of Cochrane, Ontario, aged 18, was sentenced to one month in the county jail on a charge of theft by Magistrate Dumble in Police Court this morning.

Constable Phillips of Northumberland and Durham counties, who brought the prisoner here last night, took the witness box. He swore that the prisoner had told him he took three or four razors from the home of Walter Hope, Otonabee. Cassard had been working for the G. T. R. at Hope's siding, not far from the home of Walter Hope. He, in company with Edward Horn, had gone to Walter Hope's for water. To get the water it was necessary to go through the pantry of the house where the razors wer lying on a shelf. The razors had disappeared and had not since been found. The prisoner had told him that he had thrown them into a swamp three or four rods from the railroad track.

Walter Hope, the owner of the razors, took the stand and swore that he had missed the razors after Cassard and Horn had been to his house and had not recovered them. Replying to questions from prisoner, he admitted that he had been lying on the couch when the prisoner entered and had not seen him take the razors. As far as he knew, the prisoner was the only man who had entered his house that day, but two men from the railroad had been washing there but had not entered the house. He valued the razors at about seven dollars.

The time-keeper of the gang swore that the prisoner had been employed in that gang and had been dismissed that day at noon. He heard of the theft, and in company with another man chased Cassard and Horn. As they wer after them, one of them ran from the road towards a swamp. They called to them and they came back and submitted to be searched, the razors not being in their possession. Replying to a question of the prisoner, witness swore that he had searched the other man, though about one hour after. The prisoner confessed to his having stolen the razors.

The prisoner emphatically denied having confessed to either the constable or the time-keeper that he had taken the razors. He swore that it was the man with him who had stolen them. He knew this because he had told him he did so.

He was sentenced to one month in the county jail.

The enumerators are calling at each house and getting the names of each resident therein qualified to vote.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS JOIN BOLSHEVIKI

MUTINY AND HAND OVER ONEGA FRONT AND TOWN TO THE ENEMY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, July 24.—The Government has received a despatch from Major-General William E. Ironside, commander-in-chief of the Archangel front, stating that Russian troops have mutinied and joined the Bolsheviki, handing over the town of Onega and Onega front to the enemy. The latter also tried to take the railroad front, but were repulsed.

There are few British troops on the railroad front and none on the Onega front. General Ironside now has the situation in hand and believes that the fresh British volunteer troops are equal to their difficult and perilous task.

Decides to Fight A Guelph By-Law

HYDRO - ELECTRIC RADIAL WOULD BE SHUT OUT OF GUELPH WERE MEASURE TO CARRY.

The officers and executive of the Hydro-electric Radial Commission of Ontario met in conference at Toronto yesterday on a question materially affecting the interests of the new Niagara Toronto radial line.

It appears that the Grand River Railway Co. are purchasers of the franchises of the Galt, Preston and Hespler Street Railway, which they propose operating with the Guelph Radial Railway Company, and the corporation of the City of Guelph.

A bylaw to authorize the exercise of this franchise is to be submitted to the people of Guelph on August 11. And at the meeting yesterday the officers of the Hydro-electric Radial Commission were instructed to fight the bylaw, the carrying of which would close Guelph to any future feeder to Hydro's Niagara-Toronto radial line.

The municipalities represented at yesterday's meeting were Peterborough, Hamilton, Guelph and Toronto and the decision was unanimous.

Mayor Duncan, who attended this conference, returned home last night.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, July 24.—Vera De Lavelle, sweetheart of the late Frank McCullough, who assisted him to escape, and later herself escaped prison and returned a few days ago, was sentenced to two months on the jail farm this morning. She promised Judge Coatsworth not to make another attempt to escape.

Kenneth Croft of Guelph narrowly escaped electrocution when he seized a live wire, but was not seriously hurt.

FIVE CANADIANS IN ENGLAND CONVICTED OF MANSLAUGHTER

Each Get One Year in Prison for Figuring in The Epsom Rioting—Police Sergeant Green Killed when Troops Rushed the Station—Connors only Nineteen years old

London, July 23.—At the Surrey Assizes to-day, Bugler Robert Todd and Private R. A. McAllan of the Canadian Forestry Corps were found not guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of Police Sergeant Green at Epsom, and discharged.

Privates F. H. Wilkie, 102nd Canadian Battalion; J. Connors, 13th Canadian Highlanders; A. McMaster, 3rd Canadian Reserve; and D. Yerex and A. Masse of the Canadian Forestry Corps, were found guilty and sentenced to twelve months imprisonment, without hard labor.

When the trial continued today at Guildford, H. Benjamin, defending Connors and McAllen, opened the defense by calling Connors, who, he said, was 19 years of age, had enlisted in the army at the age of 16, and had been in it ever since. He had been wounded in France. While sitting on a bench near a hotel in Epsom he saw a party of soldiers going past. He followed them to the police station, and stayed there about ten minutes, during which time he saw no act of violence. He then returned to camp, and absolutely denied he used a plank in any struggle with the police.

Connors Under Cross-Examination.

Cross-examined by Sir Ernest Wild, Connors said he did not see any soldiers tearing down palings near which he had been seated, nor had he heard any bugle calls. Connors said he waited five minutes before he followed the soldiers, and could not estimate the time when "we" arrived at the police station.

Justice Darling: "Why do you say 'we' when you were by yourself?"

Connors proceeded to deny evidence for the prosecution that he stated he threw a policeman over a hedge.

Said He Was Asleep.

McAllan said he followed the crowd in the execution of his duty as camp policeman. At the police station some one had told him they were going to get some men out. He meditated, "This is no place for me"—(laughter)—and was turning to depart when he was struck by a stone.

McMaster said he was asleep on the night of June 17, when he heard "fall in" sounded. He dressed and joined the crowd in camp, and not knowing the object of the march accompanied the others to Epsom, and was proceeding along the road when he was struck by a stone on the head and knocked out.

Masse denied participation in any violence against the police, and said he was struck on the head with a stone.

Wilkie's evidence was much the same as McMaster's, but he admitted he was in front of the attack on the station and in the station yard.

Yerex gave similar evidence.

RUMANIANS AND HUNGARIANS ARE SKIRMISHING--HUNGARIANS WIN

French Soldiers Attacked by Bulgarians—Will Quickly Restore Order

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, July 24.—Skirmishing continues between Rumanians and Hungarians and the latter have crossed the River Theiss at points between Tokai, 110 miles northeast of Budapest and Chiongrad, 75 miles south-east of Budapest, river being low. The Hungarians used rafts as bridges which have been blown up.

The Hungarian Soviet feels the necessity of keeping its army busy. For a long time it hesitated in making an attack, anticipating that such action would lead to a general counter offensive against the Soviet.

FRENCH REGT. AT SOFIA

Geneva, July 24.—As a result of an attack on French soldiers by Bulgarians, a French regiment has arrived at Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, to disarm the local garrison, according to the Roumanian bureau. The French contingent, the bureau states, is supplied with an equipment of rapid fire guns to sustain it in its task of restoring order.

Three Frenchmen Killed.

Paris, July 24.—The French regiment was attacked by Bulgarians as the regiment was landing at Lompalanka on the Danube, 22 miles south-east of Vidin, a few days ago, according to a despatch from Belgrade today. A lively fusilade ensued, lasting three hours. Three French soldiers were killed.

Accommodation will be provided for a thousand saloon passengers, eight hundred second cabin passengers, and two [illegible] hundred steerage passengers. They will be driven by four propellers with a total strength of 110,000 horsepower.

To Bestow Honour On Lloyd George

KING WILL RECOGNIZE SERVICES OF BRITISH PREMIER AT PEACE CONFERENCE.

London, July 24.—King George is eager to bestow an honor on Premier David Lloyd George, in recognition of his services in war and at the Peace Conference, and the form this honor is to take is being discussed in Court circles, says the Mirror. Premier Lloyd George would not accept a peerage, newspapers asserted, but some special honor may be created.

Chief Health Inspector Pearson reported that four tons of eggs and thirteen hundred pounds of fish had rotted in Winnipeg cold storage during the recent strike.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

THURSDAY, JULY 24, 1919

CIVIC HANDICAPS.

A DETRIMENT to any community is the newspaper that is either a purely personal organ or that is ready to stand for anything that public officials or private individuals may be pleased to put over the people, the attitude of said newspaper to be inferred either from its silence, which means acquiescence in reality, or its sycophantic prattle of approval, which only makes a bad case still worse.

The tree is known by its fruit. The preacher is estimated by his avowed opinions. The reputation of the actor or musician is based on his performance. The citizen who goes outside the home circle to represent his community is sized up by the style of his garments as well as by what he says. Outside opinion of that man's home town is formed to a large extent with his general deportment as a basis. In like manner the general estimate of strangers is founded upon what a newspaper in a comunity stands for. What is wanted is a well-defined policy, not childish prattle.

THE HAND OF FATE.

EX-ALD. DOBBIN has in a recent issue of the Printer and Publisher an article written in his characteristically breezy vein, in which he deals with an eventful chapter in his own life. When Mr. Dobbin was a youth of tender years, his father, of whom he speaks with commendable filial regard, was an ardent follower of the Liberal party. There were at that time in Peterborough the same two papers that are now published here. One day Mr. Dobbin's father told him to go to the newspaper office and get a job as printer's devil. The future city alderman and publisher had already established a visiting footing with The Review's staff of printers through personal acquaintance with one of its members. In his mind the "printing office" meant one place and one only, a delusion which apparently existed in the parental mind as well, but with a difference. He got a position with The Review and was already well started on his career before his father, to his unbounded amazement, found that the boy had got into the wrong pew. The former had had the rival establishment in view for his son all the time. But the die was cast. The young printer grew up a Conservative, departing from the political creed of his ancestors.

The lessons from this incident are obvious. From the beginning ex-Ald. Dobbin manifested a tendency to take the better part. A kindly fate took him by the hand just when he needed assistance and directed him into the straight pathway of life. With the circumstance in his memory, Mr. Dobbin must now be convinced that "there's a destiny that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will." And no doubt, as he reflects on his narrow escape, he is truly and humbly grateful.

THE WHIPPING OF CHILDREN.

EVERY CHILD, save the mentally incompetent, recognizes parental authority and the right of that authority to impose corporal punishment. The same instinct is implanted in the juvenile nature with regard to the teacher when the boy goes to school. The law permits parents to physically punish their children within reason. Excessive punishment calls for state interference. The same law invests the teacher with parental authority and rights while the child is under academic jurisdiction. The boy of high spirit will submit to punishment from parent or teacher without a murmur. Let that punishment be inflicted by an outsider whose legal right is not recognized, and the result is the juvenile mind resents the procedure as an injustice. Moral lessons may follow physical suffering, but all depends upon the agency employed. The sense of justice is one of the greatest of all human instincts, one of the first in development.

The editor of the George street organ, with a characteristic tendency to be all things to all men, cannot see that it makes any difference who beats a boy so long as he is made to suffer. That editorial chatter last night was distinguished largely for a dense ignorance of human nature in general and the child mind in particular. Perhaps a personal illustration may help out our contemporary in its wanderings.

Suppose that editor gave offence to some citizen, as the best of editors are likely to do, and that the aggrieved resident, while thirsting for personal vengeance, recognized the fact that there was no legal warrant for wreaking that vengeance. Suppose that, by way of escaping responsibility in a measure, the citizen hired a professional thug to beat up the editorial person, what effect would the punishment have upon the victim? Would not the result be eternal resentment rather than a salutary lesson? Juvenile minds, in the matter of reasoning, do not differ essentially from those of editorial dimensions except as to the degree of development.

The irate citizen had no right to take the law into his own hands. It is equally indisputable that he holds no warrant to invest a disinterested or any other party with that right.

In any case the degree of punishment would not likely vary. If inflicted by the principal the inspiration would be personal animosity, while the hired thug would be fired with an ambition to perform his task so thoroughly as to earn his wages. In either event the editorial person would be damaged and the editorial feelings injured.

U. S. FARMERS FOR PROTECTION.

REPRESENTATIVE YOUNG of North Dakota, a Republican and a member of the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives to which tariff legislation is referred, has introduced a bill in Congress repealing the Reciprocity Act of 1911 and the reciprocal provisions in the Underwood tariff law dealing with wheat and potatoes. Automatically, under the Underwood law, the tariff on wheat, wheat flour, semolina, and potatoes, from Canada into the United States, was removed when the Dominion put like American products on the free list. Mr. Young now proposes to repeal the following two sections of the Underwood law which places certain articles on the free list:

"Potatoes and potatoes dried, dessicated or otherwise prepared, not specially provided for in this section; provided that any of the foregoing specified articles shall be subject to a duty of ten per centum ad valorem when imported directly or indirectly from a country, dependency or other sub-division of government which imposes a duty on such articles imported from the United States."

"Wheat, wheat flour, semolina and other wheat products not specially provided for in this section; provided that wheat shall be subject to a duty of ten cents per bushel, that wheat flour shall be subject to a duty of 45 cents per bushel of 196 pounds, and semolina and other products of wheat not specially provided for in this section, ten per cent. ad valorem, when imported directly or indirectly from a country, dependency or other sub-division of government which imposes a duty on wheat or wheat flour or semolina imported from the United States."

"Farmers of the Northwest are against reciprocity with Canada," Mr. Young said. "With a guaranteed price for wheat this year the wheat growers, of course, will not suffer from free Canadian wheat. But next year, when the government guaranty expires, it will make a lot of difference whether Canada can ship wheat into this country free of duty.

"With on open market, free wheat from Canada, provided a surplus crop is grown in that country, might force down prices greatly to the disadvantage of our Northwest farmers."

Potato growers are as much interested in the repeal of reciprocity as the wheat farmers, Mr. Young said.

ELECTION IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

THIS IS ELECTION DAY in the smallest province of the Dominion, Prince Edward Island, and the campaign just closed has been one of the bitterest in a province where such contests are as a rule marked by partisan excitement.

The interest is increased by the fact that the two parties are nearly equally divided, the present government, which is Conservative, having a majority of only four seats. When the House was dissolved in 1915 the Liberals held only two seats. One feature of interest in the outcome is the fact that Premier Arsenault, a French-Canadian, is making his first appeal to the people, and Prince Edward electors are as much influenced by racial and creed considerations as are those of any of the other provinces in Canada.

In Prince Edward Island the sessional indemnity for the members of the Legislature is $200. The premier's pay is $2700. He has only two paid colleagues, and these receive $1500 a year each.

Prince Edward Island has election laws that are peculiarly its own. The province tried out the ballot system and abandoned it after a few years. Today's election will be by open vote. The franchise, too, is limited. Each riding has two candidates. Electors with property qualifications can vote for two members, but those without property are allowed to vote for only one.

THE PAY OF CABINET MINISTERS.

(Kingston Standard.)

> Canada's public men are always about as well paid as their own country is well served. The ability to produce better service is the only acceptable basis of a claim to better pay at Ottawa.—Toronto Telegram.

THERE IS A GOOD deal of truth in this pithy remark of the Telegram, for it is only too true that for the most part we pay in Canda quite high enough for the service we get from some at least of our public servants.

Nevertheless it is not well to generalize too sweepingly. Surely, for example, the Prime Minister who has in truth the weight of nations upon his shoulders, is worth, let us say, more than the manager of a thriving automobile factory or the head of a prosperous brewery before prohibition went into effect! Surely, too, the Minister of Finance, who works day and night and has much weightier problems on his hands than the general manager of one of our large banks, is worth more than the petty salary that is now paid to him. Surely, also, various other cabinet ministers who are capable of earning outside much more than they now earn should not forever be asked to sacrifice themselves on the altar of Duty.

The simple truth of the matter is that unless we begin to pay our cabinet ministers more money we shall lose some of the best of them who, without private means, cannot possibly afford to spend the best years of their lives without making provision against the future. Better by far that some poor men should be overpaid than that the good ones should be so underpaid that they will no longer continue in the public service.

NO BLONDE CAN THRIVE SOUTH OF WINNIPEG

Some theories have been advanced lately which connect a man's success or failure in life with his complexion. Blondes are designed for certain kinds of work, and if they get into other kinds they will fail. Men of one complexion do the thinking for the world; the others get out and do the hustling. More interesting is the theory that this continent, south of Winnipeg, is no place for a real white man to live. An effort to prove that the ultra-violet rays of the sun kill off blonde races in all latitudes south of 45 is made by Dr. Austin O'Malley, a widely known Philadelphia medical man and scientist, and it is to be admitted that he presents some striking arguments before arriving at the conclusion that all the north European races will be extinct south of Winnipeg within a couple of centuries unless there is a constant stream of immigration from their native lands.

First Men Were White.

Starting from the accepted belief that the earliest man was white and lives somewhere about the latitude of the Euphrates basin, Dr. O'Malley says that the negro and the real blonde were developed as mankind ventured south or north. The farther south the early pioneers penetrated the darker hued became the skins of their descendants. Those thato did not become dark perished because they could not survive the murderous ultra-violet rays. Those who went north became more blonded. This is Nature's plan, for the blacker an object is the more quickly it radiates the heat it receives, and the whiter it is the more slowly it lets the heat escape. It is because of this that the northern animals are white. An exception is provided by the Esquimaux, who are dark, but this is in order that their skins may the better withstand the six months of blinding sunshine upon the snowfields and the ice. One might ask why polar bears are not dark for the same reason, but at any rate everybody knows that in the north part of the temperate zone and even in the frigid zones many animals become white in the winter that were brown in the summer.

The Dealy Rays.

It is not so much the matter of cold and warmth that affect the growth and development of mankind and mark inexorably his proper place upon the planet as the sunshine. Not heat rays but light rays make the blonde and the brunette. For instance, physicists working with extra-special rays, Rontgen rays, Becquerel rays and rays from radium must protect themselves with coatings of rubber, lead, glass and other materials that prevent the rays reaching the skin. Otherwise the ultra violet rays would change the protoplasm of cells so that they would let in salts which would disintegrate and kill them. In the United States more than twenty investigators were killed by the action of X-rays before they discovered the necessity of protecting themselves from these baneful emanations. It is exactly the same with the sun's rays. The more direct and the stronger the rays are the more is the necessity for the human beings to be dark pigmented. Thus it is that the negroes in Africa can withstand rays that cut short the lives of white men, and the Scandinavian on the other hand is comfortable under conditions that dark-skinned people

Toronto Is Far South.

There is a general law that certain vegetation and animals can only thrive in certain latitudes. Mankind is not immune from this law, although men live at the Equator and in the Arctic circle. Nature preserves the race that is best adapted to live in certain zones and kills off the others. Dr. O'Malley calculates that from the Equator north or south to the thirtieth latitude is the proper zone for the black man; from the thirtieth to the thirty-fifth is the zone of the brown men like the Malays, from the thirty-fifth to the forty-fifth is the zone of the brunette, Mediterranean type, like the Italian and the Spaniard. From the forty-fifth to the fiftieth is a sort of No Man's Land in which ordinary people like most of us can get along very comfortably, but the zone of the European blonde is above the fiftieth parallel of latitude. Toronto, it might be observed, is slightly south of the forty-fourth parallel. If one looks at a map he may be astonished to find that as far as parallels of latitude are concerned, Toronto is equipped more like Spain than the British Isles.

Irish Dying Out.

The record of the American revolution gives concrete facts to support the general theory. In that struggle it is said that half the soldiers of Washington were natives of Ireland, one-quarter were native Americans, and the rest were English, Scotch, German and Dutch. But among the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Cincinnati and similar societies, composed of descendants of Washington's army, there are now hardly any Irish names. The Irish, being a northern race, have almost disappeared after a century and a quarter. Recently Dr. O'Malley examined some fifty Irish families in northern Pennsylvania, founded by sturdy Irish peasants who had emigrated after the famine of 1847. All the emigrants succeeded and were able to give their children a good start. In the first American generation there was an average of about five children to a family, or 276 in all. If these had continued to be as productive there would have been at least one thousand descendants today. As a matter of fact there are fewer than 200 and nearly all are neurotic, delicate children. In another couple of generations this stock will have become extinct, simply because the ancestors when they went to Pennsylvania went south a thousand miles into a zone intended by Nature for the Italian.

LABOR IN POLITICS

(Toronto World.)

Some trepidation has been felt in certain circles over the election of a socialist ticket in the Trades and Labor elections. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. We do not think the gentleman elected are likely to attempt extreme measures of any kind as a result of their election. They would scarcely be shrewd enough for their positions if they did. They have secured their election by playing politics, and really represent a minority and not a majority.

Labor men of every stripe must know very well that until they elect members to the legislature and to parliament, showing the actual political strength of their party, they will never have any more weight than they have had in the past. Splitting up into socialists and other divisions will not effect anything. A solid labor party, concentrating on vulnerable seats, can elect a number of members in the next elections. Labor men split up over economic fads and personal jealousies will never get anywhere.

Talk of "One Big Union" or any other "Red" agitation will only dissipate whatever strength the labor party possesses. That element of the party showed its utmost strength in Winnipeg and failed to impress anybody with its wisdom. Those who have favored it would do well to profit by their experience, subordinate themselves to the general labor party policies and devote themselves to one political action.

The Fabian Society has succeeded by wise measures in bringing about more social and economic reforms than any other body in Britain, and has done so chiefly by education. The Fabian Society supplied practically all the material used by Lloyd George in his great social campaigns which led to the reform of the house of lords. There is much more still to be done, but it can best be done by steady parliamentary action.

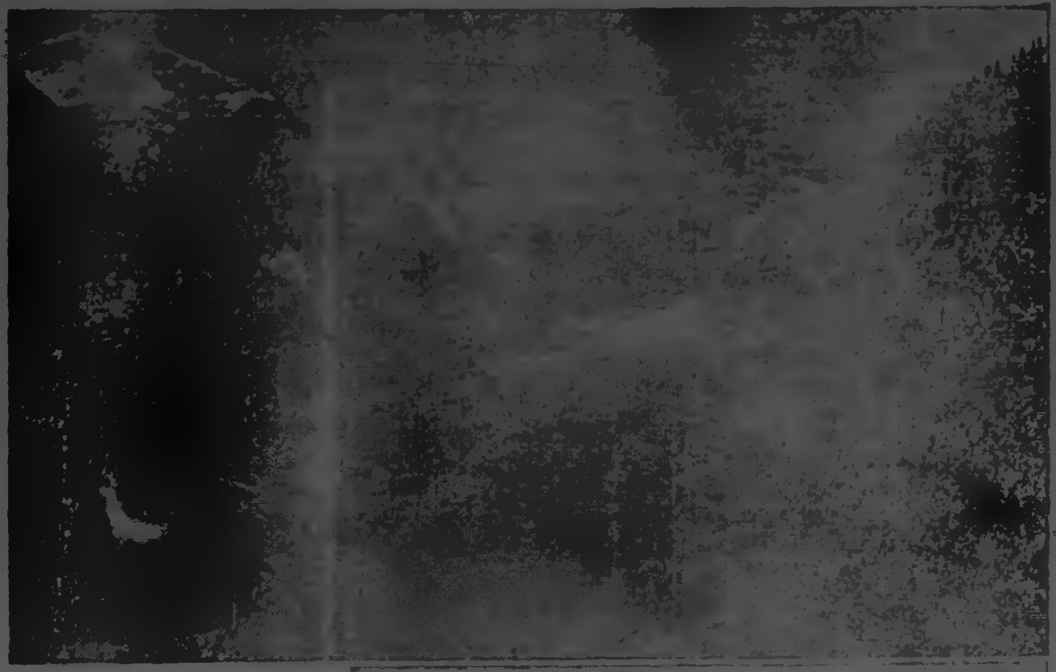
Lake Louise and the Rockies



Lake Louise.

To the ancients all roads led to Rome, and it was the ambition of young and old to behold the "Eternal City" and its wonders. Now however, one might say it is the ambition of every Canadian to behold the "Eternal Snows", and as the Appian way led to Rome, so the great iron road, the Canadian Pacific Railway, leads to the Rocky Mountains. Canadians have a wide field to pick and choose from in the matter of places to spend holidays, but the West has an attraction all its own.

Lake Louise is one of the many beauty spots in the Rocky Mountains, and a trip West is not considered complete without a stop-off there. Lake Louise is one of the Lakes in the Clouds (the others being Lake Agnes and Mirror Lake) and at one time its existence was only known to the Indians. Now however, thanks to the enterprise of the C.P.R., it is visited by thousands of tourists yearly, the railway passing through at this point, and a palatial hotel, the Chateau, having been erected on the lakefront, affording ample accommodation.

Stepping off the train at Laggan the tourist boards an electric car, which runs up the gradient to the lake, the trip only occupying twenty minutes. The drive is a most delightful one, the car, being open on both sides, affords an uninterrupted view of the wonderful scenery with the minimum of exertion. The Bow River is crossed by a pretty little bridge, and in the early morning sunshine the waters sparkle like opal fires, tossing furiously in eddies as the river forces its way down the valley.

Arriving at Lake Louise one feels transported into another atmosphere, if not to another world; feelings of wonder, awe, and admiration grip the mind, compelling a reverential silence. The lake itself is small, but a perfect gem, lying at the base of the Victoria Glacier from which it is fed, its waters being pure turquoise in colour, that deep turquoise so difficult to describe. Behind the lake Mt. Lefroy towers like a giant to the heavens, reaching an altitude of over 10,000 feet—one huge mass of dazzling snow and ice, resembling the Matterhorn in Switzerland. Mt. Aberdeen and the Victoria Glacier form a background unsurpassed for grandeur.

The surrounding country suggests an Alpine valley. Ranges of snow-clad mountains stretch as far as the eye can reach, while the air is filled with the scent of the pines. Fl[illegible] of brilliant colour bloom [illegible] where.

Music in the Home

DUTY OF PARENTS

Encourage Singing and Musical Games at Home

Every parent knows the incalculable advantage of music to the child in after-life. Some of those fathers and mothers who missed the advantages of a musical atmosphere in the homes of their own childhood are the strongest advocates of more and better music teaching in the public schools. They are urging more attention to the place of the study of Music Appreciation on the curriculum. They are insistent in demanding that only singing in school is not enough; there should be available instruction in piano and in the instruments of the symphony orchestra.

All this is very good. Yet parents are not justified in passing over all the responsibility to the schools. Much can be done in the home. Untold good comes from little nursery songs that mothers can easily teach their children. There are plenty of these available and the little ones take to them like ducks to water. Then there are musical games. On Saturday afternoons little folks are often playing about the house, perhaps with some of the neighbor's children. Start them on a musical spool hunt, musical chairs or some other musical game you know of. If one does not come to your mind readily, make one up for the occasion. You know the object and it is easy enough to contrive a simple game working in songs everyone knows, the names of the well-known composers, names of different musical instruments or perhaps stories of the great musicians when they were children.

Again children should be encouraged in their desire for toy musical instruments. A mouth organ, kazoo, whistle or toy piano does not soothe a mother's nerves perhaps and yet they should not be discouraged. The boy who begins with a kazoo or mouth organ ends up with a fiddle, cornet, flute, trombone, 'cello or some really worth while instrument. The girl who gets a toy piano on Christmas morning is helped along the musical pathway until some day she becomes a proficient pianist or vocalist.

There are many ways in which the mother in the home can stimulate a desire for music among her children. The schools should do their part. But the parents should also do theirs.

EXCELLENT EXCHANGE VALUE IN PHONOGRAPH RECORDS

[illegible] the reader, what [illegible] amount of great [illegible] in the making of a phonograph record. How seldom we stop to consider what excellent exchange value we are receiving in return for [illegible]. At the risk of being accused of having a commercial mind, one might seek to impress this fact on the public and remind them that there has been thousands of dollars spent on preparing the little disc that is sent out for the pleasure of the public. One might even go further and speak of the millions of dollars that have gone into the perfecting of the phonograph, the training of the singer or musician and into the making of the little disc of black composition which shows a seemingly meaningless circle of wavy lines. But the lines are not meaningless, as the mind of the magician has discovered, and when the tone arm of the phonograph is applied these very wavy lines produce the volume of sound which so charms us all. They produce the charm of the poet's song lyric, the musician's interpretation of the great masters, or a singer's reading; all are so vitally interwoven that they are a never ending source of wonder to all who listen intelligently. To those who have vision there can be no limit to the possibilities of this wonderful instrument, for it can be a musical instrument, not a mere talking machine, there can be no limit to its possibilities if the inventive mind is allowed free scope, as applied to its improvement. True it is nearly perfect now, but there are surely undreamt of possibilities in every invention and who shall say that the talking machine is an exception to the rule.

WATCH THE "KEY LOG"

Any lumberman can tell you what "the key log" is. When the logs are set adrift upon the river to float down stream to their destination it often happens that they will [illegible] and other masses of logs [illegible] upon them, will pile up and stick between the banks. [illegible] the skilled lumberman will leap from log to log until he finds the log that first caused the trouble, the "key log". A few jabs with his hook at the right spot and presto! the jam is broken, and the logs placidly resume their journey down stream.

Now it is so in the practice of a piano piece. When it fails to go smoothly after what seems to have been adequate effort, just stop a moment and search carefully for the "key log". You will usually find that the "key log" is that scale passage on the first page, that long arpeggio at the top of the second page, that difficult-to-finger flight of three-membered chords just before the end.

The whole piece is being held up by this difficulty, the "key log" is responsible. Get to work with courage, and break the jam by a little energetic practice upon that one point. You will soon find the whole piece moving rapidly and as smoothly as you could wish. Try it and [illegible]

KEEP UP YOUR PRACTICE

It seems very hard to practise when other children are playing but it pays in the end. It seems a task to practice slowly, and have the correct fingering, and count aloud! And then time must be given to the looking up of the meaning of the foreign terms in the dictionary. "[illegible] glad I am when I know the meaning of the terms without looking them up!" said a young student recently.

To become a successful musician one must take time to be thorough for no one who is careless with time, [illegible], fingering, or any of the many other points can make a success of their work.

STUDENTS LOVE MUSIC IF GIVEN A CHANCE TO HEAR IT

It has been noticeable that in the immediate past a growing number of school inspectors, public and high school teachers, and also university professors, have expressed themselves as more convinced than ever of the value of music in our general scheme of education. Men of the staff of McGill, Toronto, Queen's and Western colleges have paid their tribute to the educational value of the teaching of music, even to the teaching of the rank and file of the students how to appreciate good music.

It is, therefore, interesting to see that leading university men in other countries are of like mind on the general principle. "I believe that we ought to do and shall do a great deal more than we do at present," said Dr. Arthur T. Hadley, President of the Yale University, in an interview not long ago, regarding his opinion of music as a vital educational asset. He does not believe that the colleges take full account of music's cultural and educational value, but expresses optimism for the future. "Every good system of education must make place for music," he declared emphatically, adding further that in his opinion music was a vital educational asset, to be recognized the same as mathematics and other subjects.

Dr. Noble MacCracken, President of Vassar College, was also very enthusiastic for giving music a prominent place in the college curriculum. It is his belief that in most people, interest in and the love for music is dormant and needs to be aroused.

"Music is essential to the human make-up," says Dr. MacCracken thus emphasizing the importance he attaches to music in modern education. "The college should also provide concerts and instruction in music appreciation for the whole student body to awaken their dormant aptitude.

Students love music if they are given a chance to hear it and to know something about it. "As a matter of fact," he continued, "music's educational value is not yet appreciated. I believe that music is a vital study in the program of college education and I hope the day is not far off when it will be generally recognized as such."

THE DARK HORSE.

How the Name Was Applied to a Political Possibility.

A novel written by Disraeli, earl of Beaconsfield, entitled "The Young Duke" and published in 1831, contained a description of a horse race in which the following sentence occurred:

"A dark horse which had never been thought of and which the careless St. James had never even observed in the list rushed past the grand stand in sweeping triumph."

This was only a horse race, but it gave prominence to the fact that the race was won by a dark horse which had not attracted any notice until he came in a winner.

This may have been the origin of the phrase "a dark horse," which, as used in American politics, means a person not prominently considered as a candidate when a convention meets or during its earlier ballots, but who suddenly develops unexpected strength and wins.

A notable case in point was that of James A. Garfield in the Republican national convention of 1880. On the first ballot for president he did not receive a single vote, but he received ten votes on the second ballot, one vote on the twentieth ballot, fifty votes on the thirty-fifth ballot and was nominated by 399 on the thirty-sixth ballot.

Foot of the Fly.

You have seen a boy use what he calls a "sucker," a round, flat piece of leather, which is soaked in water and flattened against a stone so that all the moisture between the stone and the leather is pressed out. He picks up a brick with a string attached to the leather. Since there is no air between the leather and the stone the atmosphere presses the leather so firmly against the stone that the stone can be picked up by the leather.

A fly has suckers on his feet, the Popular Science Monthly explains, which act very much on the same principle. As soon as he puts down a foot he automatically squeezes the air out between it and the surface upon which he is walking. The atmosphere therefore presses him against the ceiling or wall.

Some years ago in a certain county court, which was not one of the best fitted up places, three auctioneers were seated in a pewlike contrivance awaiting the judge's order to give evidence.

"What's that?" asked the judge.

"Oh, it's nothing, your honor," replied a ready and facetious lawyer. "It's only three auctioneers gone off in one lot."

The Ten-Thirty Call

By PERCY WILSON

(Copyright.)

Snapper was looking over the yardmaster's shoulder when the operator handed the latter the order for an extra. As was not unusual with him on very slight provocation, the yardmaster immediately "went off the iron." "Where's that call-boy?" he demanded. "What's become of that redhead? Where is—Oh!" as he turned his head and came afoul of Snapper's smirking countenance, "here you are!"

"Yes, here I are!" mocked Snapper. "Go on, go on—say what you were going to. Don't mind me! Where did you expect to find me—in your lap?" The call-boy was aggrieved.

"What's the earliest you can call this extra for?" was the brisk query. "Ten-thirty?"

With an exasperating affection of indifference, Snapper let his eye wander to the clock, gaped a minute over the crew-board, and gradually came around to the book. "I reckon," he answered. Then, with sudden interest: "Who's to shovel smoke?"

"Oh, you take notice, do you? Now, that's what I want to impress on you. Listen."

"'Laying a hand to his ear,'" quoted Snapper from a favorite author, and suiting action to the speech, "'he gave close heed to the fiendish disclosure.' Go on."

The yardmaster was too accustomed to these burlesques to honor them with any attention. "Go for Burnside," he directed.

"He was let off."

"I know that. Pay attention. He was to be off until midnight, unless we should need him in some emergency this morning; and this is the emergency. He promised to stay at home till nine o'clock, and not to leave town before ten." He glanced at the clock. "It's only eight-fifty-eight now. You ought to find him easily," winking to the operator.

"Sure!" returned Snapper. "If only I hadn't bent one of me wings! What was it the coal-heaver wanted off for, anyway?"

"To rob a bank, maybe. Don't bother me; but go get him."

"Put his name down," said Snapper in disgust. "I'll get him."

The yardmaster entered the name and handed the call-book over. "Now, hustle," he directed.

Snapper thrust the book in his pocket and struck an attitude. "Beware, James Burnside!" he declaimed. "Your doom is knelled, and the avenger—"

The avenger was the yardmaster, and Snapper got through the doorway just in time to escape his foot.

"Hang that kid!" laughed the yardmaster. "He gets on my nerves, with his spouting and fool antics. But he's a good caller," he observed to the operator; "and, mind my word, he'll come back here with Burnside's signature in his book. Heaven knows where he'll find him, though, for Jim's tricky, and he'll dodge if he can. He did beg hard to be off."

In spite of his unhesitating assertion, the call-boy had very grave doubts about getting Burnside. The promise to remain at his boarding place for a call till nine o'clock made it unlikely that he would be there one minute later, while the additional hour did not give much time for finding him in a town of fifteen thousand people. What Snapper most desired to know was, where was he intending to go at ten? He had a suspicion that it had something to do with Kitty Carnigan.

Being too wise, however, to attempt to get this from the young lady herself, as soon as he had called those two of the crew who lived most convenient, he moved directly on the engineer, whom, in the usual order of convenience for himself, he would otherwise have called last of all. His information came without his asking for it.

"Who's to fire for me this trip?" the engineer inquired as he took the book.

"Can't you see?" said Snapper, laying a finger on the name.

"Ho!" laughed the engineer, "you'll not get Burnside. He's going out to Maple Park on the ten o'clock car with his girl and her folks to a basket picnic. He's keeping an eye peeled for you."

To lie in wait and take him from his inamorata as they were starting for the car would have suited the call-boy's dramatic longings most; but it was not an impossibility that the fireman had already forestalled this by an arrangement to meet the party somewhere along the line.

In this uncertainty the immediate thing to be done was to get on his quarry's trail. Snapper gritted his teeth and struck across the meadow. At the farther side of the run he stopped and, on a sudden thought, got down and examined both ends of the short plank that spanned it. Without doing anything more, however, he got up again and went on, and soon entered the Carnigan's rear gate. He had kept his eye sharply on the kitchen window, and flattered himself that he had stolen up unnoticed; yet, when he stopped at the kitchen door, Miss Carnigan seemed not surprised to see him!

There was something suspicious in this. To his inquiry she replied that Mr. Burnside had been there that morning, but had gone into town. Was he wanted?

Oh, no, he wasn't wanted. Snapper had merely noted that he had been looking poorly of late, and stopped to inquire about his health.

He sprinted to the corner just in time to see the fireman turn to the right a block ahead. On an easy trot the call-boy followed after. Overtaking a brakeman, Snapper asked if he had seen Burnside.

"Burnside?" said the man. "Yep; just passed here with throttle wide open and both pops up. Hit the curve and shot up that first alley"—pointing—"and he was going some. Why, I'll bet he was halfway up the side of that house when he made the turn, and I reckon you'll find his footmarks on the wall.

"He called to me to tell you to hurry up, kid," he said with a grin; "and you want to move lively, or he'll lose you."

Snapper knew this was all gammon. He glanced at his watch. It was almost nine-thirty.

"I'll look for those footmarks some other time," he remarked dryly; "I'm in a hurry now," and he started off afresh at a jog trot in the direction that had been indicated.

"There's that long-legged kid again!" ejaculated Burnside. "If he comes back here to the kitchen, I'll slip out the front door and join you on the car somewhere. If he comes to the front, keep him till I can get to the other side of the run; and after he's gone, I'll come around by the street."

Snapper's schedule took him to the front door. There was no answer to his first ring, so he rang again; and shortly Miss Carnigan answered.

"Oh! it's you, is it?" was her tart greeting. "What do you want now? It's a pity you couldn't have come around to the kitchen door."

"That's the fault of me tender heart, Kitty," returned the unabashed Snapper. "I want Jimmy Burnside, and I couldn't bear to break it to him suddenly. You tell him."

"Didn't I tell you he had left here?"

"Aw, quit it, Kitty! Ain't he going on the picnic with you? Sure!"

"Well," was the admission, "he came back after you left, but he's gone again. You might find him at his boarding house."

Snapper struggled to keep a straight face.

"I've been there once," he returned; "and the book of rules says"—he held his call book close to his nose and thumbed over some blank pages—"it says, here: 'Rule 106—In all cases of doubt or uncertainty, see for yourself.' I've got to do it, Kitty," and he pushed into the house.

"Oh, very well!" retorted the young lady, and followed through to where her mother and a younger sister were finishing the packing of the picnic baskets in the kitchen. "Now! are you satisfied?"

Snapper made no reply. Something of more immediate interest absorbed all his faculties, for his eyes had lighted on the top layer in one of the baskets. "Are those some of your own pies, Mrs. Carnigan?" he inquired in awed tones.

"Sure!" was the answer. "Whose would they be?"

"But, some that you baked yourself?" he persisted with an air of strong disbelief.

"Of course!"

"Mrs. Carnigan"—he wanted a calm, judicial answer to this quest—"are your pies as good as they used to be?"

"Well, I never!" cried Mrs. Carnigan, flinging up her hands. "If you ain't the blarneyer!"

Snapper was not a beauty. He was still growing; his joints were too loose, his feet too big, his clothes too small; yet when he opened his mouth to take in the piece of pie that was immediately cut for him, expanding until his freckles ran together and his whole countenance resembled nothing so much as a wedge disappearing through a large, rusty washer, he became for the moment a sight that gave true joy to Mrs. Carnigan's domestic heart.

"That certainly was good," he murmured in heartfelt commendation as he swallowed the last of it. Then he met Miss Carnigan's anxious eye and gave a sudden impish start. "Gee, Kitty!" he exclaimed. "Someone's fell in the creek."

Stopping at the creek merely long enough to pull the plank out of the water and set it roughly in place, he hastened to the boarding house and went softly up to the firemen's room. He snickered to himself at hearing Burnside muttering objurgations inside and thrashing wet clothes about.

In this dilemma the pie furnished him a hint, for, as it sought a cosy corner of his anatomy in which to dispose itself comfortably, it gave him a gentle internal tweak. In an instant he had doubled up as though taken with a violent cramp and, falling against the door with a horrible groan, seized the knob.

The door was locked, but as he sank on down to the floor he kept up a piteous moaning. In another moment the door opened and he fell half inside.

"You—" began the fireman, then lost speech.

"Aw! sign the book," said Snapper, thrusting it at him. "And be quick about it, too," he added sternly. "I can't be fooling all my time on you."

Burnside mechanically signed.

"I hated to wet you up, Jimmy," said Snapper as he took back the book, "but—"

He slammed the door and raced down the stairs from the irate fireman.

A BRILLIANT FUNCTION WAS THE PETERBORO GOLF CLUB DANCE

Near a Hundred Guests Tripped the Light Fantastic and Had a Good Time Generally

Nearly a hundred couples—lovers of the terpsichorean art—enjoyed a real treat, last night, tripping the light fantastic on the acceptably waxed floors of the Peterborough and County Golf Club House, were provision for pleasure was exuberant and the surroundings delightful.

Those who were so fortunate as to be present last night will be convinced of the fact that there is nothing slow about this organization and when it comes to the art of graceful dancing the golfers can certainly "show them how" in elegant manner. One strong point in favor of this recreation was the ideal weather; but its altoether likely those ladies in charge had been keeping close tab on the probs. The guests who were not disposed to dance were content to occupy benches in the background and watch the others perform, and they seemed to derive equally as much enjoyment out of it, at least they said they did. But the music furnished by Moher and Fitzgerald's orchestra was the kind that would make any one want to dance. It was alive. It was stirring. It was the kind of music that would quicken a person's pulse and have them up on the floor before they were aware of it.

One special feature of the occasion was the decoration scheme. Of course, this beautiful site lends itself well to almost any ornamental design, but the one carried out for this affair was both artistic and imposing. This consisted of flags and pennants, harmonously arranged, and of rows of prettily tinted electric bulbs, strung n tent to club house. The effect was beautiful indeed.

Most gratifying was the fact that every one seemed to forget their cares, for the time being, and went in for having a delightful evening. And the congenial spirit of mutual good-fun that permeated this function was very pleasing. Do the Peterborough golfers know how to arrange a good, lively terpsichorean event? They certainly do.

To Determine Her Amount of Property

GERMANY WILL WITHDRAW ALL CURRENT PAPER MONEY.

Weimar, July 24.—In order to determine exactly how much property in Germany is available for inevitable taxation, the imperial finance ministry has decided to withdraw all current paper money, which will be replaced by bonds or emergency papers. These in turn can be exchanged for new paper money when issued. Everyone will be compelled to surrender all cash on hand and he will get back only what he has turned in on the basis of bonds, as the old paper money will be declared invalid.

All stocks and bonds will be subjected to stamping and thus brought under control. All unstamped papers will lose their value. Similar measures will be taken with contracts of companies, to determine invested values.

MEN ARE SCARCE IN SOME LINES IN TORONTO

Toronto, July 24.—Men who are idling away their time in Toronto, claiming that they cannot get work, have themselves to blame according to Rev. J. A. Miller, Superintendent of the Toronto branches of the Government Employment Bureau. There is plenty of work to be had if men are willing to leave the city and try farming or some other line they have not tackled before. It is impossible for the bureau to fill the demand for men for railroad construction and flax-pulling.

OSHAWA HOUSING

Oshawa, July 23.—The Oshawa Housing Commission has under construction one hundred houses in all seventy of which are being built independently by the Commission in the best residential parts of the town, for sale under the Government housing plan. These houses will not be for rent. The Housing Commission has taken full advantage of the $300,000 Government appropriation.

CPL. GAUTHIER WELCOMED

Belle River, Ont., July 24. — Cpl. Theodore A. Gauthier has just returned to his home here from overseas. He sailed on the Mauretania, and arrived at Halifax five days after leaving England. A reception was held at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gauthier.

CITY SAWDUST FIRE.

The fire brigade was called out about 3.40 this afternoon to attend to a sawdust fire at the east end of Hunter street. Part of the brigade returned soon after, and the fire was extinguished before much damage was done.

Alfred Gors, Ross Lake, Orillia, aged 71, was killed by the discharge of a gun he was taking down from the wall.

Sent Down Two Years For Horse Stealing

TWO BOYS STOLE A MARE, HARNESS AND BUGGY—ONE CONVICTED A THIRD TIME.

Toronto, July 24.—Convicted a third time on a charge of horse stealing, Austin Ellis was yesterday sentenced to two years less one day by Magistrate Brunton at the County Police Court. About a year ago Ellis was convicted of the same charge and released on suspended sentence. His second offence, shortly after, netted him a six months' term at the jail farm. On the third occasion, yesterday, his 14-year-old brother, Joseph, was charged with him, and was sentenced to one year in the Mimico Reformatory. Young Joseph has already had three years' experience at the Industrial School.

The two boys, according to the evidence, stole a mare, harness and buggy from Cameron McCrae and traded it at Ballantyne for another horse. Their second horse ran away and as one of the buggy wheels was smashed they got rid of it by trading with a man who they met. Later they entered the employ of a farmer at Whitchurch, where they were arrested by Constable McMullen.

A PLUCKY OPERATOR.

He Prevented Supply of Coal Reaching German Ship.

Behind the curt references, made in legal formality, in the British law courts recently lies a story of the sea that would have fired the imagination and speeded the pen of Jules Verne or Clark Russell. The central figure is a young Englishman.

From the first there must have been something sinister attaching to the fate of the American steamship Edna, also known at times as Jason and Magellan.

On a certain voyage she was fitted with a wireless installation, and carried as operator a young Britisher, Guy Duncan Smith, who was in the employ of the American Marconi Co. of New York.

In the guise of a Mexican vessel the ship, just after war had been declared between Russia and Germany, made San Francisco and took on board a great cargo of coal. Young Smith was suspicious, and before leaving port discovered that the coal aboard the German-Mexican vessel was intended for the German corsair Leipzig.

Smith was astounded to learn that a German wireless operator was to be taken on board, and was informed that if he refused duty the Teuton would take his place! It was then that Smith found that the German did not understand the Marconi system, but was acquainted only with the German "Telefunken" brand.

At once Smith decided that no messages of his should assist his country's enemies. He shortened the length of the sound waves and hocussed the enemy into the belief that he was sending out calls for the Leipzig when he was doing actually —nothing at all."

But one day the captain ordered him to get into direct touch with the raider and gave him the code word "Dana." Smith knew that to refuse might bring the reward of a bullet. Nevertheless he refused. The German operator was sent for, but before he could arrive Smith short-circuited the "tone" of the wireless and the wave-length was altered. Sparks were seen in the wireless room but nothing radiated from the aerial!

The Telefunken operator was puzzled. For three days and three nights he tried to call the Leipzig, but in vain. The captain was compelled to reinstate Smith, and it was then that the Marconi operator gave his final display of courageous cleverness. With shrewd foresight he made a great show of calling up the Leipzig. He called her for hours on end, but he took equal care to get his messages "cross purposed."

It was only when the vessel reached Le Pas that Smith found he could use the instrument.

The Iddy Umpties and Others.

Although the German is only too willing to do anything for the entertainment of the British troops in Cologne, the army of occupation has not been content to leave it in his hands. As soon as the British Tommy had got settled, he demanded something more native to his ways of amusing himself than those provided by the German cabaret or the German cinema. He bestirred himself, therefore, and others bestirred themselves for him, and, to-day, there are three picture houses in the city, accommodating over 3,000, an opera house, well supplied with first-class companies, and two other theatres where the inimitable soldier companies delight their fellows. And such names as they have—the Tabs, the Crumps, the Pedlars, the Irresponsibles, the Chequers and the Iddy Umpties—all drawing packed houses, such as would bring tears of gratitude to the eyes of the most phlegmatic of managers.

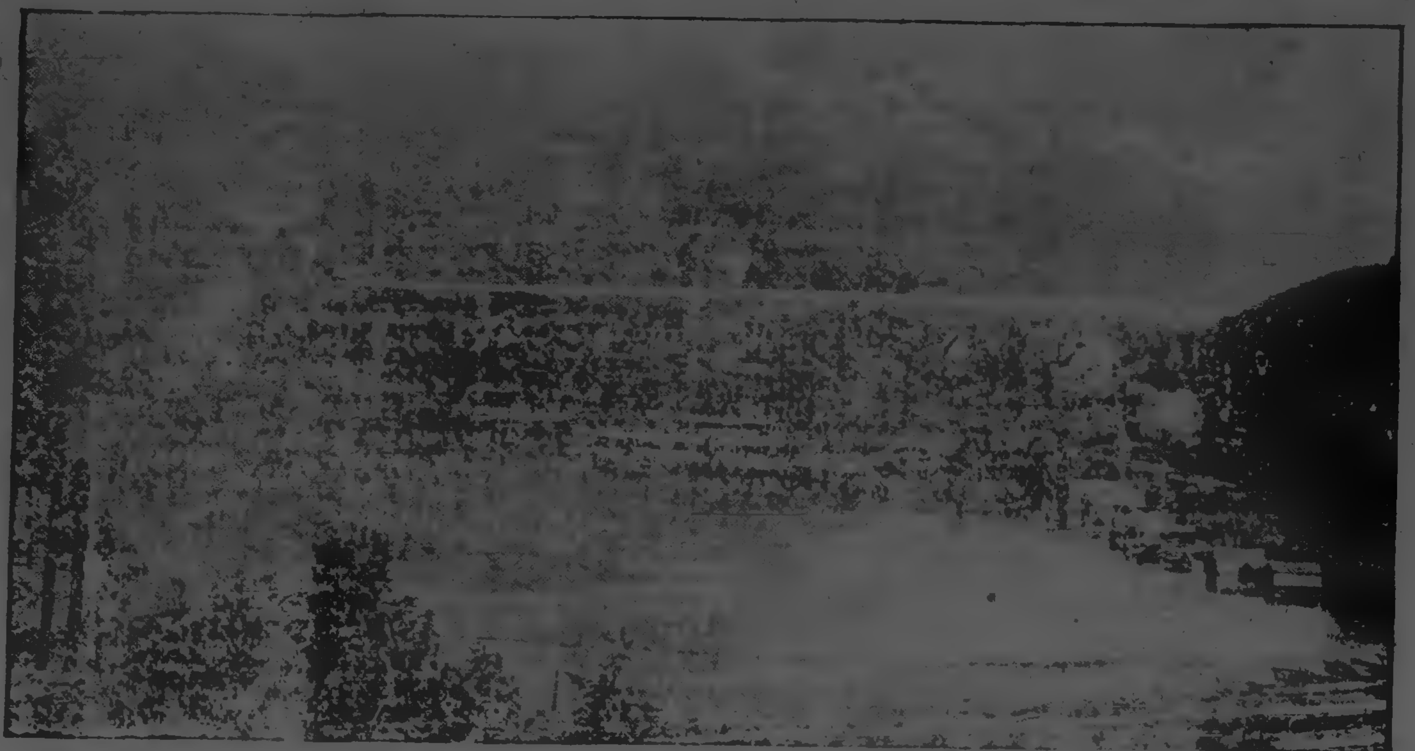
Wax Ancestors.

Many ancient families in England have stored away life-sized figures in wax of their ancestors, made at the time of the original's death. The Duke of Norfolk has the figures of three wives of one of his ancestors, which are kept in a glass case at one of his country seats.

Police interpreters are stationed in the principal streets of Paris to assist allied soldiers.

Many vessels are detained at Liverpool owing to the dockers' strike.

Fishing Before Business: Back at 7 p.m.



(1) Kaslo, B.C., on the Beautiful Upper Kootenay Lake.
(2) Quiet Fishing in Noisy Waters.

Fishermen who like a tent to live in, log fires, provisions from a country grocery store, fish that they catch themselves and roast on embers or on a frying pan that they provide, should take Upper Kootenay Lake into consideration when thinking of deciding on a fishing trip. This lake and the streams that feed it are less well known to anglers outside of British Columbia than they should be.

Salmon fishing is unexcelled on the lake. R. McGregor, who is an enthusiastic Kaslo sportsman, says: "I have locked my store door, walked across the street, jumped into a row boat, let out a line and got a salmon in less than half an hour." The best season for salmon fishing is from May 15th to June 30th, and from the beginning of September to the middle of November. Mr. McGregor again says: "I got a 19-lb. salmon within half a mile of my door on the 20th of November last." This hearty Scotchman, who came from Fifeshire, the same part of Scotland as was the birthplace of the late Sir William Whyte, former Vice-President of the C. P. R. knows all that is to be known about the Kootenay Lake fishing region. He recommends fly fishers to go to the mouths of the creeks in July, August and September. "I do considerable fishing myself," he declares. "In fact, I am honest about my weakness. When they are biting good I often lock up and write on a blackboard outside my store: 'Fishing before business. Will be back at 7.00 p.m.' However, I usually stay as long as they bite well." Mr. McGregor is always glad to see anglers at Kaslo, and delighted to tell them all about the kind of tackle he finds most successful. "I will answer any inquiries to any tourist at any time," he says.

There are several good guides for fishermen available at Kaslo. For salmon fishing it is best to make Kaslo headquarters, and take the waters in a row-boat. Fly fishers are recommended to furnish themselves with bread, butter, any canned goods they need, a frying pan, blankets, and canvas for a tent, then take a motor launch and go to the mouth of some of the best fishing creeks, send the motor launch away, with instructions to call back a few days later, and then pitch a tent. If the campers know anything at all about fishing they are likely to find all the trout they can eat and lots to bring home with them. Those who have undertaken such a holiday say that if we all could have a few weeks of this kind of life annually there would be less patent medicine concerns in the country.

Big game hunters also find a sphere for their activities in the neighbourhood of Kaslo, five miles from the C.P.R. line, in the hunting season. Deer abound, and black, brown and grizzly bears are numerous. A government agent at Kaslo issues licenses to game hunters.

The scenery in this district is extremely beautiful, but trails are not yet generally opened up. Mr. McGregor is loud in praise of the glacier scenery. He likes to be "Up amongst the eagles" where he can see numerous mountain peaks, "just like a field of great hay cocks."

Kaslo, the headquarters of tourists to Upper Kootenay Lake, is one of the most beautiful little cities in Canada, the centre of a prosperous mining and fruit growing district in the Kootenays, B.C., owes its origin some twenty years ago to a New Zealander, Mr. D. P. Kane, who with a fellow prospector saw the possibilities of the promontory on which it is located and decided to clear the brush and establish a townsite. Originally it was called Kane's Landing, but as the community grew, a picturesque Indian name signifying "the place where the blackberries grew," was adopted. Sixteen years ago the early residents began to plant fruit trees, and to-day there is no more successful orchard country in Canada, cherries being particularly plentiful. For this the mild climate is largely responsible, the Kootenay Lake never freezing over.

The city is surrounded by mining camps providing lead, zinc, copper, silver, and gold.

British Government Is Placing Returned Soldiers On the Land in England

THE British Government departments dealing with the plans for placing returned soldiers on the land have been lax in keeping the public informed of the progress of the resettlement plans. This reticence has been productive of an amount of adverse criticism which was not deserved.

Only a few days ago the monthly meeting between the local labor representatives and the Food and Food Production Ministries resulted in such a storm of protest against the supposed inaction of the Government that only the cleverness of the chairman obtained a hearing for the representative of the Board of Agriculture, which allowed him to explain the details and progress of work done.

The Government, it develops, has four plans. The first is the forming of a training colony. Here the men take a course in practical agriculture, which is considered necessary, as many soldiers going on the land have had little experience, principally in working an allotment or a kitchen garden only. During tuition the men are paid $7.50 a week, with a further allowance if married for their wives and children.

After completing the course of training men with capital are to be provided with plots under the small holdings act. The Government will grant on loan for the purchase of land or stock a sum equal to the capital of the applicant.

Under what is known as a tenant holding there is provided a cottage with sufficient land to keep a cow and a little small stock and to provide a kitchen garden for growing the family vegetables. This is for men who are skilled workers and is instituted with the idea that the man works the ground for his own needs and spends the greater part of his time working at his own trade.

For the man without capital the plan favored is that of an industrial colony. A large farm will be worked by these men under the direction of a skilled manager. The staff will be employed at a wage slightly higher than the minimum prevailing in the district, and will receive a percentage of profit after expenses have been paid.

The Board of Agriculture has acquired about 6,000 acres in four districts. At Patrington, in Yorkshire, Holbeach in Lincolnshire, Heath [illegible] the coast of Carmarthenshire colonies have been arranged.

Patrington, an estate of 2,363 acres, will be run as a single great industrial farm, the profits of which will be shared by those who do the work. Holbeach is to be a group of distinct small holdings of ten acres each organized on a co-operative basis.

The Patrington Crown Colony, which is about three miles from the village of that name, is not far from the Humber, and is known locally as "Warpe Land"—that is, land reclaimed from the sea. The deep alluvial soil is better suited for heavy crops of wheat and beans than for fruit growing, and market gardening, which are the staple products of the small holdings of ten acres. This is the reason for the profit-sharing system and the policy of working the crown colony as a single big farm.

The colony is easily distinguished by the [illegible] pairs of red roofed and red-walled cottages built for the settlers. Each house has a half acre of land for the resident's own use. The central homestead is a typical English farm of ancient type, suggestive of peace and prosperity.

A man and his family can earn a fair and healthy livelihood on the Patrington colony. The current rate of wages is $8.40, while the settler's rent amounts to only 72 cents a week. For this he gets a five-roomed house and a half acre of garden.

Holbeach is an object lesson in colonization on a technical plan. It consists of about 1,000 acres, 200 of which are reserved as a central demonstration farm, round which the eighty ten-acre holdings are grouped. From this central farm the colonists will get implements, seeds, fertilizers and everything they require on co-operative terms, and also free expert advice from the director. The centre will also undertake the distribution of produce on the most advantageous terms. Vegetables and fruit will be the staples of production, and will be marketed in the Midland towns and in London.

Swift Made Proverbs.

George Birkbeck Hill in his studies of Johnson and Boswell touched the insoluble mystery of Dean Swift. Here is one of his notes upon a saying attributed to Swift's grandmother. Whether the saying that Swift attributes to his grandmother was really hers may well be doubted. He used to coin proverbs and pass them off for old. One day when walking in a garden, he saw some fine fruit, none of which was offered to him by its stingy owner. "It was an old saying of my grandmother's," he said, "always pull a peach when it lies in your reach." He accordingly plucked one, and his example was immediately followed by all the rest of the company under the sanction of that good old saying. Another day, seeing a farmer thrown from his horse into a slough, he asked him whether he was hurt. "No," he replied, "but I am woundily bemired." "You make good the old proverb," said Swift, "the more dirt the less hurt." The man seemed much comforted with the old saying, but said he had never heard it before; and no wonder.

The Dogs' Bill.

The Hon. Stephen Coleridge, the able president of the National Anti-Vivisection Society in England, is certainly making a sturdy stand in support of "The Dogs' Bill," now before the British Parliament. Two of his most recent utterances are specially worth quoting. "The opponents of the bill," he says in a letter to the London Times, "seem to advance two objections to it. They begin by asserting that unless dogs are used for experiments physiology will cease to advance. Even if this hypothesis were a true one, we think it would be far better for the world to be without more physiology than without pity. It does not break our bones to be told that such opinions are manifestations of sentiment. There are worse things in the world than sentiment, and one of them is cruelty." And again: "The present position, therefore, is that there is nothing to prevent a cruel man from receiving a license and certificates under the present law. No one testifies to his humaneness when he applies for his license, only his scientific qualities are vouched for. And when a cruel man has got his license and certificates, nothing but his own taste prevents him from torturing dogs all day and all night." The bill, if passed into law, would render it illegal to use dogs for vivisection purposes.

Dominoes for the Blind.

Dominoes for the blind are rather ingenious. Recognizing the need of something that would not easily be displaced as the fingers of the blind passed back and forth reading the numbers on the face of the dominoes, the inventor has given us a set of interlocking pieces. The mortise joint makes them hold together no matter how much they are brushed around. The number on each piece is indicated by the raised heads of brass tacks, easily read by the touch.

Old Name for February.

The old Britons gave the nickname "Fildyke" to February, not because it is a particularly wet month, the average rainfall being the least of any month in the year, but because the melting snow on the hills causes the rivers and dykes to overflow. When there is a superabundance of snow and rain in February there is too much of what would be a good thing in moderation, and floods where they are least welcome.

Another Car Ferry Likely for Buffalo

CITY COUNCIL PASSES BYLAW TO PROVIDE IMPROVED SERVICE.

Bridgeburg, July 23.—The long-drawn-out argument between the International Ferry Company, which operate boats between Fort Erie and Buffalo, and the city of Buffalo over poor service has been ended, insofar as the city is concerned, by the passage of a new bylaw by the City Council of Buffalo, which will compel the Ferry Company to furnish better service for automobiles.

The new arrangement made by the city of Buffalo in order to make the Ferry Company obey its mandates is practically the same as the Canadian charter arrangement with the Ottawa Marine Department officials. This feature was lacking in the charter by which the Ferry Company operated in American waters. During the big ferry fight three or four years ago, when an opposition company was started, the Canadian Marine Department drew up a new and stringent clause with the Ferry Company, forcing it to furnish service to meet all demands. The old charter had still remained in vogue on the United States side of the river. Now with the amendments passed by the Buffalo City Council, the Ferry Company will be forced to improve its services.

One efficient ferry is in operation, and a smaller one. It is likely that a larger ferry will be put in operation in a day or so, and the smaller boat taken off. The ferries are equipped with end-on arrangements for auto-handling.

All Food Producing Should Be Fostered

IS DECISION REACHED BY ARMY AND NAVY VETERANS TODAY.

Montreal, Que., July 24.—That stimulus should be given by the government not only to agriculture but to other food producing possibilities in Canada, notably stock raising and fishing, was the decision arrived at today by the Army and Navy Veterans' Convention.

Discussion on this subject arose from a Halifax resolution which emphasized that too much stress was being laid by the government on the question of supporting agriculture. It was urged that ex-soldiers in vocations other than farming deserved and were in need of just as much assistance as farmers. Various measures for assisting ex-soldiers in canning, fishing, stock raising and other industries were discussed and passed on to the Government for action.

FARMER MOORE HAS GAINED 37 POUNDS

ALL TROUBLES OVERCOME BY TAKING TANLAC—HAD SUFFERED EIGHT YEARS.

"I suffered for eight long years before I found a medicine that would do me any good, but since taking Tanlac I have gained exactly thirty-seven pounds, and all my troubles have been completely overcome," said John H. Moore, a well-known and prosperous farmer who lives on R.F.D., No. 4, Empire Ill., while in Shorthouse's drug store in Bloomington the other day.

"When I commenced taking Tanlac," he continued, "I had reached the point where I couldn't do any work at all, and was forced to hire a hand to take my place on the farm. I had suffered so much and so long with stomach trouble, I was just about down and out so far as health and strength was concerned. During all these years my appetite was very poor, and what little I did eat would cause me worlds of suffering. Gas would form on my stomach so bad that I could hardly get my breath, and I would have the worst sort of cramping spells. I finally got to where I was hardly ever able to retain what I ate, and would actually get nauseated every time I looked at anything to eat. I had fallen off so much, and was so low in health that all my friends were talking about the awful condition I was in. I was very nervous all the time and never knew what a good night's sleep was.

"I heard about Tanlac then, and I though I would give it a trial. Well, sir, my friends and neighbors are talking differently now. They are asking me what in the world have I been taking to make such a big improvement in my condition, and it just does my heart good to tell them that Tanlac did it. It is wonderful the way I have gained in weight and strength. I can go to the field now and do as much hard work as any hand on the farm. My stomach seems to be in perfect condition, and I never have indigestion and am not bothered with gas forming after meals. I have the best appetite I ever had in my life, and can eat just anything I want. I am free from all that nervousness, too, and I sleep just like a fly every night. Tanlac has done all that for me, and I'm as well and hearty now as I ever was in my life, and as long as I live, I will pass the good work along to others who suffer as I did."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

PROMOTION BY MERIT.

Taxicab Driver Became General In British Army.

In his last despatch, one of the most remarkable historical documents ever published, says the Manchester Guardian, Sir Douglas Haig pays a great tribute to the qualities which won the war for Britain and which, as he indicates, were displayed by men of all ranks of society from the humblest to the highest.

"The life of the British Empire generally," he says, "has proved sound under the severest tests, and while giving men whom it is an honor for any officer to command, has furnished officers of the highest standard from all ranks of society in all quarters of the world.

"Promotion," he continues, "has been entirely by merit, and the highest appointments were open to the humblest, provided he had the necessary qualifications of character, skill and knowledge.

"Many instances could be quoted of men who from civil or comparatively humble occupations have risen to important commands.

"A schoolmaster, a lawyer, a taxicab driver and an ex-sergeant-major have commanded brigades.

"One editor has commanded a division and another held successfully the position of senior staff officer to a regular division.

"The undercook of a Cambridge college, a clerk to the Metropolitan Water Board, an insurance clerk, an architect's assistant and a police inspector became efficient general staff officers.

"A mess sergeant, a railway signaller, a coal miner, a market gardener, an assistant secretary to a haberdasher's company, a quartermaster sergeant and many private soldiers have risen to command battalions.

"Clerks have commanded batteries.

"A schoolmaster, a collier, the son of a blacksmith, an iron moulder, an instructor in tailoring, an assistant gas engineer, a grocer's assistant, as well as policemen, clerks and privates have commanded companies and acted as adjutants."

These remarkable facts show that no handicaps of birth or social environment can in the end prevent a man going forward and winning promotion, provided he develops those qualities which fit him to control others, to carry out responsible duties, and to fill efficiently positions of authority and command.

At the outset of the war, as Sir Douglas Haig states, our new troops, drawn as they were "from every sphere of life, from every profession, department, and industry of the British Empire, and thrust suddenly into a totally new situation full of unknown difficulties," were placed at a disadvantage "compared with the methodically trained enemy." "This disadvantage, however, was "overcome," and "young officers, whatever their previous education may have been," "learned their duties with enthusiasm and speed," and "accepted their responsibilities unflinchingly."

MOTOR CYCLE RIDERS PRESENT NOVELTY AT POLACK'S BIG SHOWS

Spectators Hold Their Breath While They Race Around Perpendicular Walls

Two of the most famous motorcyclers are in Peterborough this week for the purpose of presenting a novelty in connection with the Polack Brothers, Twenty Big Shows, which are exhibiting all this week at the Exhibition Grounds, playing under the auspices of the Peterborough Agriculture Exhibition Board. These riders are the Barclay Brothers, Don and Bob, and both have had years of experience on many tracks of Canada and the United States.

The Barclays were at the height of the racing careers at the Toronto motordrome, when the saucer was a flourishing speed factory in 1914. This was a quarter mile track and riders from all parts of the world took part in the competitions. The Barclays carried away many honors in Toronto. They have also raced upon the large saucers at Cleveland, New York, Detroit, Chicago, Pittsburg, Buffalo, and Philadelphia. Although they have taken thousands of chances in many races, neither one has been seriously injured during the many years of the "Splinter Sport." The Barclays became well known around Toronto, and their presence here is arousing wide interest.

For the past three years they have been performing on the very small bowls, on which they race with fast motorcycle of standard make. The bowl which they use now is the very latest word in construction, in that the sides are exactly perpendicular and it is only because of the high speed of the machines that they are able to complete the human fly act.

The wall of the "silo" is sixteen feet high, and the riders travel at the rate of a lap in one and three-fifth seconds. The spectators stand around the top ledge to see the sparks fly.

Shall We Humanise Women?

An eloquent lady, one of the leaders of the feminist movement, asked in thrilling tones the other day whether we were not all interested in the great cause of the humanization of women. "To which," says G. K. Chesterton in the New Witness of London, England, "the answer is that we are not; and it is possible that we preserve an equally detached attitude toward the doggifying of dogs, the elephantification of elephants, the gilding of gold, the painting of lilies, the transport of coals to Newcastle, and of water to the sea.

"Some of us have fancied that we would trace, even in the twilight time before the war, hints of something strangely human in the female appearance; an almost human look in the eyes, such as is so pathetic in the dog, or that almost automatic mimicry in the gestures which is so entertaining in the monkey. To these the humanization of women will come with less of a shock than it does to leaders of the woman's movement; especially the lady who dignified and glorified her sex by the remarkable phrase I have quoted.

"But without going all lengths with that lady, I should be prepared to propose a compromise; in the form of a prayer for the humanization of some women. It is especially, of course, the health visitors and baby welfare workers now being discussed in a correspondence in the New Statesman, whom I should like to see restored to the human shape. We do not merely urge the health visitor to pray heaven for a human shape. We urge her, with yet more earnest gesture of entreaty, to pray heaven for a human shape."

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Aeroplane "Loops."

The first person ever to "loop the loop" in an aeroplane was M. A. Pegoud, in May, 1913. The first woman to "loop the loop" was Miss Davies, but she was a passenger. The first woman to "loop the loop" alone was Miss Katherine Stinson. Probably the record for "looping the loop"—although unofficial—is that listed as performed by a Russian who is said to have made forty-six loops continuously.

MARK TWAIN'S HOME.

Its Charm and Hospitality and the Motto It Lived Up To.

Many frequenters have tried to express the charm of Mark Twain's household. Few have succeeded, for it lay not in the house itself nor in its furnishings, beautiful as these things were, but in the personality of its occupants, the daily round of their lives, the atmosphere which they unconsciously created. From its wide entrance hall and tiny jewel-like conservatory below to the billiard room at the top of the house it seemed perfectly appointed, serenely ordered and full of welcome.

The home of one of the most unusual and unaccountable personalities in the world was filled with gentleness and peace. It was Mrs. Clemens who was chiefly responsible. She was no longer the half timid, inexperienced girl he had married. Association, study and travel had brought her knowledge and confidence. When the great ones of the world came to visit America's most picturesque literary figure, she gave welcome to them and filled her place at his side with such sweet grace that those who came to pay their duties to him often returned to pay still greater devotion to his companion.

William Dean Howells, so often a visitor there, once said to the writer: "Words cannot express Mrs. Clemens—her fineness, her delicate, wonderful tact." And again, "She was not only a beautiful soul, but a woman of singular intellectual power."

There were always visitors in the Clemens home. Above the mantel in the library was written, "The ornament of a house is the friends that frequent it," and the Clemens home never lacked of these ornaments, and they were of the world's best. No distinguished person came to America that did not pay a visit to Hartford and Mark Twain. Generally it was not merely a call, but a stay of days. The welcome was always genuine, the entertainment unstinted. Albert Bigelow Paine in St. Nicholas.

The "S O S" Call.

The original wireless signal of distress at sea, "C Q D," was adapted from the old "all stations" or general call of line telegraphy. But at the first international wireless congress it was suggested and approved that a better call was "S O S," which, by its arrangement of dots and dashes, is different from any other call.

"S O S" has no special meaning. It is not intended to express "Save our souls" or anything else equally dramatic. This call is an international one and has the same meaning in all languages.

SHAKESPEARE'S WORKS.

The Precious First Edition Quartos Are Now Next to Priceless.

Few literary prophecies have been so strikingly fulfilled as that of the "never writer" who in the preface which followed the revised title of the first edition of "Troilus and Cressida" (1609) predicted of Shakespeare that "when he is gone and his commodities out of sale you will scramble for them and set up a new English inquisition."

The number of first editions in quarto of Shakespeare's plays now known to exist is 144, with two fragments, of which eighty are in public ownership and sixty-four in private ownership. These volumes are worth not merely their weight in gold, but their weight in banknotes of high denominations. They represent sixteen different plays, two of them having double texts, making an average of eight copies of each, and those which were most popular having already been pirated—"Romeo and Juliet," the first "Hamlet," "Henry V." and the "Merry Wives"—muster only seventeen copies among them.

The authors of "A Census of Shakespeare's Plays in Quarto, 1594-1709" (Yale University Press), Henrietta Bartlett and Alfred Pollard, estimate that most of Shakespeare's plays printed in quarto received editions of 1,200 copies each. The wear and tear of the centuries has thus disposed of many thousands of these priceless books. The total is much larger if we add the quartos which appeared after the first editions, but before the "authorized" folio editions of 1623, issued by Shakespeare's colleagues of the theater. The survivals alone of these intermediate quartos number 301 copies, of which 144 are in public and 157 in private ownership.

Lake of Sulphate.

A lake near Biggar, Saskatchewan, and about three hundred miles northwest of Regina, has been found to be saturated with sodium sulphate, and the deposit under the lake and alongside the edge to be nearly 97 per cent pure sulphate. The mineral is used extensively in the manufacture of sulphuric acid, in photography and other industrial purposes. The lake occupies an area of about two hundred acres. The edge is muddy, but on boring down a solid bed of mirabilite crystals is found.

Replacing Knocked Out Teeth.

Teeth that are knocked out in boxing, football or by falling against something, need not be thrown away. A good surgeon or dentist will clean them and the cavity, replace them, perhaps put a stitch in the gum, perhaps put a pad to bite on for about forty-eight hours, during which you will have to live on a fluid diet, and then gradually restore solid food. Before many weeks you will be able to bite apples or tackle hard crusts.

Naval Officer As C.P.O.S. Manager

Commander Thomas Fisher, R.N., General Manager of Atlantic Lines, C. P. O. S.

A particularly interesting naval career lies behind Commander Thomas Fisher, who has just taken up his new appointment in London as General Manager of the Atlantic Lines of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services Ltd. The very broad field of valuable national work in naval, shipping and diplomatic circles during the war covered by Commander Fisher specially fit him for the onerous duties of directing one of the greatest passenger and mercantile fleets in the world.

Commander Fisher was born in Birmingham in 1883, and underwent his naval training at Dartmouth on the old wooden battleship "Britannia." He spent four years in China during the period of the Boxer Rebellion, and then having passed all his examinations with flying colours, he received very rapid promotion, and at the age of twenty was made a Lieutenant. He served for some years in the Mediterranean on H.M.S. Bacchante, flying the flag of the late Admiral Sir Baldwin Walker, Bart, and later on the same ship under Admiral Sir Henry Jackson, the late First Sea Lord. After having qualified as a gunnery specialist Commander Fisher served for a short time on the staff of the Director of Target Practice. Later he joined H.M.S. Bellerophon as Gunnery Officer and when in 1912 Mr. Winston Churchill introduced staff training into the Navy Commander Fisher was one of the first batch of officers to take the Staff course, ultimately being selected to remain on as a lecturer at the Naval College at Portsmouth. When war broke out he went to sea with Admiral Sir Alexander Bethel, the then president of the War College, as Flag Commander in the Reserve Fleet. He was associated here with the important work of safeguarding the passage of the Expeditionary Force to France, and was present at the landing of a small force of Royal Marines at Ostend in September, 1914. With the termination of this work in the winter of 1914 he joined the Trade Division of the Naval War Staff at the Admiralty and was there in charge of that part of the organization set up to deal with questions relating to neutral shipping. These were the early days of the blockade and neutral steamers were doing their best to evade the Naval Patrols and carry supplies to Germany via neutral ports. Commander Fisher took a prominent part in devising and carrying out the system of supervising the movements and cargoes, etc., to neutral vessels by means of control over their supplies of bunker coal at ports at home and abroad. This system when in full working order materially lightened the arduous task of the cruisers employed on blockade duty because it was one of the conditions that all ships bound to or from countries adjacent to Germany should call voluntarily for examination at a British port.

Commander Fisher's services in this matter have recently been recognised by the award of a C.B.E.

In 1916 he was employed as technical representative in the various negotiations for the use of neutral shipping by the Allies. This work was of vital importance to France and Italy and indirectly to this country also, in maintaining supplies during the most difficult part of the war. Incidentally, Commander Fisher gathered a valuable knowledge of the shipping interests of Europe.

During this period Commander Fisher served on various Government Committees dealing with commercial and shipping matters, including amongst others the Coal Exports Committee presided over by Sir Douglas Owen and the Board of Trade Committee for the Conservation of Coal, presided over by Sir William Marwood. It is not without interest that the latter Committee on a motion by Commander Fisher supported by Sir Richard Redmayne passed a resolution which ultimately led to the introduction of the Daylight Saving Bill by the then Home Secretary Mr. Herbert Samuel.

In the summer of 1917, soon after the United States came into the war a liaison officer was appointed to link the British Ministry of Shipping with the American shipping board. Sir Thomas Royden was first chosen for this important post and he was followed by Commander Fisher who filled this difficult and responsible position with marked success.

In America Commander Fisher had an opportunity of examining at first hand the shipping and transport problems of the States and Canada and in connection with his duties he visited all the principal ports on the Atlantic seaboard, including the Canadian ports of Montreal, Quebec and Halifax.

Other C.P.O.S. Officials.

Following the appointment of Commander Fisher, R.N., as General Manager of Atlantic Lines, with Head Office at 8 Waterloo Place, London, it is now announced that the other principal officials of the Company in Europe, some of whose appointments have already been intimated, are as follows:

Mr. J. A. Martin, Manager, Royal Liver Building, Liverpool.

FARMER MOORE HAS GAINED 37 POUNDS

ALL TROUBLES OVERCOME BY TAKING TANLAC—HAD SUFFERED EIGHT YEARS.

"I suffered for eight long years before I found a medicine that would do me any good, but since taking Tanlac I have gained exactly thirty-seven pounds, and all my troubles have been completely overcome," said John H. Moore, a well-known and prosperous farmer who lives on R.F.D., No. 4, Empire Ill., while in Shorthouse's drug store in Bloomington the other day.

When I commenced taking Tanlac," he continued, "I had reached the point where I couldn't do any work at all, and was forced to hire a hand to take my place on the farm. I had suffered so much and so long with stomach trouble, I was just about down and out so far as health and strength was concerned. During all these years my appetite was very poor, and what little I did eat would cause me worlds of suffering. Gas would form on my stomach so bad that I could hardly get my breath, and I would have the worst sort of cramping spells. I finally got to where I was hardly ever able to retain what I ate, and would actually get nauseated every time I looked at anything to eat. I had fallen off so much, and was so low in health that all my friends were talking about the awful condition I was in. I was very nervous all the time and never knew what a good night's sleep was.

"I heard about Tanlac then, and I thought I would give it a trial. Well, sir, my friends and neighbors are talking differently now. They are asking me what in the world have I been taking to make such a big improvement in my condition, and it just does my heart good to tell them that Tanlac did it. It is wonderful the way I have gained in weight and strength. I can go to the field now and do as much hard work as any hand on the farm. My stomach seems to be in perfect condition, and I never have indigestion and am not bothered with gas forming after meals. I have the best appetite I ever had in my life, and can eat just anything I want. I am free from all that nervousness, too, and I sleep just like a fly every night. Tanlac has done all that for me, and I'm as well and hearty now as I ever was in my life, and as long as I live, I will pass the good work along to others who suffer as I did."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

PROMOTION BY MERIT.

Taxicab Driver Became General In British Army.

In his last despatch—one of the most remarkable historical documents ever published, says the Manchester Guardian, Sir Douglas Haig pays a great tribute to the qualities which won the war for Britain and which, as he indicates, were displayed by men of all ranks of society from the humblest to the highest.

"The life of the British Empire generally," he says, "has proved sound under the severest tests, and while giving men whom it is an honor for any officer to command, has furnished officers of the highest standard from all ranks of society and all quarters of the world."

"Promotion," he continues, "has been entirely by merit, and the highest appointments were open to the humblest, provided he had the necessary qualifications of character, skill and knowledge.

"Many instances could be quoted of men who from civil or comparatively humble occupations have risen to important commands.

"A schoolmaster, a lawyer, a taxicab driver and an ex-sergeant-major have commanded brigades.

"One editor has commanded a division and another held successfully the position of senior staff officer to a regular division.

"The undercook of a Cambridge college, a clerk to the Metropolitan Water Board, an insurance clerk, an architect's assistant and a police inspector became efficient general staff officers.

"A mess sergeant, a railway signaller, a coal miner, a market gardener, an assistant secretary to a haberdasher's company, a quartermaster sergeant and many private soldiers have risen to command battalions.

"Clerks have commanded batteries.

"A schoolmaster, a collier, the son of a blacksmith, an iron moulder, an instructor in tailoring, an assistant gas engineer, a grocer's assistant, as well as policemen, clerks and privates have commanded companies and acted as adjutants."

These remarkable facts show that no handicaps of birth or social environment can in the end prevent a man going forward and winning promotion, provided he develops those qualities which fit him to control others, to carry out responsible duties, and to fill efficiently positions of authority and command.

At the outset of the war, as Sir Douglas Haig states, our new troops, drawn as they were "from every sphere of life, from every profession, department, and industry of the British Empire, and thrust suddenly into a totally new situation full of unknown difficulties," were placed at a disadvantage "compared with the methodically trained enemy." "This disadvantage, however, was 'overcome,'" and "young officers, whatever their previous education may have been," "learned their duties with enthusiasm and speed," and "accepted their responsibilities unflinchingly."

MOTOR CYCLE RIDERS PRESENT NOVELTY AT POLACK'S BIG SHOWS

Two of the most famous motorcyclers are in Peterborough this week for the purpose of presenting a novelty in connection with the Polack Brothers, Twenty Big Shows, which are exhibiting all this week at the Exhibition Grounds, playing under the auspices of the Peterborough Agriculture Exhibition Board. These riders are the Barclay Brothers, Don and Bob, and both have had years of experience on many tracks of Canada and the United States.

The Barclays were at the height of the racing careers at the Toronto motordrome, when the saucer was a flourishing speed factory in 1914. This was a quarter mile track and riders from all parts of the world took part in the competitions. The Barclays carried away many honors in Toronto. They have also raced upon the large saucers at Cleveland, New York, Detroit, Chicago, Pittsburg, Buffalo, and Philadelphia. Although they have taken thousands of chances in many races, neither one has been seriously injured during the many years of the "Splinter Sport." The Barclays became well known around Toronto, and their presence here is arousing wide interest.

For the past three years they have been performing on the very small bowls, on which they race with fast motorcycle of standard make. The bowl which they use now is the very latest word in construction, in that the sides are exactly perpendicular and it is only because of the high speed of the machines that they are able to complete the human fly act.

The wall of the "silo" is sixteen feet high, and the riders travel at the rate of a lap in one and three-fifth seconds. The spectators stand around the top ledge to see the sparks fly.

Shall We Humanize Women?

An eloquent lady, one of the leaders of the feminist movement, asked in thrilling tones the other day whether we were not all interested in the great cause of the humanization of women. "To which," says G. K. Chesterton in the New Witness of London, England, "the answer is that we are not; and it is possible that we preserve an equally detached attitude toward the doggifying of dogs, the elephantification of elephants, the gilding of gold, the painting of lilies, the transport of coals to Newcastle, and of water to the sea.

"Some of us have fancied that we would trace, even in the twilight time before the war, hints of something strangely human in the female appearance; an almost human look in the eyes, such as is so pathetic in the dog, or that almost automatic mimicry in the gestures which is so entertaining in the monkey. To these the humanization of women will come with less of a shock than it does to leaders of the woman's movement; especially the lady who dignified and glorified her sex by the remarkable phrase I have quoted.

"But without going all lengths with that lady, I should be prepared to propose a compromise, in the form of a prayer for the humanization of some women. It is, especially, of course, the health visitors and baby welfare workers now being discussed in a correspondence in the New Statesman, whom I should like to see restored to the human shape. We do not merely urge the health visitor to pray heaven for a human heart. We urge her, with yet more earnest gesture of entreaty, to pray heaven for a human head."

Astonished Daddy

June is having some difficulty in settling upon the proper title for her father. The other day she was playing with one of his collars when she tore it. Just then she heard him coming upstairs, and rushing to the top step called in distressful tones: "Oh, daddy, I has tore my hubbie's collar!"

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Aeroplane "Loops

The first person ever to "loop the loop" in an aeroplane was M. Pegoud, in May, 1913. The first woman to "loop the loop" was Miss Davies, but she was a passenger. The first woman to "loop the loop" alone was Miss Katherine Stinson. Probably the record for "looping the loop"—although unofficial—is that listed as performed by a Russian who is said to have made forty-six loops continuously.

MARK TWAIN'S HOME.

Its Charm and Hospitality and the Motto It Lived Up To.

Many frequenters have tried to express the charm of Mark Twain's household. Few have succeeded, for it lay not in the house itself nor in its furnishings, beautiful as these things were, but in the personality of its occupants, the daily round of their lives, the atmosphere which they unconsciously created. From its wide entrance hall and tiny jewel-like conservatory below to the billiard room at the top of the house it seemed perfectly appointed, serenely ordered and full of welcome.

The home of one of the most unusual and unaccountable personalities in the world was filled with gentleness and peace. It was Mrs. Clemens who was chiefly responsible. She was no longer the half timid, inexperienced girl he had married. Association, study and travel had brought her knowledge and confidence. When the great ones of the world came to visit America's most picturesque literary figure, she gave welcome to them and filled her place at his side with such sweet grace that those who came to pay their duties to him often returned to pay still greater devotion to his companion.

William Dean Howells, so often a visitor there, once said to the writer: "Words cannot express Mrs. Clemens—her fineness, her delicate, wonderful tact." And again, "She was not only a beautiful soul, but a woman of singular intellectual power."

There were always visitors in the Clemens home. Above the mantel in the library was written, "The ornament of a house is the friends that frequent it," and the Clemens home never lacked of these ornaments, and they were of the world's best. No distinguished person came to America that did not pay a visit to Hartford and Mark Twain. Generally it was not merely a call, but a stay of days. The welcome was always genuine, the entertainment unstinted. Albert Bigelow Paine in St. Nicholas.

The "S O S" Call.

The original wireless signal of distress at sea, "C Q D," was adapted from the old "all stations" or general call of line telegraphy. But at the first international wireless congress it was suggested and approved that a better call was "S O S," which, by its arrangement of dots and dashes, is different from any other call.

"S O S" has no special meaning. It is not intended to express "Save our souls" or anything else equally dramatic. This call is an international one and has the same meaning in all languages.

SHAKESPEARE'S WORKS.

The Precious First Edition Quartos Are Now Next to Priceless.

Few literary prophecies have been so strikingly fulfilled as that of the "never writer" who in the preface which followed the revised title of the first edition of "Troilus and Cressida" (1609) predicted of Shakespeare that "when he is gone and his commodies out of sale you will scramble for them and set up a new English Inquisition."

The number of first editions in quarto of Shakespeare's plays now known to exist is 144, with two fragments, of which eighty are in public ownership and sixty-four in private ownership. These volumes are worth not merely their weight in gold, but their weight in banknotes of high denominations. They represent sixteen different plays, two of them having double texts, making an average of eight copies of each, and those which were most popular having already been pirated—"Romeo and Juliet," the first "Hamlet," "Henry V." and the "Merry Wives"—muster only seventeen copies among them.

The authors of "A Census of Shakespeare's Plays in Quarto, 1594-1709" (Yale University Press), Henrietta Bartlett and Alfred Pollard, estimate that most of Shakespeare's plays printed in quarto received editions of 1,200 copies each. The wear and tear of the centuries has thus disposed of many thousands of these priceless books. The total is much larger if we add the quartos which appeared after the first editions, but before the "authorized" folio editions of 1623, issued by Shakespeare's colleagues of the theater. The survivals alone of these intermediate quartos number 301 copies, of which 144 are in public and 157 in private ownership.

Lake of Sulphate.

A lake near Biggar, Saskatchewan, and about three hundred miles northwest of Regina, has been found to be saturated with sodium sulphate, and the deposit under the lake and alongside the edge to be nearly 97 per cent pure sulphate. The mineral is used extensively in the manufacture of sulphuric acid, in photography and other industrial purposes. The lake occupies an area of about two hundred acres. The edge is muddy, but on boring down a solid bed of mirabilite crystals is found.

Replacing Knocked Out Teeth.

Teeth that are knocked out in boxing, football or by falling against something, need not be thrown away. A good surgeon or dentist will clean them and the cavity, replace them, perhaps put a stitch in the gum, perhaps put a pad to bite on for about forty-eight hours, during which you will have to live on a fluid diet, and then gradually restore solid food. Before many weeks you will be able to bite apples and tackle hard crusts.

Commander Thomas Fisher, R.N., General Manager of Atlantic Lines, C. P. O. S.

A particularly interesting naval career lies behind Commander Thomas Fisher, who has just taken up his new appointment in London as General Manager of the Atlantic Lines of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services Ltd. The very broad field of valuable national work in naval, shipping and diplomatic circles, during the war covered by Commander Fisher specially fit him for the onerous duties of directing one of the greatest passenger and mercantile fleets in the world.

Commander Fisher was born in Birmingham in 1883, and underwent his naval training at Dartmouth on the old wooden battleship "Britannia." He spent four years in China during the period of the Boxer Rebellion, and then having passed all his examinations with flying colours, he received very rapid promotion, and at the age of twenty was made a Lieutenant. He served for some years in the Mediterranean on H.M.S. Bacchante, flying the flag of the late Admiral Sir Baldwin Walker, Bart, and later on the same ship under Admiral Sir Henry Jackson, the late First Sea Lord. After having qualified as a gunnery specialist Commander Fisher served for a short time on the staff of the Director of Target Practice. Later he joined H.M.S. Bellerophon as Gunnery Officer and when in 1912 Mr. Winston Churchill introduced staff training into the Navy Commander Fisher was one of the first batch of officers to take the Staff course, ultimately being selected to remain on as a lecturer at the Naval College at Portsmouth. When war broke out he went to sea with Admiral Sir Alexander Bethel, the then president of the War College, as Flag Commander in the Reserve Fleet. He was associated here with the important work of safeguarding the passage of the Expeditionary Force to France, and was present at the landing of a small force of Royal Marines at Ostend in September, 1914. With the termination of this work in the winter of 1914 he joined the Trade Division of the Naval War Staff at the Admiralty and was there in charge of that part of the organization set up to deal with questions relating to neutral shipping. These were the early days of the blockade and neutral steamers were doing their best to evade the Naval Patrols and carry supplies to Germany via neutral ports. Commander Fisher took a prominent part in devising and carrying out the system of supervising the movements and cargoes, etc., to neutral vessels by means of control over their supplies of bunker coal at ports at home and abroad. This system when in full working order materially lightened the arduous task of the cruisers employed on blockade duty because it was one of the conditions that all ships bound to or from countries adjacent to Germany should call voluntarily for examination at a British port.

Commander Fisher's services in this matter have recently been recognised by the award of a C.B.E.

In 1916 he was employed as technical representative in the various negotiations for the use of neutral shipping by the Allies. This work was of vital importance to France and Italy and indirectly to this country also, in maintaining supplies during the most difficult part of the war. Incidentally, Commander Fisher gathered a valuable knowledge of the shipping interests of Europe.

During this period Commander Fisher served on various Government Committees dealing with commercial and shipping matters, including amongst others the Coal Exports Committee presided over by Sir Douglas Owen and the Board of Trade Committee for the Conservation of Coal, presided over by Sir William Marwood. It is not without interest that the latter Committee on a motion by Commander Fisher supported by Sir Richard Redmayne, passed a resolution which ultimately led to the introduction of the Daylight Saving Bill by the then Home Secretary, Mr. Herbert Samuel.

In the summer of 1917, soon after the United States came into the war a liaison officer was appointed to link the British Ministry of shipping with the American shipping board. Sir Thomas Royden was first chosen for this important post and he was followed by Commander Fisher who filled this difficult and responsible position with marked success.

In America Commander Fisher had an opportunity of examining at first hand the shipping and transport problems of the States and Canada and in connection with his duties he visited all the principal ports on the Atlantic seaboard, including the Canadian ports of Montreal, Quebec and Halifax.
